Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, when he expects the Arts Council of England to announce its grant decisions under the Arts for Everyone main programme; how many applications for awards under this scheme have been received; what is the total amount requested; and what estimate he has made of the size of the awards which will be issued under this programme. [7875]

Mr. Fisher: The Arts for Everyone main scheme invites applications from established organisations for between £500 and £500,000 for new arts activities. There have been two rounds this year. 1,000 applications were received for the first round (closing date 31 March 1997), totalling some £150 million. Funding decisions will be made by the Arts Council of England in August 1997, with a planned public announcement of awards in the middle of September.

The second round (closing date 30 June 1997) received 700 applications seeking some £70 million. Funding decisions will be made by the Arts Council of England in November 1997.

I understand that the Arts Council consider there to have been good quality applications across the whole spectrum of artforms and types of organisation, and that the Council anticipates that grants will range in size from £1,000 to £500,000. Given the level of applications received however, the Council does not anticipate being able to meet all applications in this round.

Millennium Commission

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the names, designations and salaries of the Members of the Board of the Millennium Commission. [6127]

Mr. Chris Smith [pursuant to his reply, 3 July 1997, c. 228]: The table of Millennium Commissioners contained an error, the correct information is as follows:

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Secondary Schools (East Sussex)

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average number of children in secondary school classes in East Sussex. [6983]

Mr. Byers: In January 1997 (provisional estimate), the average class size was 21.4 in one teacher classes in maintained secondary schools in the East Sussex Local Education Authority area.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his plans to change the status of grant-maintained schools; and when he expects to implement such plans. [7479]

Mr. Byers: The White Paper "Excellence in Schools" sets out our plans for introducing a new framework of community, aided and foundation schools. The new framework will incorporate all LEA and grant-maintained schools. We intend to introduce legislation to implement these plans in the Autumn.

Child Care

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has for the long-term funding of the trained child-carers taken on under the new deal for the unemployed. [8035]

Mr. Andrew Smith: We are committed to the production of a national childcare strategy, which will plan provision to match the requirements of the modern labour market and help parents, especially women, to balance family and working life. We are currently considering the content of such a strategy, and will make an announcement in due course.

Young unemployed people will be offered the opportunity to obtain training and work experience in childcare as part of the New Deal programme. We hope this will create a larger skilled workforce in childcare, which will help to improve the overall position on childcare provision.

New Deal

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of the New Deal's first year budget has been allocated to the provision of roadshows and regional conferences. [8204]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Some preliminary work has been undertaken to organise and deliver regional events.

It is not possible yet to say what proportion of the first year's budget is to be allocated to these events as the total budget for the delivery of the New Deal is still to be allocated.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total in direct payments each person will receive over their six month period on the New Deal under each of the options. [8211]

Mr. Smith: Under the option of a job with an employer, young people will be paid the wage offered by their employers for the jobs they are doing. Young people who take up a job with a voluntary sector employer or in our Environment Taskforce will receive an allowance equivalent to benefit and will remain entitled to passported benefits: in addition, they will receive a grant of up to £400 paid in instalments. Those young people who take up the option of full-time education and training for up to twelve months will also receive an allowance equivalent to benefit and remain entitled to passported benefits: they will also have access to a discretionary grant to help with travel and other costs.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the estimated annual budget of the Advisory Task Force in the New Deal. [8206]

Mr. Smith: Members of the New Deal Advisory Task Force will be unpaid and will be supported by a small secretariat. The Task Force will be given the resources it needs to carry out the important role assigned to it in the Government's proposals for young and long-term unemployed people. It is not yet possible to estimate the annual budget.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) when the Government plans to extend the welfare to work assistance offered to the young and long-term unemployed and lone parents to those on incapacity benefit; [8034]

(2) what assistance whilst training and working will be given to those on incapacity benefit under the Government's New Deal proposals for the unemployed. [8036]

Mr. Smith: The Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in his budget speech on 2 July that the Government was to set aside an additional £195 million to help those who are disabled or on Incapacity Benefit who want training or work and for other measures.

As on Welfare to Work and the New Deal generally, the Departments for Education and Employment and Social Security will work closely together, to ensure this money is used effectively to encourage and enable disadvantaged disabled people to access new training and work opportunities.

We will make an announcement about the type of assistance to be provided as soon as possible.

Pupils (Bus Safety)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which laws govern the transporting of school pupils in a hired bus or coach. [7850]

Ms Estelle Morris: The main legislation in England governing the transport of school pupils in a hired bus or coach is:

Transport

the Public Passenger Vehicles Act 1981 (as amended by the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994), the Transport Act 1985, the Road Traffic Act 1988, and regulations made under those Acts;

Health and Safety

the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 and the Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1992;

Home to School Transport

the Education Act 1996 (section 509).

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment who is legally responsible for the safety of pupils carried on a bus or coach hired by a school. [8037]

Ms Morris: Schools and LEAs in England are responsible for ensuring that they use an appropriate bus or coach company. Operators of public service vehicles are legally responsible for ensuring passenger safety.

Departmental Budgets

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what new plans he has to introduce cuts and savings in his Department as a result of the effect on his Department as a result of the effect on his Department's budgets for 1997–98 and 1988–99 of the upward revisions to the GDP deflators in the Budget on 2 July; and if he will make a statement. [8294]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 14 July 1997]: Along with all other Departments, my Department is reallocating spending within the Departmental ceiling as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if, following the recent Budget, he will give his estimate of the total real level of his Department's budget, in 1995–96 prices, in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99; if he will estimate what such figures were for (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1998–99 following the November 1996 Budget on the basis of the estimates of the GDP deflator contained in that Budget; and if he will make a statement. [8293]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The figures requested for my Department's spending plans within the Control Total are as follows: £13,141 million, £12,854 million, £13,343 million and £13,141 million.

In addition my Department will benefit from part of the Welfare to Work expenditure and the New Deal for Schools, which are outside the Control Total, and which were announced in the Budget.

Dearing Review

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects to issue the Government's response to the Dearing review of higher education. [8704]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend expects to make an initial statement when the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education under Sir Ron Dearing reports very shortly. This will be followed by a fuller policy statement later in the year.

Students

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students there are in each institution funded by the Higher Education Funding Council on courses designated as (a) fee band 1, (b) fee band 2 and (c) fee band 3. [8594]

Dr. Howells: The information is set out in the following table.

Student Governors

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to change the arrangements concerning the numbers of student governors in institutions of further and higher education. [8792]

Dr. Howells: In respect of further education, governing bodies may include a student governor and we have no plans to end that arrangement.

We shall be considering what the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education has to say about student membership of institutions' governing bodies in its report which is expected shortly.

Education Funding

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much is currently spent by his Department (a) by proportion of national income, (b) by proportion of total education spending, (c) by proportion of Government spending and (d) in cash terms on (1) higher education, (2) pre-school education and (3) primary education. [8700]

Mr. Byers: The figures requested are as follows and are estimated outturn for 1996–97, the latest year for which such figures are available:

(a) 2.0 per cent. (Source: FSBR 97 and PESA 97)

(b) 30.0 per cent. (Source: PESA 97)

(c) 5.0 per cent. (Source: PESA 97)

(d) (1) Expenditure on HE and student support: £6,343 million. (Source: DfEE Departmental Report 1997)

(2) Pre-school education expenditure in 1996–97 was £25.5 million which covered expenditure on the pilot schemes for nursery vouchers. (Source: DfEE Departmental Report 1997).

(3) It is not possible to separate central Government expenditure between primary and secondary schools. However, in addition to central Government expenditure local education authorities spent some £18.4 billion on recurrent education expenditure in 1996–97, of which expenditure on under 5s accounted for £1.4 billion and expenditure on primary schools accounted for £5.7 billion. (Source: DfEE Departmental Report 1997).

Disabilities

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what decision he has made on the future of the National Advisory Council on Employment of People with Disabilities; and if he will make a statement. [9138]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Government is committed to introducing comprehensive and enforceable civil rights for disabled people against discrimination. Employment and training issues will form an important part of this. The National Advisory Council on Employment of People with Disabilities (NACEPD) has provided advice on matters concerning the employment and training of disabled people for a number of years and I want it to continue to do so whilst the Government develops its proposals for the future. I have, therefore, extended to 31 March 1998 NACEPD's term of office and am pleased that most members have been able to accept the extension of their appointments.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Water Companies

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what actions are being taken by the water companies and by the Government on the 10-point plan he announced at the recent water summit. [7543]

Mr. Prescott: Each water company has now responded in a generally positive and constructive way to our proposals for action. I have today placed copies of each company's response in the Libraries of the House, together with a short analysis of them prepared by my Department.

All water companies will now provide free supply pipe leakage detection and repair services to their household customers. Eight of the smaller companies have told me that they will limit the number of free repairs to any one service pipe. Two other of the smaller companies have decided to replace leaking supply pipes free of charge.

All companies are taking action to promote water efficiency. All tell me that they are making significant efforts in the provision of water saving devices. Most are actively distributing devices to reduce toilet flush volumes or else are making them available free on request. A very few companies have decided to conduct trials before committing themselves to widespread promotion; they should take very careful note of what the majority of companies have done and are doing. Most water companies already offer free water efficiency audits to household customers. The remainder are developing or evaluating the service they intend to offer and I want them to go firm very soon. All water companies confirmed that they have in place a wide variety of measures to encourage water efficient gardening. All companies see clear roles for the Environmental Task Force in promoting water efficiency.

In addition to the 14 companies which had already done so, eight companies have indicated to me that they are now prepared to conclude formal arrangements with the Director General of Water Services in respect of their compensation schemes for drought-related supply interruptions. I want to see these eight licence amendments made by October. I also want the six other companies which indicated that they are minded to accept licence amendments to resolve their reservations with the Director General and to have the amendment process agreed by the same time. That also applies to the one company which still declares itself unable to accept licence amendment. All companies have expressed a willingness to consider compensation payments if they have to issue advice to boil or refrain from using mains water for reasons within their control.

Those companies which have not already done so are now moving to agree with the Environment Agency a publicly-available drought contingency plan. I am pleased that the industry is united in taking this action in advance of our bringing forward legislation to make it a statutory requirement when Parliamentary time allows.

We asked companies to do more to explain to their customers their water supply performance targets and how well they are being met. Altogether, I believe that companies are taking appropriate action. But none should rest contented with their efforts.

I shall be looking for sustained commitment to all of these actions. So I shall be writing to all companies again in November, asking for an update on the various activities and initiatives they have described to me.

We have kept to our part of the plan. At its head was tough action by the Director General of Water Services on leakage. He wrote to all water companies on 22 May, setting out the process by which he will establish mandatory targets.

We said that we would make new water regulations which would include significantly tighter requirements for water efficiency. The proposed recommendations of the Government's Water Regulations Advisory Committee were published for consultation on 19 June. We also announced that we would be conducting two reviews. My right hon. Friend Michael Meacher announced on 25 June the launch of a review of the water charging system in England and Wales.

Today, we are launching the review of the water abstraction licensing system in England and Wales. A key aim will be to ensure that abstraction licensing and related processes provide full protection for the environment while enabling fair and flexible arrangements for meeting properly-managed demand for water resources. This review will be conducted jointly by my Department and the Welsh Office, in consultation with the Environment Agency and the Office of Water Services. My Department will be writing today to interested organisations, inviting their representations on a wide range of issues associated with water abstraction. A copy of this letter has also been placed in the Libraries of the House.

City Diesel

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the potential environmental benefits of City Diesel. [7444]

Angela Eagle: The Government is very interested in the opportunities offered by cleaner fuels, including ultra low sulphur diesels such as "City Diesel", particularly their potential to play a part in the improvement of urban air quality. My Department is currently sponsoring comparative trials of both cleaner conventional fuels and alternative fuels, including natural gas, liquefied petroleum gas and bio-diesel. "City Diesel" is included in the trials, which will provide an indication of both the emissions reduction potential of the fuels and of the practicability, reliability and driveability of vehicles which use them. The results of the trials will be published later this year.

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what occasions, (a) Ministers and (b) officials have refused to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings with hon. Members to discuss matters relating to interests registered by those hon. Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8101]

Angela Eagle: The First Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) made it clear that, when Members are meeting Ministers or others on topics in which they have an interest, the onus is on the Member to declare that interest and not the Minister to know.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department refuse requests from hon. Members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those hon. Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8098]

Angela Eagle: The First Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) restated the requirement to declare any interests, both in the Register of Members' Interests and on other appropriate occasions. Subject to these requirements, and to the rules of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, Members are free to seek meetings with Ministers and officials, who will consider such requests alongside the many other approaches from individuals and organisations concerned to press their own interests or those of others. Their representations are viewed with their declared interests in mind.

Voluntary Sports Clubs

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what Government proposals exist to harmonise rate relief for voluntary sports clubs in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [7990]

Mr. Raynsford: There is no disparity between the rate relief regimes in England and Wales. Non-profit making sports clubs in both countries are eligible for relief at the discretion of their billing authority. If relief is granted, 75 per cent. of the cost is borne by the Exchequer.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the timetable for SRB 4 bids; if he will make a statement on the criteria which will be used; and when the accompanying guidelines will be issued. [7923]

Angela Eagle: My hon. Friend the Minister for the Regions, Regeneration and Planning, in answer to a question from the Member for Scarborough and Whitby (Mr. Quinn) on 7 July 1997 Official Report, column 338, announced the publication of supplementary guidance for Round 4 of the Single Regeneration Budget Challenge Fund. This guidance contains details of both the criteria which will be used to assess proposals and the revised timetable for submitting proposals. Copies of the guidance have been placed in the Library of the House. I have also arranged for my hon. Friend to be sent a copy of this guidance.

Commercial Lobbyists

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have attended meetings with organisations representing (i) commercial and (ii) non-commercial interests organised by commercial lobbying firms; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings; [8100]

(2) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have met commercial lobbyists to discuss matters relating to the business of his Department; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings. [8099]

Angela Eagle: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained in response to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 2 June 1997, Official Report, column 99, Ministers and officials in the Department receive deputations from many groups who are concerned to press their own interests or those of their clients, which Ministers and officials take due care to consider within the wider public interest and Government policy. As it is not practicable to distinguish particular groups such as lobbyists, the Department cannot keep a register of such meetings.

Earth Summit

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Government supports the 1992 Rio Declaration; and if he will make a statement. [8128]

Angela Eagle: At the recent Special Session of the UN General Assembly, which reviewed progress since the Rio Earth Summit, the United Kingdom reaffirmed its commitment to all the agreements reached at Rio, including the Rio Declaration.

Judicial Reviews

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on how many occasions since 1994–95 legislation has been introduced by the Department (a) to remove the effects of judicial review decisions and (b) to implement them. [7846]

Angela Eagle: No legislation has been introduced for either of those purposes since 1994–95 by my Department or by its predecessor Departments.

London Docklands Development Corporation

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the total expenditure by the LDDC from public funds on the preparation of derelict sites to build-ready standard for the private residential developer in the Isle of Dogs area. [8020]

Angela Eagle: Of the sites owned by the London Docklands Development Corporation in the Isle of Dogs area which have a residential use, the Corporation have spent £8.773 million since 1981 on a range of preparation works. Repairs and enhancements to River walls, River walkways and a pier account for just over half of that expenditure. These works have fed through into land values. Actual and forecast receipts from the subsequent sale of the sites to private developers total £19.916 million with the excess of income over expenditure invested by LDDC in regeneration programmes. Additionally, in two instances (Arnhem Wharf and Masthouse Terrace) where LDDC undertook preparation works, 62 per cent. and 49 per cent. respectively of the subsequent residential development has been for social housing; in a third instance (Maconochies Wharf) the development has been a self-build project.

Housing (Urban Sites)

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proportion of new houses he proposes should be built on redeveloped urban sites. [8123]

Mr. Raynsford: The current target is to build half of all new homes on reused sites. The Green Paper on Household Growth last year sought views on an aspirational target of 60 per cent. We are considering all the responses received in helping us decide how the issues surrounding household growth, including this one, should be taken forward.

Policy Planning Guidance

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to review the Policy Planning Guidance Note 17 Sport and Recreation; and if he will make a statement. [7989]

Mr. Raynsford: My officials have received the final report of the research project on The Effectiveness of Planning Policy Guidance on Sport and Recreation last week. My department will now be considering the implications of the report's findings for the future of Planning Policy Guidance Note 17 on Sport and Recreation.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assistance is available to local authorities to clean up contaminated land; and if he will make a statement. [7997]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside (Ms Ellman) on 12 June 1997, Official Report, columns, 519–20.

Hedgerow Protection

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for the review of the new system of hedgerow protection (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8233]

Angela Eagle: The group, which has been set up to review how the Hedgerows Regulations 1997 might be strengthened, is expected to report its recommendations to Government by the end of December 1997. The cost of providing the secretariat to the group is estimated to be of the order of £10,000. It will be met from within existing Departmental resources.

Safer Cities Programme

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for the future of the safer cities programme. [7984]

Angela Eagle: Government funding for the remaining Safer Cities projects will end, as planned, by March 1998. The Safer Cities programme is part of the Single Regeneration Budget (SRB) and new crime prevention and community safety schemes can be included in bids for round 4 of the SRB Challenge Fund. Over 50 per cent. of the schemes successful in the first three rounds of the Challenge. Fund have had crime prevention as an objective. The Government regards crime prevention as a vital issue directly affecting quality of life.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will give for the review in respect of implementing plans for regional development agencies in England (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8256]

Angela Eagle: We have announced that legislation will be introduced in the Autumn to establish regional development agencies in England. On 11 June we began a consultation on the functions and organisation of regional development agencies. The closing date for responses is 5 September 1997. The consultation is being managed by staff in my Department and by the Government Officers in the Regions; the costs are being met from existing budgets.

Incineration Plants

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will make a statement on his policy on the use of incineration plants to change waste into energy; [7614]

(2) if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of the importation of waste for incineration in United Kingdom waste to energy incineration plants. [7615]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The Government believes that the recovery of energy from waste, for example through incineration, can play an important part in sustainable waste management practices, as part of a general effort to move up the hierarchy of waste management options. It should, however, play its part within a wider context in which reduction, re-use and recycling of waste are favoured. It is also essential that both new and existing incinerators meet stringent emissions standards to protect public health and the environment.

On the specific issue of the transfrontier shipment of waste, policy is set out in the United Kingdom Management Plan for Exports and Imports of Waste. Under the Plan, which is legally binding throughout the United Kingdom, imports of waste for genuine recovery operations are allowed, as long as they comply with the technical criteria set out in the Plan, and subject to the controls set out in Council Regulation (EEC) No.259/93 on the supervision and control of shipments of waste within, into and out of the European Community.

In the case of imports to a waste-to-energy incineration plant, the tests set out in the Plan which will be applied by the competent authority in coming to a decision as to whether the import is for genuine recovery or not are as follows:

(a) that the primary purpose of the facility is for the dual function of incinerating waste and generating energy, rather than the disposal of waste;

(b) that the calorific value of the waste input should be at least 11,000kJ/kg, calculated by reference to a representative sample of the waste; and

(c) that the heat generated/energy recovered must be used either by the operator himself or by third parties.

Competent authorities should also have regard to the nature of any contamination of the waste in the light of the guidance in the Plan.

These criteria are intended to limit opportunities for incorporating wastes into fuels without benefit to the calorific value or the burning characteristics of the waste, simply to avoid the costs of disposing of those wastes in the country where they are produced.

Sprinklers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to make compulsory the installation of sprinklers in factories, shops and warehouses; and if he will make a statement. [8510]

Mr. Raynsford: The relevant Statutory Building Regulation Requirement B3(3) states:

To inhibit the spread of fire within the building, it shall be sub-divided with fire resisting construction to an extent appropriate to the size and intended use of the building.

The Department gives guidance on how to comply with the requirement and in multi-storey retail and industrial buildings the guidance suggests that the floor area can be doubled if a sprinkler system is installed. In the case of multi-storey storage buildings the guidance suggests that the cubic capacity of the building can be doubled if a sprinkler system is installed. The Department is considering giving revised guidance on the use of sprinklers in relation to compartment size in single storey buildings.

M3

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the road accident rate for the M3 between junctions 10 and 11 since it was opened. [7822]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Junction 10 to 11 is a relatively new junction on the M3 and only 2 years of accident data are available 1995–1996 with 1 and 6 accidents respectively). For small areas or short road lengths, longer time periods are required to ensure a robust estimate. Personal injury road accident data are published in 'Road Accidents Great Britain—The Casualty Report'. Data for 1996 are due to be published in August 1997 and a copy will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Traffic estimates (the other component of accident rates) have not yet been robustly estimated for this junction.

Roads (PFI)

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review the use of the Private Finance Initiative to build public roads. [7876]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government has conducted a review of PFI and we are taking measures to reinvigorate it. Private financing has been shown to offer value for money in the procurement of DBFO projects. Value for money would be critical to our consideration of any future projects taken forward under private financing arrangements.

Roads Programme

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will give for the strategic review of the trunk roads programme (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review; [8253]

(2) if he will give for the review of roads (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8254]

Ms. Glenda Jackson: We have said that we will announce decisions on the accelerated part of the review this month and the conclusions of the main review next Spring. The review is being conducted by officials within their normal duties. We intend to meet costs from planned Departmental Running Costs.

Franchising Director

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to publish his Department's review into the Rail Franchising Director's Objectives, Instructions and Guidance; and if he will make a statement. [8538]

Ms. Glenda Jackson: The Government is currently reviewing the Franchising Director's Objectives, Instructions and Guidance and will make an announcement in due course.

British Railways Board

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list (a) the current acreage of land owned by the British Railways Board and (b) its current value. [8519]

Ms Glenda Jackson: At the beginning of this financial year the Board held some 906,000 square feet of freehold office accommodation. Total acreage of land is not readily available. The book value of the freehold properties held by the Board at that date was £155.62 million.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each of the last three years the land disposed of by the British Railways Board, indicating the acreage involved and its value. [8520]

Ms Jackson: Several hundred freehold properties have been sold by the British Railways Board each year over the past three years. Total acreage and square footage is not readily available. Gross sales proceeds have been:

1994–95: £37.92 million

1995–96: £50.80 million

1996–97: £65.60 million

Rail Safety (Educational Visits)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to ensure the continuation of the scheme operated by the British Railways Board for train drivers to visit schools to alert children to the dangers of trespassing on railway lines. [8521]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Railtrack are continuing this scheme in conjunction with train operating companies and the British Transport Police.

Trespass and vandalism remain a serious problem on the railway. The Health and Safety Commission's Railway Industry Advisory Committee is setting up a Working Group to help develop a national strategy and action plan for this area.

Air Traffic Control Centre, Prestwick

Mrs. Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects building work to begin on the new Scottish air traffic control centre at Prestwick. [7089]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Sky Solutions consortium has been named by National Air Traffic Services Ltd. (NATS) as the preferred bidder for this contract, and negotiations are expected to continue for several months before a contract is signed. NATS will then be in a position to draw up a detailed timetable for the project.

Shadow Tolling

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of shadow tolling as a way of funding road-building; [8222]

(2) what assessment he has made of shadow tolling as part of an integrated transport strategy; [8223]

(3) what assessment he has made of the potential consequences for local demand management and improvements in public transport of shadow tolling; and if he will make a statement; [8224]

(4) what assessment he has made of the potential environmental consequences of shadow tolling. [8225]

Ms Glenda Jackson: DBFO projects show that private financing with remuneration under shadow tolling arrangements can offer value for money. There is development work in hand to see whether it is possible to refine the shadow toll payment mechanism so that it is less dependent upon traffic related payments, placing greater emphasis on the safety of the road and the availability of lanes for traffic use. Other aspects of shadow tolling as a funding mechanism for road schemes will be considered further in the context of our comprehensive spending review and in the work to develop an integrated transport strategy.

London Bus Services

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what information is available to London bus passengers in relation to standards of service requirements set out in contracts with operating companies. [8753]

Ms Glenda Jackson: London Transport Buses' commitment to its passengers is contained in "The London Bus Passenger's Charter" which is freely available to members of the public. Private bus operators are required to take steps to comply with the Charter.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Export Licences

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the (a) number and (b) export licence categories of open individual export licences granted to Procurement Services International which are currently valid indicating how long each licence will be in operation. [3689]

Mrs. Roche: Procurement Services International has no current Open Individual Export Licences.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if she will list the (a) amounts, (b) export licence category, (c) countries and (d) security forces of destination since 1988 of (i) general purpose machine guns, (ii) sub-machine guns and (iii) other automatic weapons; [3696]

(2) if she will list the number and categories of export licences granted to British companies since 1988 for the export of (a) general purpose machine guns, (b) sub-machine guns and (c) other automatic weapons. [3437]

Mrs. Roche: General purpose machine guns, sub-machine guns and other automatic weapons are controlled under categories ML1, ML2 or PL5018 of the Export of Goods (Control) Order. An initial search of records shows around 8,000 licences issued under these categories by the previous Government. Details could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the (a) number and (b) export licence categories of open general export licences granted to (i) Greys Defence Systems and (ii) Procurement Services International which are currently valid, indicating how long each licence will be in operation. [3694]

Mrs. Roche: Open General Export Licences, (OGELs) are not issued to specific exporters. They can be used by any exporter provided, in most cases, they register with my Department. There are currently 21 OGELs in force, for which registration is required for 14. Neither Greys Defence Systems nor Procurement Services International are registered to use any OGEL. OGELs remain in force until they are revoked.

Indonesia (Exports)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list (a) the number and (b) the categories of export licences granted for the export of military, security, police surveillance systems to Indonesia since 1988, indicating the (i) type of equipment or systems, (ii) companies to whom the licences were granted and (iii) destination agency. [3620]

Mrs. Roche: To identify equipment in these broad categories would entail a significant computer and paper record search which could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the (a) number and (b) categories of export licences granted to Arte Systems Ltd. for the transfer of surveillance or communication systems and equipment to Indonesia since 1988. [3636]

Mrs. Roche: Readily available records, since 1991, show that no export licences for this equipment to Indonesia have been granted to Arte Systems Ltd. To search records for earlier years would involve disproportionate costs. Moreover the Grays Group Limited have confirmed in writing that no export licence applications have been made or licences granted to the company.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the licences granted for the export of 40mm grenade launchers to Indonesia since 1988. [3383]

Mrs. Roche: The export of 40mm grenade launchers are controlled under entry ML2 of the Export of Goods (Control) Order. To identify licences covering these specific goods, all licences assessed as coming under ML2 would need to be searched and this can be done only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the (a) number and (b) categories of open (1) individual and (2) general export licences granted to (i) Procurement Services International and (ii) Greys Defence Systems since 1988 for the export of military security and police equipment or services to Indonesia indicating the equipment and services provided. [3692]

Mrs. Roche: Neither Procurement Services International nor Greys Defence Systems hold current Open Individual Export Licences, nor have we any record of these companies ever holding such licences.

Open General Export Licences (OGELs) are not issued to specific exporters. They can be used by any exporter provided, in most cases, they register as an OGEL user. There are four OGELs, which allow the export of certain goods controlled under the Military List (Schedule 1 of Part III of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, as amended) to a wide range of destinations including Indonesia. Three of these OGELs require exporters to register if they are using them. Neither Greys Defence Systems or Procurement Services International are registered. The fourth OGEL allows licensable goods to be exported after prior importation into the UK for exhibition purposes. It could not therefore be used for UK origin exports.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the companies which are current applicants for export licences covering command, control, communication and information systems to Indonesia. [3434]

Mrs. Roche: There are no current export licence applications for command, control, communication and information systems to Indonesia.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list (a) the licences granted for the export of System X to Indonesia, (b) which agency it was destined for and (c) the year in which it was exported. [3525]

Mrs. Roche: Although some advanced optional features of the System X telephone exchange remain licensable, the majority of System X systems were removed from export control in 1992. From readily available records, which date from 1991, no export licences have been granted for this equipment to Indonesia.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she is minded to grant current export licence applications for the command, control, communication and information systems to Indonesia. [3435]

Mrs. Roche: There are currently no such applications. Should any applications for such goods be received in the future they would be considered in light of the outcome of the Government review of the criteria used in considering licence applications for the export of conventional weapons announced on 22 May.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what control she has over the transfer of (a) armoured vehicles and (b) armoured personnel carriers to (i) Indonesia and (ii) other countries from the GKN Defiance licensed production facility in the Phillippines. [3639]

Mrs. Roche: The control of exports from the Phillippines is a matter for the Phillippine Government. Any export of licensable goods from the UK to the Phillippines would be subject to UK export controls.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the (i) number of (ii) categories of open general export licences granted to (a) Greys Defence Systems and (b) Procurement Services International since 1988 for the export of military, security and police equipment or services to Indonesia; and if she will make a statement on the equipment and services provided. [3687]

Mrs. Roche: Open General Export Licences (OGELs) are not issued to specific exporters. They can be used by any exporter provided, in most cases, they register as an OGEL user. There are four OGELs, which allow the export of certain goods controlled under the Military List (Schedule 1 of Part III of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, as amended) to a wide range of destinations including Indonesia. Three of these OGELs require exporters to register if they are using them. Neither Greys Defence Systems nor Procurement Services International are registered for any of these. The fourth OGEL allows licensable goods to be exported after prior importation into the UK for exhibition purposes. It could not therefore be used for UK origin exports.

Computers (Millennium Compliance)

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to assist small businesses which are adversely affected by (a) Government departments and (b) others failing ensure that their computer systems are millennium compliant. [5165]

Mrs. Roche: Within Government itself, Departments and Agencies are responsible for their own systems. The Central IT Unit, through its agency the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency (CCTA) is supporting the public sector with a range of specific activities, including the publication of extensive guidance by CCTA. As part of that support, CITU and CCTA have identified a programme of action to ensure that Government's response to the year 2000 problem is co-ordinated and coherent. This involves each department is producing a detailed and costed plan by October to ensure that all their systems are modified and tested by January 1999.

Each private sector organisation is responsible for its own systems. The DTI is working closely with Taskforce 2000 to alert all businesses to the problem and encourage action.

If, despite these efforts, a computer failure in one organisation adversely affects another party, the normal legal remedies will be available.

Phthalates

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what representations she has received concerning the health risks posed by the release of phthalate from babies' teething rings; and if she will make a statement; [4487]

(2) what assessment she has made of the health risks posed by the release of phthalates from babies' teething rings; and if she will make a statement; [4488]

(3) what plans she has to introduce a ban on toys containing phthalates; and if she will make a statement; [4489]

(4) if she will list the EU countries which currently operate cautionary bans on certain plastic toys releasing phthalates when chewed; and is she will make a statement. [4490]

Mr. Griffiths [holding answers 24 June 1997]: I have received no representations concerning the health risks posed by the release of phthalates from either toys or teething rings. The Department of Health has advised that there are unlikely to be any health risks to children from phthalates in such products provided that exposure does not exceed the relevant Tolerable Daily Intakes (TDIs) for phthalates set by the EC Scientific Committee for Food. This advice takes account of all available information on the possible effects of phthalates, including recent studies concerning oestrogenic activity.

There is no ban on plastic toys containing phthalates applying in any of the European Union member states. I am aware, however, of some media reports about teething rings, containing phthalate plasticiser, which were removed from sales in Denmark, Spain, Greece and Italy. I am advised they were never on sale here. Trading standards departments in this country have been provided with full details of the products identified. The Danish Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) analysed 11 PVC products sold by a variety of companies in Denmark. Three of these products produced higher levels of a specific phthalate than expected on extraction by a test apparently developed by the Danish EPA. The remaining eight items examined released no, or very small, amounts of any phthalate and were considered to be acceptable by the Danish authorities. PVC teething rings as such have not been banned.

In view of this, I have no plan to introduce a ban on toys or teething rings containing phthalate chemicals. A note reviewing the background to this issue, prepared by officials in my Department and Department of Health together with scientists at the Laboratory of the Government Chemists, has been placed in the Library of the House.

Internet

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions she has had with other Government and law enforcement agencies on the need to regulate illegal and harmful matter on the Internet; and if she will make a statement. [5868]

Mrs. Roche: My Department has worked in close co-operation with the Home Office, the Metropolitan Police, and Internet Service Providers (ISPs), to facilitate the development of a system for dealing with illegal content on the Internet, using existing law and the existing penalties. This framework is known as Internet Watch.

As a general rule, existing law applies to the Internet exactly as it does in the "physical" world. This means that ISPs have a clear liability for any illegal content which they host on their servers, but only once they have been made aware of it, and if they have then failed to take reasonable steps to remove it. Internet Watch offers ISPs a service, facilitating their compliance with existing law. An ISP who chose not to co-operate within the framework would risk prosecution and the full force of the criminal law. Internet Watch has already proved successful in bringing about the removal of illegal material, and in passing details to the police.

VAT (Fuel)

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will estimate the effect on domestic energy consumption of a reduction in VAT on domestic fuel and power to 5 per cent. [6262]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 1 July 1997]: Since the announcement of this cut in the budget we have had the opportunity to fine tune the modelling of this VAT reduction. As a result, it is estimated that reducing VAT on domestic fuel will increase domestic sector energy consumption by around 0.7 per cent.

Gas-fired Power Generation

Mr. Todd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will review the process of granting permission for new gas-fired power generation; and if she will make a statement. [7215]

Mr. Battle: We are currently considering a number of applications for consent for new power stations and will examine these on a case by case basis.

Bananas

Mr. Healey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action Her Majesty's Government have taken in support of the European Commission's appeal against the World Trade Organisation's ruling on the EU banana import regime; what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the import of bananas from the West Indies to Europe; what assessment he has made of the impact of United Kingdom policy on the Caribbean banana industry; and if he will make a statement. [7476]

Mrs. Roche: The UK has supported the European Commission's robust defence of the EU banana regime in the World Trade Organisation. We are continuing that support during the appeal to the Appellate Body. The EU policy of offering preferential access for bananas from the West Indies and other traditional ACP suppliers is one that the UK supports. The Government is well aware of the importance to the West Indies of continuing access, given the dependence of their economies on banana exports.

EU Low Voltage Directive

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what instructions she plans to give to the United Kingdom representatives at the European Commission meeting on 8 July to discuss guidelines for implementation of the low voltage directive; and if she will make a statement; [7163]

(2) what consultations she plans to have with industry about changing the scope of the low voltage directive; [7164]

(3) what factors underlay her Department's decision in 1995 that cable management products should not remain within the scope of the low voltage directive; and if she has plans to review this decision. [7165]

Mr. Battle: My officials sought to establish a clear understanding of the position on the guidance on issues such as the application of the Directive to cable management products, components and the CE marking requirements.

The scope of the Directive has not changed since its adoption in 1973 and I have no plans to consult on this particular issue. However, the Department's Standards and Technical Regulations Directorate recently consulted with interested parties and met with industry representatives, on a draft European Commission guidance document about the Low Voltage Directive.

The Department also plans a further meeting with industry representatives to discuss the proposed Commission guidance at the earliest mutually convenient time.

Although the Directive was adopted in 1973, it was only after the adoption of the CE Marking Directive in 1993, that an approach was first made to the Department by a manufacturer of plastic conduit, for an opinion as to whether the Directive covered such items.

Cable management products, such as plastic conduit, will fall within the scope of the Low Voltage Directive only if they are items of electrical equipment as described within the meaning of Article 2 of the Directive. In order to answer the enquiry a detailed analysis was undertaken by my Department to clarify the meaning of electrical equipment. As the Directive does not define what is meant by electrical equipment it is necessary to base this on the ordinary English language usage of the term in the context in which it appears in the Directive. The natural meaning of these words and hence the scope of the Directive, implies a product which operates between the voltage limits set, is not an electrically passive product and has the potential to generate electrical, mechanical, thermal or other hazards, all arising from its electrical, nature which must be protected against, as required by Article 2 of the Directive.

At a meeting of member States on 8 and 9 July to discuss a proposed European Commission guidance document on the Directive, the European Commission requested that the Department review its position. My officials are presently carrying out a further review and I hope that a mutually acceptable form of wording can be found for inclusion in the guidance.

Trade Fair Support

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will place in the Library copies of her letter to potential sponsors of trade fair seminar support programmes. [7679]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 10 July 1997]: Officials wrote to potential sponsors and a copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the sample companies exhibiting overseas with a DTI supported group in the last two years who have been sent the Support for Overseas Trade Fairs and Seminars consultation document. [8145]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 11 July 1997]: A list of the sample of companies exhibiting overseas with a DTI supported group in the last two years, which have been sent a copy of the DTI's consultation paper "Support for Overseas Trade Fairs and Seminars—The Way Forward" is being placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

To enable the paper to reach as many exporters as possible it has also been sent to a wide range of business intermediary organisations and has been publicised so that as many organisations, firms, or individuals wishing to participate in the consultation can do so.

International Nuclear Safety Convention

Mr. Forth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will give for the review of international obligations under the International Nuclear Safety convention (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8248]

Mr. Battle: The United Kingdom's report on its implementation of obligations under the Convention on Nuclear Safety will be submitted to the Convention's Secretariat by 29 September 1998, in accordance with the Rules of Procedure for the Convention. This report and those of all other Contracting Parties to the Convention will be reviewed at a meeting at the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) starting in Vienna on 12 April 1999 and expected to last two to three weeks. At this early stage, costs of conducting the review are unclear.

Royal Greenwich Observatory

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will provide a detailed breakdown of the savings expected to be made as a result of the closure of the Royal Greenwich Observatory. [7588]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 10 July 1997]: The Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council's proposals to restructure and co-locate its operations will lead to savings of at least £3 million per annum in salary costs full details are set out in Annex E of PPARC's report "The Future Management of the Royal Observatories", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. In addition, approximately £1 million per annum savings will be made in overhead costs.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will estimate the market value of the Royal Greenwich Observatory at Cambridge. [7589]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 10 July 1997]: The value of the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council's assets is routinely recorded for accounting purposes but because of the uncertain effect of restrictions in the lease, a true market value for the RGO could be established only by a full market test.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Hunter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the Government's policy for renewable energy; and what measures she proposes to take to increase the use of renewable energy. [8539]

Mr. Battle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms Walley) on 10 June 1997, Official Report, column 417.

Life Patent Directive

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the draft Life Patent directive under consideration in the European Parliament was (a) published for consideration by the Council of Ministers and (b) considered by them; what recommendation they made on the directive, what consultations Her Majesty's Government have entered into with interested bodies in the United Kingdom; if the Government have signed the requisite Explanatory Memorandum; and what parliamentary scrutiny this directive will receive. [8505]

Mr. Battle: The Commission's proposal for a Directive on the legal protection of biotechnological inventions was published on 13 December 1995, and formally sent to the Council of Ministers on 25 January 1996. The Opinion of the European Parliament on the Commission's proposal is still awaited and to date consideration by the Council has taken place only at official level. No recommendation have emerged.

The Commission's proposal was circulated for comment in February 1996 to some 50 interest groups representing the professions, industry, consumers, trades unions, the research community, groups concerned with social and environmental impact of biotechnology, and including member organisations of the Standing Advisory Committee on Industrial Property, a body set up to advise Ministers on all aspects of industrial property.

An Explanatory Memorandum was submitted by this Department on 4 March 1996, and further Memoranda will be submitted as matters proceed before the Council.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Paice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the calculation and forecasts for CO2 emissions contained in European Union document 8468/97 from the Secretary-General. [8160]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 14 July 1997]: I submitted an Explanatory Memorandum to Parliament on 9 July 1997 on the European Union document 8468/97, a copy of which is in the Library of both Houses. My officials have discussed the scenario for future carbon emissions with the European Commission and believe it fairly describes likely broad trends at European Union level.

Nuclear Power (Documents)

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 9 July 1997, Official Report, column 485, what matters are dealt with in the 1952 Atomic Energy Board (minutes and papers); and if she will now transfer those documents to the Public Record Office for release for public inspection. [8708]

Mr. Battle: The 1952 Atomic Energy Board (minutes and papers) dealt with a variety of issues pertinent to the UK nuclear industry. As my hon. Friend the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs stated in his answer of 9 July, many of these records contained material of a sensitive nature and therefore, both IKAEA and MOD agreed at the last review of this file in 1996, that these papers should not be released at this time.

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to increase accessibility to information held by (a) her Department and (b) the Atomic Energy Authority relating to nuclear power generation. [8709]

Mr. Battle: I attach considerable importance to freedom of information and am concerned to improve the level of information made available to the public. The Department of Trade and Industry already makes a significant amount of information about nuclear power generation available through publications such as the Energy Report and the Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics. It will continue to explore ways of increasing access to this information both proactively and in response to specific requests. This is being reflected, for example, in the more forthcoming answers to Parliamentary Questions, on a range of nuclear issues, in the last two months.

The UK Atomic Energy Authority is publicly committed to a policy of frank and open communication of information wherever possible.

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what papers relating to the Windscale fire in 1957 are still held by her Department; and if she will now pass those to the Public Record Office for release for public inspection. [8707]

Mr. Battle: All known files relating to the Windscale fire are already in the Public Record Office. I am not aware of any other files held by the Department. The official UKAEA historian, Lorna Arnold has also written a book on the Windscale fire, "Windscale 1957—Anatomy of a Nuclear Accident" published 1992, which includes an exhaustive reference list.

BT (Special Share)

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Government have clarified for British Telecom its position on the Special Share in advance of the company's annual general meeting of 16 July. [9069]

Mrs. Beckett: I have written to British Telecom stating that the Government is willing to redeem its Share. This decision was taken after careful consideration of the specific issues involved; it has no implications for other Special Shares where any decisions would have to take account of the different circumstances in each case.

Solar Power

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade and Industry how many homes in Britain are solar powered currently; and if he will set targets to increase this number. [7098]

Mr. Battle: There are currently four solar powered (photovoltaic) domestic housing schemes in the UK, comprising a total of 14 homes in the private sector. However, there are over 40,000 homes with active solar heating and many more with passive solar design features. The current cost of installing photovoltaic (PV) panels (1.5—3.0kWp) onto a domestic house is typically between £10,000 and £15,000 per property. PV electricity costs typically around 5—10 times more than conventionally generated electricity, depending on specific circumstances. However, the technology is developing rapidly, and with continually falling costs due to economies of scale, PV may become a strategically important electricity generating technology in the future.

I recently announced a review of policy on new and renewable energy, and the Government's support for the solar energy industry will be considered in that context.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Hospital Admissions (Waiting Costs)

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the annual social security cost among those waiting for hospital admissions (a) in total and (b) broken down by benefit category in the last year for which figures are available. [8705]

Mr. Keith Bradley: No information is recorded about whether or not benefit recipients are waiting for hospital admission.

SERPS

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his oral statement of 9 July, Official Report, column 1037, if SERPS will continue and expand in line with demand from all those that wish to remain members of the scheme; and if he will make a statement. [8590]

Mr. Denham: The forthcoming Pensions Review will look at all aspects of pensions provision. We will retain SERPS for those who wish to remain members of it.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his oral statement of 9 July, Official Report, column 1037, what firm proposals he has to enable pensioners to belong to a pension scheme that is flexible, secure, gives value for money and does not reduce people's savings if they become unemployed; what price formula he intends to use when increasing the basic state pension in line with prices; how long he expects his Department's wide ranging review of pensions to take; and if he will list the organisations that will be consulted. [8591]

Mr. Denham: The Government is committed to the development of stakeholder pensions, which will be good quality second pension schemes. They will allow those without access to occupational schemes to invest their contributions in a secure, flexible and value for money pension. A framework for stakeholder pensions will be developed in close consultation with potential pension providers and representatives of employers, employees and the self-employed. We will also build on the good quality second pensions that many employees enjoy by supporting the existing framework of occupational pensions.

My right hon. friend the Secretary of States, will shortly announce details of the Pensions Review, including when it will report.

As part of the review, we will engage in a process of wide ranging consultation. We will involve all key players, including employers, employees, the pensions industry, and pensioners' organisations. The Government will ensure that the views of pensioners are heard.

My right hon. Friend is required to review annually the value of Basic Retirement Pension to determine whether it has retained its value in relation to the general level of prices. The results of that review will be announced in due course. We will retain the Basic State Retirement Pension as the foundation of pension provision, increasing it as least in line with prices.

DEFENCE

Pay Deductions

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what factors underlie the length of delay between the deduction of maintenance money from serving personnel's wages and its subsequent payment to separated partners. [7714]

Dr. Reid: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. G. Winsland to Mr. Gordon Marsden, dated 15 July 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the factors which may delay maintenance payments made by Service personnel as this matter falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency (AFPAA).

There are 3 general processes employed by the Agency to make maintenance payments from Servicemen's pay:

(a) Automatic credit transfer through the Bankers Automated Clearing System (BACS).

(b) Payable Orders in the form of a cheque, which are sent by post and are drawn against HMPMG account.

(c) Allotment or payment books which are pre-funded and against which credits are drawn on the due date.

In each case, the method of payment is dictated by the Child Support Agency (CSA), the Court, or the dependant. The 3 systems have proven to be effective and payments are rarely delayed, other than through exceptional circumstances such as postal delays, technical failure in the BACS system or the production of the payable orders. In the vast majority of cases, payments deducted from pay due on the last working day of each month are credited to the separated partner's account or paid by cheque on the same day.

Usually, AFPAA is directed to make payment to the CSA or Magistrates Court for them in turn to issue funds to the individual. From past experience, this can be the most significant factor in any delay between the deduction of maintenance from a Serviceman's pay and subsequent payment to a separated partner. If your question relates to a specific case, I would be happy to initiate a review if you can provide the necessary detail.

Army Individual Training Organisation

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give for the review of the Royal Navy's approach to efficiency in the Army's Individual Training Organisation (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8261]

Dr. Reid: There is no such review. I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Portsmouth, North (Mr. Rapson) on 24 June, Official Report, columns 421–22.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those areas of his departmental responsibility currently under consideration for defence agency status. [8132]

Dr. Reid: There are three areas within my Department currently under consideration for Defence Agency status. These are the Defence Communications Service, Army Equipment Support and the RAF Support Management Group.

Trident

Professor Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to include the Trident missile programme within his Strategic Defence Review; and if he will make a statement. [7985]

Dr. Reid: The Government's commitment to retain Trident is one of the policy principles on which the Strategic Defence Review is founded. Within this framework the review will examine all aspects of our deterrence requirements.

Plastic Baton Rounds

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 June, Official Report, column 372, when Ministers were made aware that the plastic baton rounds being used in Northern Ireland were firing too fast. [8266]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 11 July 1997]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence and I were informed on 14 May 1997 that tests had indicated that some of the baton rounds manufactured in 1994 exceeded the specified velocity. We decided to make an announcement as soon as we knew the results of further tests, and we did so on 10 June.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Housing Benefit Fraud

Mr. Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many tenants of private landlords received housing benefit between 1 April 1996 and 1 April 1997; and how many of those were subsequently found to have committed housing benefit fraud. [7186]

Mr. Worthington: The information required to answer the question fully is not readily available at present but I will write to the hon. gentleman shortly and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Mr. Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) housing executive and (b) DSS fraud inspectors were in situ between 1 April 1996 and 1 April 1997. [7185]

Mr. Worthington: Between 1 April 1996 and 1 April 1997, the Northern Ireland Housing Executive did not employ its staff as fraud inspectors. During this period, fraud investigations and prosecutions were carried out on behalf of the Housing Executive by staff of the Social Security Agency's Fraud and Prosecutions Branch and by the Royal Ulster Constabulary under the Theft Act.

During 1996–97, the Housing Executive appointed five staff to commence work on the development of a Security Strategy for Housing Benefit. Procedures operated by Housing Executive staff administering Housing Benefit include fraud prevention measures, as a result of which it is estimated that, for the six month period ended 31 March 1997, some £1.5 million was saved.

On 1 April 1996 the Social Security Agency had in place 61 staff involved in fraud prevention and detection. On 1 April 1997 the number had risen to 88, 70 of whom include the investigation of referrals from the Housing Executive in their duties.

Mr. Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many tenants of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive received housing benefit between 1 April 1996 and 1 April 1997; and how many of those were subsequently found to have committed housing benefit fraud. [7187]

Mr. Worthington: The information required to answer the question fully is not readily available at present but I will write to the hon. gentleman shortly and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Gearóid O'Dochartaigh

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the grounds for arrest of Gearóid O'Dochartaigh on 14 June. [7369]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 July 1997]: Following a stone-throwing incident in Londonderry on 14 June 1997 Gearóid O'Dochartaigh was stopped and questioned by police as to his identity, under the provisions of section 25 of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1996. On failing to satisfy police in this regard, O'Dochartaigh was arrested under the provisions of section 18 of the Act and taken to Strand Road RUC Station where he subsequently provided satisfactory details of his identity. He was subsequently released into the custody of his mother, who attended the station.

Irish Language

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps she has taken to ensure that the rights of Irish language speakers in Northern Ireland under the law are protected with particular reference to the use of their given name. [7368]

Mr. Worthington [holding answer 14 July 1997]: Current administrative guidelines on the use of Irish in official business in Northern Ireland recommend that officials should respect the wishes of any individual who has indicated a desire to be known by a personal name in the Irish language. Unless it appears that he or she is not generally known by that name, a personal name in Irish should be accepted for all official purposes, including correspondence and official documents.

Plastic Baton Rounds

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) pursuant to her answer of 19 June, Official Report, columns 275–76, what assessment she has made of Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary's opinion of the need to review RUC guidelines on the use of baton guns more accurately to reflect the Association of Chief Police Officers' manual of guidance; [8529]

(2) pursuant to her answer of 30 June, Official Report, column 63, what assessment she has made of Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary's opinion on the risks involved in the routine use of baton rounds; [8530]

(3) pursuant to her answer of 19 June, Official Report, columns 275–76, what assessment she has made of Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary's concern in respect of the application of the existing guidelines on baton rounds to the protection of property and detection of crime. [8528]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 July 1997]: HMIC's report contains eight main recommendations relating directly to the handling of public order situations and the use of PBRs. These recommendations have been accepted by the Chief Constable. They will be taken into consideration in the current review of baton gun guidelines, which ACPO is conducting and in which the RUC is participating.

Holding Centres

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the 4th Annual Report of the Independent Commissioner for the Holding Centres; and if she will make a statement. [7411]

Mr. Ingram: A consultation exercise on the recommendations made in the 4th Annual Report of the Independent Commissioner for the Holding Centres is at present being conducted. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will consider making a statement when the consultation exercise has been completed.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will publish the code of practice for video-recording interviews with suspects detained in the holding centres. [7412]

Mr. Ingram: The code of practice for the silent video-recording of interviews with suspects detained in the Holding Centres is at an advanced stage of preparation. It will be published as soon as possible.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will review guidelines for the holding centres to enable detainees to be provided with writing materials. [7413]

Mr. Ingram: The provision of writing materials for detainees is being considered as part of the consultation exercise.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the police have a right of veto over the decision of the Independent Commissioner for the Holding Centres or his Deputy to attend a detainee interview. [7414]

Mr. Ingram: The question as to whether or not the Independent Commissioner or his Deputy attends a detainee interview is in the first place a matter for the detained person. Additionally though, in exceptional circumstances, the police have a right of veto over the Commissioner's decision to attend. This is reflected in the Commissioners' Terms of Reference.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will place a copy of the RUC document, "Notice to Detained Persons," in the Library. [7415]

Mr. Ingram: The Codes of Practice for the Detention, Treatment, Questioning and Identification of detained persons set out very clearly and in some detail the requirements in terms of informing detained persons of their rights while in custody.

A copy of the Codes of Practice is available in the Library.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list (a) the functions carried out in each of the three holding centres and (b) the allocation of space accorded to each. [7416]

Mr. Ingram: The function of each of the Holding Centres is to provide for the detention and interview of persons detained under Section 14 of the Prevention of Terrorism (TP) Act 1989, in accordance with the Codes of Practice issued under Section 61 of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1991.

The allocation of space accorded to each function varies between Holding Centres and indeed variation exists within each Holding Centre.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is (a) the estimated cost of building works proposed by the Police Authority to replace Castlereagh Holding Centre and (b) the estimated duration of such works from commencement to completion. [7417]

Mr. Ingram: It has been estimated in the absence of a statement of feasibility and cost range, that a replacement build for Castlereagh Holding Centre would currently:

(a) cost in the region of £6 million; and

(b) would take a period of approximately 18 months to complete.

Perinatal Mortality

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the perinatal mortality rate in the Royal Maternity Hospital during the past five years; and what has been the average rate for maternity hospitals in the United Kingdom in the same period. [8585]

Mr. Worthington: The information is not available in the form requested.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Channel Tunnel (Electrified Grids)

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the electrified grids in the channel tunnel are turned on. [7705]

Mr. Rooker: Eurotunnel has told us that the grids are now operating, but not to their full specifications. MAFF officials will shortly be carrying out an inspection following a recent visit I made to the tunnel areas in England and France.

Mink Farming

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to prohibit the farming of mink for fur; and if he will make a statement. [7655]

Mr. Morley: I am currently exploring all possible ways forward on how to implement the Government's pre-election pledge to end fur farming as soon as practicable.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all areas of United Kingdom seas in which it is known radioactive waste has been dumped; what records he holds on which companies produced radioactive waste during the second half of this century, where the place where they disposed of their waste is unknown or was at sea; and if he will make a statement about the danger of this waste. [8230]

Mr. Rooker: Dumping of radioactive waste in United Kingdom waters was carried out in the Hurd Deep from 1950 to 1963 and, as reported in my written reply to my hon. Friend, the member for Kirkcaldy (Dr. Moonie) on 1 July 1997, Official Report, columns 158–60, in Beaufort's Dyke in the 1950s.

The Department does not hold records on the production by companies of radioactive waste except in relation to the authorised disposal of such waste at sea, and in relation to the Ministry's previous responsibilities with regard to authorising radioactive waste disposal from licensed nuclear sites. We have already undertaken to publish any new information which may be found in the search of archive material referred to in my written answer of 1 July.

Monitoring has shown that levels of man-made radioactivity in UK waters remain well within internationally agreed safety levels and give no cause for concern. Results of this monitoring are compiled and published annually and copies are placed in the Library of the House.

Livestock Support Schemes

Mr. Collins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many payments under the force majeure provisions of (a) the sheep annual premium scheme and (b) the hill livestock compensatory allowances scheme were made in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [7461]

Mr. Rooker: The following table shows the information requested in respect of England for the two years 1994 and 1995. Information for earlier years is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Information on the number of cases in 1996 is currently being gathered.

Force majeure cases accepted in England under the sheep annual premium scheme and the hill livestock compensatory allowances scheme

Scheme	1994	1995
SAPS	30	7
HLCAS	3	4

Drift Nets

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the

(a) extent of use and (b) effectiveness of drift nets with Dolphin doors relative to drift nets without such doors; and if he will make a statement. [8485]

Mr. Morley: In 1996, five of the eight United Kingdom vessels participating in the high seas drift net fishery for tuna used dolphin doors. The industry's estimate of dolphin casualties caused by the UK fleet in this fishery was approximately 90. It is not clear how far the use of dolphin doors affected the level of casualties or effectiveness of the drift nets in catching other species.

I am currently considering our policy towards high seas drift nets.

Minestone Tipping (Northumberland)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 3 July, Official Report, column 260, if he will publish the report on the environmental effects of minestone tipping at Lynemouth, Northumberland, which he is currently considering. [8512]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 14 July 1997]: I have arranged for copies of the Report to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Cattle Transportation

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidance he will be giving to Staffordshire farmers for the transportation of cattle to slaughterhouses outside the county. [8589]

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will review the recent decision of the Intervention Board in respect of the lack of an abattoir registered to take over 30 months cattle and casualty cattle within Staffordshire. [8697]

Mr. Rooker: Following a competitive tender, 26 abattoirs in Great Britain have been contracted by the Intervention Board to slaughter cattle under the Over Thirty Month Scheme. Selection was made on the basis of criteria which included quality and volume of service, suitability of premises, price and geographical location to ensure reasonable access for producers. Proportionally greater capacity has been provided to the traditional dairy areas, including the North West of England, and the number of liveweight markets acting as collection centres for entry to the scheme has not changed.

Inevitably, with the number of abattoirs being reduced from about 50 to 26 to reflect the much lower throughputs in the scheme, some producers will have to travel greater distances. But those in Staffordshire are relatively well served under the new arrangements, despite there being no scheme abattoirs in the county. In fact, distances for them will be less than those for a great many producers elsewhere in the country.

Beef (Illegal Exports)

Mr. Hill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he has taken over allegations of illegal exports of United Kingdom beef; and if he will make a statement.[9120]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: My officials, in conjunction with officials from other member states, the Commission's Anti-Fraud unit and DGXXIV, are pursuing investigations in this country and elsewhere into allegations of the illegal export of UK beef. It will be some time before those investigations are complete. Criminal proceedings will be instigated if sufficient evidence of illegal activity is found. All allegations of illegal exports of beef are urgently and rigorously investigated.

As a result of serious hygiene concerns arising out of our investigations, however, my Department yesterday issued Notices preventing two meat plants in the UK from trading in beef.

In the light of recent events I have undertaken a thorough review of the measures currently in place to implement the ban on the export of UK beef imposed by EC Decision 96/239 as amended by EC Decision 96/362 and have concluded that those measures should be enhanced and extended. I have today informed the European Commission that I intend to:

> introduce new secondary legislation both to clarify and strengthen the powers available to UK officials where illegal exports are suspected; > to enhance the checks that are carried out at ports of despatch.

I am also giving urgent consideration to enhancing veterinary checks at beef plants.

The UK is under an obligation to implement and enforce the export ban firmly and effectively for as long as it is in place. Only in this way will we regain the trust of our European partners, which is an essential pre-requisite to an early lifting of the export ban.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Cabinet Committees

37. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Council if she will make it her policy to issue statements following meetings of the Cabinet Committees that she chairs. [6728]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: No. Details relating to proceedings of Cabinet Comittees are not published.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Cycle Allowance

35. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the President of the Council if she will assess the advantages of introducing a cycle allowance for right hon. and hon. Members. [6726]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: If hon. Members, instead of using a car, want to use cycles for Parliamentary business then it makes sense to consider this. I shall look at ways of taking this further.

Visitor Facilities

36. Mr. Gapes: To ask the hon Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what plans the Commission has to improve facilities for visitors and families of hon. Members.[6727]

41. Mr. Mitchell: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, if the Commission will increase the financial provision for resources and facilities available to visitors to the House. [6733]

Mr. Kirkwood: Following a Recommendation of the Catering Committee in the last Parliament, the House agreed on 12 July 1994 that the area currently occupied by the Westminster Hall Cafeteria should be converted to a Visitor Centre, but this should only take place once a suitable alternative has been found for the present lunchtime users. No doubt this is a matter a new Catering Committee will wish to take up at an early date.

Provision of facilities for families of hon. Members is a matter for the Administration Committee.

Constitutional Bills

38. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the President of the Council what is her policy on taking major constitutional Bills in a Committee of the whole House. [6729]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: I refer the hon. Member to the Government's Memorandum to the Select Committee on Modernisation of the House of Commons.

Palace of Westminster

39. Mr. Stunell: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what plans the Commission has (a) to make the Palace of Westminster more accessible to the public and (b) to provide clearer information on the operation of the House; and if he will make a statement. [6730]

Mr. Kirkwood: The Commission appreciates the importance of ensuring that access to the Palace of Westminster is available to the thousands of members of the Public who visit it each week and information is provided through the Public Information Office so that they can understand the House of Commons and its activities. A number of initiatives are in progress and I will arrange for a list of these to be published in the Official Report.

The following is the information:

The Public Information Office of the Library takes the lead in providing information to the public and it has been making every effort to deal with the increased public interest in Parliament which has become evident in the last few months.

Plans by the Education Unit of the Public Information Office to provide more information for young people were agreed by the Administration Committee in March 1997. These are in addition to the current Autumn Visits Programme, and include greater use of the public gallery for schools visits from November 1997, from 1998 the use of Committee Room 10 to be made available for the holding of six or seven "Pupil Parliaments" per year and from autumn 1997 the holding of four teacher seminars per year. The Administration Committee has also agreed that, following the opening of Portcullis House, a Committee or Conference Room in that building be set aside each Monday and Friday when the House is sitting to enable whole-days seminars for schoolchildren on the work of Parliament to take place.

The Line of Route is available to parties of visitors sponsored by Members and the Administration Committee regularly reviews the arrangements to ensure the greatest possible access. In addition, the general public will be admitted to Westminster Hall from 4 August to 26 September to visit an exhibition being held by the House of Lords Record Office.

Electronic means are also being used to increase accessibility. The Parliamentary public Internet web-site is proving popular and greatly increases the accessibility of the papers and proceedings. New arrangements were instituted for overseas visitors from 1 May 1997. In addition an interactive CD-ROM about Parliament and its activities is currently being produced on a commercial basis with the co-operation of the House authorities and an interactive education web-site is in the planning stage.

It is planned to redevelop the area currently occupied by Westminster Hall Cafeteria to include a visitors' centre after the new Portcullis House is occupied.

An exhibition video and hard disk ROM is on view in the historic Jewel Tower, almost opposite St. Stephen's Entrance.

Privy Counsellors

40. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the President of the Council if she will bring forward proposals to put Privy Counsellors on an equal footing with other hon. Members in parliamentary debates. [6732]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: I have no plans to do so. The Select Committee on the Modernisation of the House of Commons may wish to consider this in due course, but for the present I think this should be left to the discretion of Madam Speaker.

Staff Pensions

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, if the final value of the pensions of employees of the House will be protected following the Budget; and what estimate he has made of the cost of this protection to the Government. [8352]

Mr. Kirkwood: The pensions of employees of the House who are members of the House of Commons Staff Pensions Scheme (HOCSPS) should not be affected by the budget proposals. The HOCSPS is analogous to the Principal Civil Service Scheme and is operated on a pay as you go basis. Since it is not a funded scheme and consequently has no investments the abolition of tax credits should have no effect on the value of pensions payable.

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the President of the Council if the final value of the pensions of hon. Members' staff will be protected following the Budget; and what estimate she has made of the cost of this protection to the Government. [8353]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The final value of the pension in respect of any individual on any honourable Member's staff will depend on a wide range of factors, including the level of contributions paid to the individual's pension arrangements, the choice of investment vehicle selected from time to time by the individual, and the level of annuity rates prevailing at the time when the individual elects to draw pension. Whether or not the Budget will affect the final value of the pension will depend on all of these factors, as well as on economic variables such as the future progress of the investment markets. The ultimate pension levels are not guaranteed, either before or after the Budget.

Chamber (Structural Changes)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the President of the Council what proposals she has to make structural changes to the Chamber of the House. [6731]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: I have no such proposals.

SCOTLAND

Enterprise Companies

13. Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will review the strategy of (a) Scottish Enterprise and (b) the local enterprise companies. [6704]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend announced on 6 June that he had asked Scottish Enterprise to bring forward their planned review of strategy. Local enterprise companies will be covered by that review. The review will be carried out by Scottish Enterprise in close co-operation with officials from The Scottish Office.

Local Government Finance

14. Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about central Government funding of Scottish local authorities. [6705]

Mr. Chisholm: Central government is providing Scottish local authorities with almost £6 billion in the current year.

A96 and A92

15. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on future plans for upgrading the A96 and the A92. [6706]

Mr. Chisholm: As I made clear to the hon. Gentleman at the Scottish Grand Committee last week, the current construction work on the Blackburn and Kintore Bypasses on the A96 will provide a further 10km of new dual carriageway by autumn 1998.

Work on minor improvement schemes, and on measures to promote safety on the A90, formerly the A92, will continue. No further procedural work will be carried out on the major scheme to dual the A90 between Balmedie and Tipperty until the conclusions of the strategic roads review are known.

National Health Service Expenditure

16. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he is considering to increase expenditure on the NHS in Scotland 1997–98. [6707]

Mr. Galbraith: None, by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Scotland, has instructed Health Boards to use £10 million of savings being realised in 1997–98 from reducing bureaucracy, to reduce waiting times and relieve winter pressures.

Skye Bridge

17. Mr. Brook: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the Skye bridge. [6708]

Mr. Dewar: As I announced to the House on Friday 4 July, columns 288–89, I intend to introduce measures to alleviate the impact of the Skye Bridge tolls on frequent users.

Alcopops

18. Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he will introduce to stop retailers selling alcopops and designer drinks to young people. [6709]

Mr. Galbraith: The Ministerial Group on Alcopops is considering a range of possible industry and Government measures to tackle underage drinking. These include how alcohol is promoted to appeal to young people and how it reaches them. We will be making a statement shortly.

Fishing Industry

19. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what meetings he has had with representatives of Scottish fishermen concerning the conclusions of the Amsterdam conference. [6710]

Mr. Chisholm: Representatives of Scottish fishermen were invited to participate in high-level talks on the industry's future, as announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 19 June. The meeting took place this morning and was attended by my noble Friend, the Minister for Agriculture, the Environment and Fisheries at The Scottish Office.

Acute Care

20. Mrs. McGuire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to review strategies for acute care in Scotland. [6711]

Mr. Galbraith: We are undertaking a strategic review of Health Services in Scotland. It will set the principles on which Health Boards will continue to develop the acute services in their area.

Public Appointments

21. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many public appointments he is responsible for making. [6712]

Mr. Dewar: I am responsible for 3,652 appointments to public bodies in Scotland of which 2,014 are to children's panels.

Government of Scotland White Paper

22. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Government's White Paper on the future government of Scotland. [6713]

Mr. McLeish: The White Paper will be published on 24 July. This will allow both Houses proper opportunity to debate the White Paper before the summer recess.

Small Towns Initiative

23. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what new resources are to be made available in the current year under the small towns initiative being mounted by Scottish Enterprise; and if he will make a statement. [6714]

Mr. Wilson: The allocation of resources within the budget adopted by Scottish Enterprise is an operational matter for that organisation. I shall ask the Acting Chairman of Scottish Enterprise to write to the hon. Member.

Milk Quotas

24. Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to reform the system of milk quotas. [6715]

Mr. Chisholm: The Government's policy on milk quotas and other elements of the dairy regime will be assessed in the light of the European Commission's proposals for reforming the CAP which are expected to be announced shortly.

Agriculture

25. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will next attend an EC Council of Ministers meeting to discuss Scottish agriculture. [6716]

Mr. Chisholm: My noble Friend, the Minister for Agriculture, the Environment and Fisheries attended the May meeting of the Agriculture Council and will attend subsequent meetings as appropriate.

Private Finance Initiative

26. Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with private sector institutions regarding PFI for new hospitals in Scotland. [6717]

Mr. Galbraith: The Secretary of State has had no discussions with private sector institutions regarding PFI for new hospitals in Scotland. I had my first discussions with private sector institutions regarding PFI when I met the preferred bidder for two PFI projects last week and Officials have frequent contact with the private sector bodies involved in PFI hospital projects.

Scottish Assembly

27. Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to take account of public opinion in England in drawing up his proposals for a Scottish Assembly. [6718]

Mr. McLeish: The Government's proposals for the establishment of a Scottish Parliament were included in our UK manifesto, and were endorsed by the electorate throughout the United Kingdom. We will continue to take account of public opinion in all parts of the UK in working up the detail of the proposals.

Prison Population

28. Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the prison population in Scotland. [6719]

Mr. McLeish: The average daily prisoner population in Scotland in 1996–97 was 5,992 compared with 5,632 in 1995–96 and 5,395 in 1992–93. During 1996–97, the average daily remand population increased by 3 per cent. to 1,021, the highest number recorded in the past five years. The number of adult prisoners and young offenders sentenced increased by 6 per cent. and 10 per cent. respectively. The rise in the number of adult prisoners in 1996–97 can be attributed to the increase in the number of short-term prisoners from 2,022 in 1995–96 to 2,183 in 1996–97.

The projected average daily prisoner population for 1997–98 to 1999–2000 are 6,400; 6,600 and 6,750, excluding the potential effects of the early release provisions in the Crime and Punishment (Scotland) Act 1997.

Voluntary Sports Clubs

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his assessment of the cost of granting mandatory rate relief to voluntary sports clubs in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [8006]

Mr. Chisholm: Rate relief provided to qualifying sports clubs in Scotland is entirely at the discretion of local authorities. Although detailed information on reliefs provided by local authorities to sports clubs is not held centrally, total discretionary relief provided in 1995–96 amounted to £4.4 million.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what Government proposals exist to harmonise rate relief for voluntary sports clubs in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [8005]

Mr. Chisholm: Rate relief provided to qualifying sports clubs in Scotland is already harmonised. Non-profit-making sports clubs in Scotland are eligible for mandatory relief. If relief is granted 100 per cent. of the cost is borne by the Exchequer.

Judicial Reviews

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many decisions by his Department were challenged by way of judicial review in each Parliamentary session since 1994–95; and if he will list in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld, (b) the court found for the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgment and (d) the Department appealed successfully against the judicial review decision. [7845]

Mr. McLeish: During Session 1994–95, 10 decisions were challenged by judicial review in the Court of Session; and (a) four decisions were upheld by the Court; (b) and (c) the Court did not find for the applicant in any case; and (d) none were appealed by the Department. Of the remaining six cases, four judicial review petitions were withdrawn and two are yet to be decided by the Court.

During Session 1995–96, 10 decisions were challenged by judicial review in the Court of Session; and (a) five decisions were upheld by the Court; (b) and (c) one decision was not defended by the Secretary of State and accordingly the judicial review petition was successful; and (d) none were appealed by the Department. Of the remaining four cases, three judicial review petitions were withdrawn and one has yet to be decided by the Court.

During Session 1996–97, four decisions were challenged by judicial review in the Court of Session; and (a) one decision was upheld by the Court; (b) and (c) one decision was settled in such a way that the judicial review petition was successful; and (d) none were appealed by the Department. Of the remaining two cases, two are yet to be decided by the Court.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions since 1994–95 legislation has been introduced by the Department (a) to remove effects of judicial review decisions and (b) to implement them. [7844]

Mr. McLeish: On no occasion since 1994–95 has legislation been introduced by the Scottish Office (a) to remove the effects of judicial review decisions and (b) to implement them.

Murder and Manslaughter (Convictions)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were convicted of (a) murder and (b) manslaughter in each year since 1967; and in each case what proportion this represented of the population. [8126]

Mr. McLeish: The following table sets out the number of persons with a charge proved for a main charge of murder and common law culpable homicide in Scotland in each of the years 1967 to 1995. Convictions for statutory culpable homicide (causing death by dangerous driving and causing death by careless driving when under the influence of drink or drugs) are excluded from the table.

Persons with a charge proved for a main charge of murder and common law culpable homicide in Scotland, 1967–1995

[1] Persons aged 8 and over.

Catholics (Education)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on what guarantees have been given to the Roman Catholic Church in Scotland in relation to the devolution proposals on the right of Catholics to a separate education enshrined in the 1918 Act. [8135]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 11 July 1997]: The Government's detailed proposals, including those for education, will be set out in the forthcoming White Paper.

Departmental Budgets

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, if, following the recent Budget, he will give his estimate of the total real level of his Department's budget, in 1995–96 prices, in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99; if he will estimate what such figures were for (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1998–99 following the November 1996 Budget on the basis of the estimates of the GDP deflator contained in that Budget; and if he will make a statement. [8299]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The figures requested for my Department's spending plans within the Control Total are as follows: (a) £13,578 million (b) £13,475 million (1) £13,707 million (2) £13,523 million.

In addition Scotland will benefit from part of the expenditure outside the Control Total which was announced in the Budget, for Welfare to Work and spending under the Capital Receipts Initiative.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what new plans he has to introduce cuts and savings in his Department as a result of the effect on his Department's budgets for 1997–98 and 1998–99 of the upward revisions to the GDP deflators in the Budget on 2 July; and if he will make a statement. [8300]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 14 July 1997]: All Departments are reallocating spending within their Departmental ceilings as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Crime and Disorder Bill

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with Home Office ministers regarding the contents of the planned bill relating to crime and disorder. [6698]

Mr. McLeish: There is regular contact between the two Departments, at both Ministerial and official level, on this and other matters of mutual interest.

In Scotland we have announced our commitment to introducing Community Safety Orders, after proper consultation with the relevant agencies, and to consulting on the introduction of new offences of racial harassment and racially motivated violence.

WALES

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to review the Barnett formula in the event of a Welsh Assembly being created. [8493]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Government believes that the Barnett formula has played a very important part in the allocation of public expenditure. I shall set out the financial arrangements for the proposed Welsh Assembly fully in the White Paper.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales by what mechanisms other than the White Paper and its summary information relating to the Welsh Assembly will be disseminated prior to the Referendum; and if he will make a statement. [8587]

Mr. Davies: A telephone helpline will be established to answer queries from the public about the Government's proposals. In addition, I am considering making available summary information on particular aspects of the Government's proposals.

Welsh Sport

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his Department's funding for Welsh sport in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [8431]

Mr. Ron Davies: Central Government funding for Welsh sport is channelled through the Sports Council for Wales. Welsh Office grant in aid to the Council over the three years has been as follows:

1995–96: £6.624 million

1997–98: £6.596 million.

The Sports Council also receives income from the National Lottery as the body responsible for distributing Lottery proceeds to sport in Wales. Since the Council started distributing Lottery grants in April 1995 almost £24 million has been awarded to support 246 projects throughout Wales.

Obesity

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new initiatives his Department is planning in respect of obesity; and if he will make a statement. [8743]

Win Griffiths: Action in pursuit of the new Health Gain Targets for Wales published on 11 June 1997 is likely to include programmes to reduce the incidence of obesity.

In addition, the Health Promotion Authority for Wales' current strategic framework provides specifically for work to be undertaken to combat obesity by increasing physical activity in both adults and children and encouraging healthy eating in the population.

Youth Unemployment

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each county council, and for Wales, the latest estimates of youth unemployment, and comparable figures for the United Kingdom. [8219]

Mr. Win Griffiths: At April 1997 there were 23,000 persons in Wales and 421,700 persons in the UK aged 18–24 on the claimant unemployment count. These figures are not seasonally adjusted. The comparable date at county council level are available from the NOMIS database which can be accessed by the staff of the Library of the House.

Poor Housing Conditions

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each county council, and for Wales, the latest indicators of poor housing conditions, and comparable figures for the United Kingdom. [8220]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The latest Welsh House Condition Survey was conducted in 1993. From this, it is estimated that 151,200 occupied first homes, 13.4 per cent. of the total, in Wales were unfit. Information on individual local authority areas is not available from this survey. A further house condition survey, which will provide results for local authority areas, is underway. Information from this survey will be available in 1998. Comparable figures for the United Kingdom are not available because of differences in the timing and detail of the surveys. However, the 1991 English House Condition Survey identified 7.6 per cent. of all dwellings in England as being unfit. The Northern Ireland 1991 survey identified 8.8 per cent. of dwellings as unfit. In Scotland in 1991, 4.7 per cent. of the stock was assessed as being Below Tolerable Standard.

Sickness

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each county council, and for Wales, the latest indicators of relative incidence of sickness, and comparable figures for the United Kingdom. [8221]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Information, by unitary authority area, on various indicators of health in Wales is published by the Welsh Office in "Health Statistics Wales 1996" and "The Welsh Health Survey 1995". Information on the health of people in the countries and regions of the United Kingdom is published by the Office for National Statistics in "Regional Trends 32". Copies of these publications are in the Library of the House.

Relative Poverty

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each county council, and for Wales, the latest indicators of relative poverty, and comparable figures for the United Kingdom. [8226]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Cynon Valley (Ann Clwyd) on 5 June 1996, Official Report, column 251.

Exports and Imports

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 24 June, Official Report, column 495, when the Under-Secretary, the hon. Member for Neath, (Mr. Hain) intends to write to the right hon. Member with an explanation and to place a copy of his letter in the Library. [8791]

Mr. Hain: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 10 July. A copy of my reply has been placed in the Library of the House.

Taff-Ely SSSI

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the Government intends to designate the Taff-Ely site of special scientific interest as part of the Lower Severn Estuary Special Protection Area. [8774]

Mr. Win Griffiths: A decision as to the boundaries of the Lower Severn Estuary Special Protection Area was taken in 1991 and my right hon. Friend has no plans to reconsider the extent of that area.

HEALTH

Black Report

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to implement the recommendations of the Black report of 1980 on inequalities in health. [7820]

Ms Jowell: The Black report was published in 1980. We have asked Sir Donald Acheson to chair an independent review into health inequalities in England in the 1990s. He will assist the Department of Health and the Office for National Statistics to carry out a review of the latest available information on inequalities in health and expectation of life in England. He will then conduct an independent review to identify priority areas for future policy development which will contribute to the development of a new health strategy. The Terms of Reference for the review have been placed in the Library.

Health Status Indicators

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what indicators his Department uses to monitor the health status of (a) infants and children, (b) adults and (c) pensioners; and if he will make a statement. [8875]

Ms Jowell: The Department makes use of a wide range of information on births and deaths registrations, population surveys and health service information to gain an understanding of the health status of different groups in the population.

Sources available in the Library include:

- the Chief Medical Officer's Annual Report, a key element of which is a review of the health status of the general population;
- the Public Health Common Data Set, which includes a wide variety of indicators;
- Health of the Nation Briefing Packs, which include information on progress towards a limited range of targets.

I announced on 7 July our intention to develop a new strategy for a healthier nation. It will take account of population groups—children, the working age population and elderly people—and priorities will be chosen where there is clear scope for measurable progress.

NHS Estates

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the annual report and accounts 1996–97 of the NHS Estates Executive Agency. [9001]

Mr. Milburn: I have received the report and copies have today been laid in accordance with section 5 of the Exchequer and Audit Departments Act 1921. Copies are also available in the Library.

Dementia

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department will introduce a national protocol on (a) diagnostic tests and (b) new treatments for Alzheimer's disease. [7748]

Mr. Boateng: We have no plans to introduce a national protocol for diagnostic tests; however, we are considering whether to issue guidance to the National Health Service on new medicines for Alzheimer's disease.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will issue new guidance to health authorities on how they should assess the needs for people with dementia and their carers in their area. [7749]

Mr. Boateng: In March this year guidance was issued to assist managers in purchasing authorities in their responsibilities for meeting the needs of older people, including those with dementia, and their carers. It is entitled "A Handbook on Mental Health for Older People" and copies are available in the Library.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has provided to health authorities on the prescribing of donepezil for people with Alzheimer's disease. [7750]

Mr. Milburn: We are considering whether it would be useful to health authorities to issue guidance on the introduction of donepezil for patients with mild to moderate forms of Alzheimer's disease.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will issue guidance to health authorities for the establishment of dementia care management units to assume organisational responsibility for the planning and provision of services for people with dementia. [7753]

Mr. Boateng: Old Age Psychiatry Services are the core National Health Service service for assessing and managing dementia as well as other health problems in older people. Purchasing authorities have been given guidance on the provision of services for people with dementia in the "Handbook on the Mental Health of Older People" which was published in March this year and copies are available in the Library.

Long-stay Facilities

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the extra costs to local authorities caused by the closure of NHS long-stay facilities. [7751]

Mr. Boateng: No such estimate has been made. Where substantial changes in service provision, including the closure of part or all of a hospital, are proposed they are always the subject of public consultation. Proposals would not be agreed unless acceptable alternative services were available. There is no direct link between a reduction in the number of long-stay hospital beds and costs to local authorities.

The Department monitors the average daily number of available beds in the three main service areas where long-stay provision is concentrated. The latest figures on the number of beds available are set out in the table.

Average daily number of beds available

Speciality	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Geriatric	40,000	37,000	37,000	34,000

NHS Finance

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will require health authorities separately to identify expenditure on specific clinical needs. [7752]

Mr. Milburn: Health authorities already identify and report expenditure on a range of broad areas of activity as part of regular performance monitoring. Expenditure on specific clinical needs is not identified.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each of his approved PFI hospital projects the outstanding contractual issues which have to be resolved. [7789]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 10 July 1997]: Two Private Finance Initiative schemes, at Dartford and Gravesham National Health Service Trust and Norfolk and Norwich Health Care NHS Trust, have reached agreement to proceed to financial close. Although both trusts have signed commercial contracts with their partners, the consortia have yet to agree final terms with their respective financiers. To disclose this information at this stage may affect the negotiating positions of the trusts.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Statutory Instruments

Sir Richard Body: To ask the President of the Council what percentage of statutory instruments introduced into Parliament in (a) 1976, (b) 1986 and (c) 1996 had the European Union as their legislative source; if she will take steps to introduce a physical distinction in the publication of such statutory instruments in the future; and if she will make a statement. [6482]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The total number of Statutory Instruments (SIs) registered as General Instruments in 1976, 1986 and 1996 was:

Year	Number of SIs

Source:

Statutory Instruments Publication Office. Statutory Instruments are classified as General Instruments if they are in the nature of a public general Act. SIs may also be registered as Local Instruments if they are in the nature of local and personal or private Acts. SIs implementing EC legislation will always be classified as General Instruments.

It is not possible without incurring disproportionate cost to determine how many of these SIs were introduced to comply with European Community obligations. However, the number of SIs, including amending Instruments, registered in the three years concerned to comply with European Community Directives which were still in force on 31 October 1996 was:

1986	28

Source:

Butterworth's EC Legislation Implementator 1997, Issue 1. The figures are based on material collated up to 31 October 1996 and relate to Directives in force on that date. Directives for which no implementing material has been identified, or which have been repealed or spent, have not been included.

I have no plans to introduce a physical distinction in the publication of such Statutory Instruments.

An earlier answer given by the then Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, Official Report, 28 January 1997, columns 131–32 gave figures for the number of Statutory Instruments implementing EC Directives between 1992 to 95. An error has since been discovered in the compilation of these figures and corrected figures are now given in the table.

1995	127

Select Committee on European Legislation

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Council how many (a) regulations, (b) directives and (c) other documents placed before the Council of Ministers were not considered by the Select Committee on European Legislation prior to the dissolution; and if she will take steps to notify (i) hon. Members and (ii) others of the outstanding documents. [8506]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: Forty-eight items of business were not considered by the Select Committee on European Legislation prior to the dissolution. These included 14 proposals for Councils regulations, nine proposals for Council directives and 25 other documents.

I have asked the Clerk of the Select Committee on European Legislation to send details of all remaining business before the Committee to the hon. Member, and to place a copy in the Library of the House.

TREASURY

Dividend Tax Credits

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the Government Actuary's estimates of the effect of the Budget proposal to end dividend tax credits on the ability of funded public sector pension schemes to meet their current and future liabilities; and if he will estimate the increased contributions that will be necessary for each scheme. [7403]

Dawn Primarolo: The position will vary from scheme to scheme depending on factors such as the type of scheme, the make up of its investment portfolio and its financial circumstances. For example, many schemes have surpluses which can be used to cushion the effect. Pension schemes should also benefit from improved company performance as a result of encouraging quality long-term investment.

The employers' contribution rates to each individual funded public sector scheme are determined by the funds' own actuarial adviser—not necessarily the Government Actuary. Actuarial revaluations take account of all relevant considerations, including the high returns earned by many funds in recent years, as well as the changes to dividend tax credits.

Tax Loopholes

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made for the financial years

1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000, of the tax yield for each of the measures enacted in the Finance Act 1997 aimed at closing tax loopholes. [3376]

Revenue effects of measures enacted in the 1997 Finance Bill aimed at closing tax loopholes

Notes:

[1] Negligible effects on revenue amounting to less than £3 million a year.

The yields represent the estimated direct effect of the measures with the existing level of activity. Without these measures there could be a more significant loss of revenue in the future.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the progress of the PFI project for the refurbishment of the Government Offices, Great George Street. [3369]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: Confidential discussions are continuing with Exchequer Partnership plc. A statement will be made in due course.

Tax Changes

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effects of the tax changes announced in the Budget on each decile of household income. [8142]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 11 July 1997]: Estimates of the impact on households of the tax changes announced in the Budget which we can directly model are contained in the table below. The figures show the direct impact of the measures on households. They do not reflect the long term benefits of the Budget, including New Deal spending which will help to move the long-term unemployed from welfare into work; and the long term benefits of reducing Government borrowing.

Average impact of main Budget tax measures, relative to indexation

Household income decile	Change (£ per week)	As a percentage of net income
Bottom	–0.30	–0.25
3	–0.45	–0.25

6	–1.30	–0.40
7	–1.55	–0.40
8	–1.80	–0.40
9	–2.05	–0.40
Top	–2.35	–0.30
Average	–1.20	–0.35

The figures include the main tax measures directly affecting households which can be modelled: reduction of VAT on fuel and power to 5 per cent., reducing the Gas Levy to zero, reducing in MIRAS to 10 per cent., real increase in tobacco duty of 5 per cent., real increase in road fuel duty of 6 per cent., and abolition of tax relief on Private Medical Insurance. Figures are rounded to the nearest 5p, or 0.05 per cent.

Household incomes are adjusted for differences in composition before allocating households to deciles.

The figures do not reflect that the tax changes affect households very differently depending upon their expenditure. For example estimates for the effect of the Budget on non-smokers are contained in the following table:

Average impact of main Budget tax measures (excluding tobacco), relative to indexation

Household income decile	Change (£ per week)	As a percentage of Net Income
Bottom	0.05	0.05

VAT (Fuel)

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect of his Budget's reduction in VAT on domestic fuel on (a) a single pensioner and (b) a pensioner couple on average income net of upratings of pensions and benefits. [7093]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 7 July 1997]: The reduction in VAT on fuel and power will mean an average fuel bill saving of 30p per week for single pensioners, and 40p per week for couples.

The state retirement pension is uprated in April of each year by the annual Retail Prices Index (RPI) inflation rate for the preceding September. Uprating by RPI reflects the prices paid for goods and services. So the real value of the pension is not affected.

Pensioners (Fuel Costs)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the average domestic fuel costs of a state retirement pensioner household for the last three years. [7649]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr Michael Colvin, dated 16 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on average domestic fuel costs of a state retirement pensioner household.

Average weekly expenditure on gas, electricity and other fuels by households all of whose adult members are above minimum state retirement age is estimated, from the Family Expenditure Survey (FES), to have been £10.90 in 1993–94, £10.60 in 1994–95, and £10.50 in 1995–96, and are estimated with an accuracy of plus or minus 35 pence.

FES figures are in the prices of each survey year and have not been adjusted for inflation. Any comparison between these figures would need to allow for inflation.

Earnings (Blackpool)

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of employees in Blackpool currently earning less than (a) £3.50 per hour, (b) £3.75 per hour and (c) £4 per hour. [8747]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Gordon Marsden, dated 16 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on earnings in Blackpool.

The latest information, from the New Earnings Survey (NES) April 1996, is given in the table below for the local authority district of Blackpool.

Employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey pay-period was not affected by absence, NES April 1996

Percentage of employees with hourly earnings (excluding overtime) less than:

Blackpool Local Authority	£3.50	£3.75	£4.00
Full-time	10.1	13.2	15.9
Part-time	18.4	25.0	30.3
All	12.2	16.2	19.5

Infant Mortality

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of infant mortalities for each of the last five years (a) in Stoke-on-Trent North, (b) by region and (c) nationally. [8878]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Joan Walley, dated 16 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to your recent parliamentary question on infant mortalities.

The following table shows infant mortality in Stoke on Trent North, numbers and rates per 1,000 live births, 1992–1996.

1994	8	7.5

National and regional data for 1992 to 1996 are available in ONS Monitor Series DH3 and ONS Annual Reference Volumes Series VS. These publications are available in the House of Commons Library.

Civil Service Pay

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the percentage increase in pay in 1997–98 for each grade of civil servant. [8430]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The information you request is not available.

For the Senior Civil Service, staff will receive increases between 0 per cent. and 10 per cent. depending on performance. The majority will receive increases of between 2.75 per cent. and 5.24 per cent. These awards will be staged, with a maximum of 2 per cent. payable from 1 April 1997 and the balance payable on 1 December 1997.

Since 1 April 1996, all government departments and agencies have had delegated responsibility for their own pay and grading arrangements for staff outside the Senior Civil Service. Thus it is no longer the case that single rates for individual grades apply across the Civil Service as a whole. Some information on the salaries of civil servants by their responsibility level is published annually in Civil Service Statistics, but this is not yet available for 1997–98.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Domestic Violence

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new measures he plans to introduce to protect women from domestic violence. [8802]

Mr. Michael: Domestic violence is a serious and widespread crime which damages the lives of victims in many respects, including housing, health and education, and destroys their freedom to live their lives without fear. The Government are committed to tackling domestic violence on every front.

We are currently examining the policies operating in this area, with a view to ensuring that we have an effective strategy against domestic and sexual violence. This strategy will take full account of our commitments to tackling crime in general, and to promoting equality and opportunity for women.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will conduct a national survey to establish the extent of violence against women in the United Kingdom. [8804]

Mr. Michael: The biennial British Crime Survey (BCS), conducted by the Home Office, already provides a regular measure of the extent of violence against both women and men in England and Wales. The next sweep of the BCS will take place in early 1998.

There is ongoing work by survey designers to improve the measurement of sexual and domestic violence in particular. The most recent sweep, in 1996, contained a particularly detailed component on domestic violence. The data are currently being analysed and findings will be published in due course.

Some main findings of the extent of violence against women from the 1996 BCS include:

There were 1,580,000 incidents of contact crime (wounding, common assault, robbery and snatch theft) aimed against women during 1995. In total, 39 per cent. of violent incidents measured by the BCS in 1995 were against women.

Women are less likely than men to be victims of all types of violence except domestic violence (defined as woundings and common assaults committed by relatives, partners, ex-partners or other household members). In 1995, 1.3 per cent. of women responding to the survey reported one or more such incidents, compared with 0.7 per cent. of men. The risks are greatest for women under thirty: 3.3 per cent. of such respondents reported a domestic violence incident in 1995 to the survey.

0.7 per cent. of women were victims of mugging (robbery and snatch theft) in 1995. The risks were highest for younger women: 1.3 per cent. of those aged 16 to 29 had been mugged compared with 0.5 per cent. of the older age group.

Thirty-five per cent. of violent incidents against women measured by the BCS were reported to the police in 1995. Muggings were most likely to be reported (71 per cent.), domestic incidents and other violence from people known to the victim the least likely (32 per cent. and 27 per cent. respectively).

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for the recording of figures on domestic violence as a separate category within official crime statistics. [8803]

Mr. Michael: Domestic violence is not a legally defined offence and the police are not currently required separately to identify domestic violence incidents in their statistical returns to the Home Office or to record the relationship between victim and offender. Crimes of domestic violence, if they reach the courts, could be prosecuted as threatening behaviour, affray, common assault, assault occasioning actual bodily harm, wounding or inflicting grievous bodily harm, indecent assault, rape or attempted rape, threats to kill, attempted murder, manslaughter or murder. For this reason it is difficult to assess centrally exactly how many cases of domestic violence occur in England and Wales. However, Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary collects some statistics on domestic violence and many police forces have their own arrangements for doing so. Other sources, such as the British Crime Survey, also provide useful statistical data on domestic violence.

Along with my colleagues in the Home Office and in other Government Departments, I am currently examining all the policies operating in the area of domestic violence, including the collection of statistics.

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many public interest immunity certificates have been issued in (a) 1997 and (b) each of the three previous years; and if he will provide a breakdown of the sources of requests for such certificates over that period. [8755]

Mr. Straw: In respect of my Department, six public interest immunity (PII) certificates have been issued in 1997. For each of the three previous years the available figures are:

Year	Number of PII certificates
1996	8

The certificates in question have been issued to protect information relating to the Security Service, and information relating to the security and operation of prisons. Of the 34 certificates issued since 1994, 19 have related to the Security Service and 15 to the Prison Service.

Prison and Probation Services

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to improve joint working between the prison and probation services. [7159]

Mr. Straw: It is very important that the prison and probation services work together closely and effectively. They are both responsible for protecting the public from harm; and where prisoners are released from sentences which are served partly in custody and partly in the community they are subject to probation service supervision. There need to be the best possible arrangements for sharing information about prisoners and co-ordinating effort on risk assessment, resettlement planning and programmes directed to reducing offending and dealing with problems such as drug or alcohol misuse, which get in the way of successful rehabilitation.

We therefore intend to look at ways in which the better integration of the two services could improve their performance and effectiveness. I have asked my hon. Friend the member for Gateshead, East and Washington, West (Ms Quin) who has ministerial responsibility for both services within the Home Office, to lead this work. This will include looking at the structure and organisation of the probation service, to complement the review of the prison service which is now under way.

A system of punishment which is effective, credible and commands public confidence requires both community and custodial sentences to work, and to work together. Having considered the options for improving on present arrangements, I shall consult all concerned before deciding on the best way forward.

The detailed terms of reference of this review are as follows:

To identify and assess options for closer and more integrated work between the Prison Service and the probation service of England and Wales, including any implications for the structure, organisation, management, working practices, human resources, funding and legislation governing the functions of those services;

To examine international models reflecting good practice and to identify any lessons concerning the effectiveness and efficiency, organisation and management structures exhibited by those models;

To provide a preliminary analysis of the options identified, including the estimated costs and benefits, as a basis for consultation.

This review will in due course form part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Alcopops

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has in relation to under age alcohol misuse, with particular reference to alcopops. [9307]

Mr. George Howarth: I am publishing tomorrow the conclusions of the Ministerial Group on alcopops. A copy of the Group's statement will be placed in the Library tomorrow at 10.30 am.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for project licences have been refused under section 5(5) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 on the ground that the applicant has failed to give adequate consideration to the feasibility of carrying out the research by means not involving the use of animals. [8328]

Mr. George Howarth: Licence applications are rarely formally refused because, when the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate indicate that they cannot recommend that a licence be granted, the applicant either amends the application or voluntarily withdraws it. Records which distinguish between refused and withdrawn applications are not collected centrally.

In considering licence applications, the Inspectorate ensures that adequate consideration has been given to replacement, reduction and refinement alternatives.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the project licence granted under article (10(3) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 to allow the use of non-purpose bred greyhounds in a study of osteoarthritis expires. [8456]

Mr. Howarth: This project licence is due to expire on 6 December 1997.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many licences in the (a) moderate and (b) substantial severity category of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 have been applied for in each year. [8749]

Mr. Howarth: The number of licences of moderate and substantial severity which were granted in each year is as follows:

Year	Moderate	Substantial
1989	449	14
1990	n/a	n/a
1991	303	11
1992	608	33
1993	617	16
1994	436	8
1995	392	23
1996	350	11

Figures for the years before 1991 (with the exception of 1989) and for applications (rather than granted licences) are not available centrally.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to prohibit the use of animals in cosmetic tests. [8669]

Mr. Howarth: There are no immediate plans to prohibit the use of animals in cosmetics tests.

We will be considering how to take this matter forward within Europe in a way which does not simply export these tests to countries which have less regard for animal welfare and less rigorous controls and does not unnecessarily disadvantage United Kingdom industry.

We must also ensure that any action we take does not compromise public safety and is legally defensible (both within the United Kingdom and Europe). In this regard, we note that the European Commission has postponed a proposed ban on the marketing of cosmetics tested on animals until June 2000, because alternative safety tests have not been validated and because the proposed ban may have contravened international trade rules.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what investigations are carried out by inspectors, employed under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, into the source of animals used in experimentation. [8671]

Mr. Howarth: Unless otherwise authorised, animals listed in Schedule 2 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 must be obtained from designated breeding or supplying establishments. All such establishments are regularly inspected and are expected to meet the standards set out in the "Code of Practice for the Housing and Care of Animals in Breeding and Supplying Establishments". Where authority is given to acquire Schedule 2 animals from a non-designated source, the Home Office Inspectorate will always ensure its suitability and reliability.

Approval for the acquisition of primates from overseas sources will be given only if the conditions at the breeding or supplying centre are acceptable to the Home Office. A number of such centres have been visited by a Home Office Inspector.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what breeds of dogs, other than greyhounds and purpose-bred animals, have been used in experiments in laboratories in each of the years since 1986; and from where these dogs were obtained. [8746]

Mr. Howarth: Information on the specific breeds used, other than greyhounds or beagles, is not collected centrally.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many animal experiments have been conducted since 1986 in connection with forensic studies; and what species of animals were used for this purpose. [8670]

Mr. Howarth: This information has been collected only since the start of 1995 and was published in table 1 of the "Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals, Great Britain, 1995". During 1995, 139 procedures were carried out for the purpose of forensic enquiries. The species of animals involved were rats, rabbits, equidae, sheep and cattle.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of his Department's inspectors employed since 1986 under the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876 have previously performed experiments on animals in commercial, academic or Government laboratories. [8664]

Mr. Howarth: The Cruelty to Animals Act 1876 was repealed by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986.

Information about whether ex-inspectors carried out experiments on animals either under the 1876 Act or the current Act is not kept centrally. However, we believe that 27 inspectors employed under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 had carried out such experiments before joining the Inspectorate.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inspections have been made by his Department's inspectors, under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; and what proportion of these visits were unannounced. [8748]

Mr. Howarth: The number of visits to establishments carried out by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate from 1989 to 1996 inclusive is 23,005. 19,902 were for the purpose of inspection or the monitoring of research projects; the remainder were for the purpose of maintaining scientific or professional skills, representing the Home Office or furthering Home Office policy. This information is published each year in the "Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals, Great Britain". The proportion of visits to Departments within establishments which were announced is 71 per cent.

Prior to 1989, visits to Departments rather than establishments were counted, and details of the purpose of the visit and whether it was announced or unannounced are not available.

Youth Crime

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money he has allocated for the prevention of youth crime for 1997–98; and what were the equivalent figures for (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [8432]

Mr. Michael: Not all the expenditure on youth crime initiatives can be separated out from Home Office programmes. A total of £1,723,000 is committed for 1997–98 for such programmes, much of which will support initiatives of this kind.

This is divided between the core funding of Crime Concern, which takes particular interest in youth crime prevention, although the Home Office funding is for the organisation's running costs rather than for the direct support of initiatives; the Home Office's Programme Development Unit which supports innovative projects aimed at reducing criminality among young people; the Safer Cities programme and support for two Home Start projects.

The equivalent figure for (a) 1995–96 was £1,800,000; and for (b) 1996–97 it was £1,695,000.

Future expenditure plans will be considered in the context of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Intrusive Surveillance

Ms Fiona Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for consultation on the intrusive surveillance code of practice required under Part III of the Police Act 1997. [9290]

Mr. Michael: On 14 July, I signed an Order to commence section 101 of the Police Act 1997 on 5 August 1997. This will allow the public consultation exercise to begin on that date. Officials will send copies of the draft code of practice to a number of individuals and organisations, inviting their comments by the end of September. Copies will be placed in the Library and additional copies of the draft code are obtainable from the Home Office.

Fire Safety

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to make regulations to satisfy the outstanding fire safety requirements of the EC Framework and Workplace directives. [9165]

Mr. George Howarth: Having consulted my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, we intend shortly to make suitable regulations. These will build on those proposals on which consultation was completed last year and will be accompanied by a simple guidance package. We hope to lay the regulations before Parliament rises for the summer recess. I understand from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland that she intends to lay equivalent regulations for Northern Ireland before the end of the year.

Yugoslavia (Displaced Persons)

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes are being made in the handling of applications from refugees and displaced persons from the former Yugoslavia following the Dayton Peace agreement. [9463]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: All applications for asylum will continue to be considered on their individual merits within the terms of the 1951 Untied Nations Convention relating to the Status of Refugees.

Since 1992, exceptional leave to remain has been granted to those who came from Bosnia but did not qualify for refugee status. The situation now, following the Dayton Agreement and subsequent developments, makes that policy unnecessary and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) have recently said that certain categories of persons could reasonably be expected to return to Bosnia.

The Government share UNHCR's hope that many Bosnians will wish to return home voluntarily. However, leave will not be withdrawn from Bosnians already granted exceptional leave to remain on having been refused refugee status, or from former Yugoslavs admitted under the Temporary Protection Programme; and, subject to personal acceptability, extensions of stay will normally be granted.

From today, applications for asylum from Bosnians will be considered on their merits in the normal way. Exceptional leave will not be granted automatically if the application is unsuccessful, but it will be considered in individual cases where there are genuine humanitarian reasons. Those falling within the categories who UNHCR say may reasonably be expected to return home will no longer, in general, be granted exceptional leave to remain and will be expected to return home.

Since August 1992, as a concession, the United Kingdom has not normally sought to return asylum seekers from the former Yugoslavia to safe third countries through which they had transited, if they had spent less than a day or two in each country. Asylum applicants from the States of the former Yugoslavia will now be treated in the same way as those from other countries. This will mean that they will be returned to safe third countries where we are satisfied that the applicant is not a national or citizen of the third country concerned; the applicant would be safe in the third country concerned; and the applicant either had an opportunity to claim asylum in the country concerned or was otherwise admissible there. However, we would not normally remove an applicant where there were immediate family members in the United Kingdom, such as a spouse, a minor child or, if the applicant were a minor child, a parent.

Since December 1992, nationals of the former Yugoslavia have been granted a visa abroad where they could demonstrate that they had a claim to refugee status or had been displaced from their home as a result of the conflict and that they had close family here. In view of the improved situation in the former Yugoslavia, this concession is now being withdrawn and the normal arrangement for obtaining visas to claim refugee status in the United Kingdom will apply.

We have agreed with UNHCR that the temporary protection programmes announced in 1992 and 1995 are to end, although those people already accepted who can go straight into the community will continue to be allowed to take up their places. A total of 2,660 people have been brought to the United Kingdom and given temporary refuge under the two programmes.

Judicial Reviews

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many decisions by his Department were challenged by way of judicial review in each Parliamentary session since 1991–92; and if he will list in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld, (b) the court found for the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgment and (d) the Department appealed successfully against the judicial review decision. [7841]

Mr. Straw: The detailed information requested is not readily available. The Home Office has been involved in several thousand judicial review applications since 1991–92. It is estimated that the Department's decision was upheld in more than 90 per cent. of these applications. The table below gives some information on immigration cases, which form the vast majority of all judicial review applicants brought against the Home Office.

			Outcome of cases where leave granted
Year	Total number of judicial review applications lodged	Total number of judicial applications where leave granted	Applications granted	Applications dismissed	Applications withdrawn
1991	506	93	33	40	33
1992	544	104	14	27	58
1993	668	111	15	18	61
1994	935	162	68	32	110
1995	1,220	258	99	39	71
1996	1,748	301	131	42	105

The figures relate to the number of applications dealt with at each stage during the year concerned. For any given year, the total number of cases decided will not necessarily tally with the number of applications in which leave was granted, since applications may not be dealt with in the year in which they are lodged.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions since 1991–92 legislation has been introduced by the Department (a) to remove effects of judicial review decisions and (b) to implement them. [7842]

Mr. Straw: The information sought is not kept in a readily retrievable form. It could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Murder and Manslaughter

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were convicted of (a) murder and (b) manslaughter in each year since 1967 in (i) England and (ii) Wales; and in each case what proportion this represents of the population. [8125]

Mr. Michael: The figures for England and Wales are shown at table A. Figures are not available for England and Wales separately before 1979. Tables B and C show figures for each country for the period 1979–95.

Perjury

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the law of perjury. [7918]

Mr. Michael: We have no plans to do so at present. Criminal sanctions are already available in appropriate cases. A person knowingly making a false report to the police which tends to show that they have evidence material to police inquiry may be charged with wasting police time and could be liable on conviction to imprisonment up to six months or a fine of £1,000. A person making a statement to a court which is material to the proceedings and which they know to be false may be liable to conviction for perjury and could face a prison sentence for up to seven years. The more serious common law offence of perverting, or attempting to pervert, the course of justice is committed where a person acts or embarks upon a course of conduct which has a tendency to, and is intended to, pervert the course of justice. It is a matter for the prosecuting authorities to decide in any such case whether there is sufficient evidence to mount a prosecution and whether it would be in the public interest. There are around 200 prosecutions for perjury a year, of which a high proportion of cases result in convictions, as indicated in my reply to my hon. Friend on 26 June, Official Report, column 574.

Wrongful Convictions

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 22 May, Official Report, column 111, how many outstanding claims for financial compensation for individuals found by the Court of Appeal to have been wrongfully convicted have been outstanding for (a) more than 12 months, (b) more than two years, (c) more than three years, (d) more than four years and (e) more than five years. [7395]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 14 July 1997]: There is a total of 149 cases outstanding where, following the reversal of a conviction, a decision to pay compensation has been taken in principle but the claim has yet to be settled. Of these, (a) 11 have been outstanding for more than 12 months; (b) 102 for more than two years; (c) six for more than three years; (d) one for more than four years; and (e) 16 for more than five years. By far the most significant factors in delaying a settlement in these cases have been either delay by applicants or by their representatives in submitting final claims, or reluctance on their part to accept the offers made.

The figure at (b) include 93 claims stemming from the quashing of a high number of drink-driving convictions in Greater Manchester following possible contamination of blood samples.

I regret that in the answer I gave to my hon. Friend on 22 May, a number of these cases were overlooked: at that time the total number outstanding was in fact not 52, as given in my reply, but 106, in 54 of which representations had yet to be received from the claimants. Of the 93 such cases currently outstanding, representations are awaited from 41 and the remaining 52 are being processed.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Next Steps Agencies

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many next steps executive agencies have regional administrative structures; and, of these, how many have boundaries that coincide with those of the Government Offices for the Regions; and if he will make a statement. [8437]

Mr. Kilfoyle: There are 37 executive agencies that have regional administrative structures. Of these, three have boundaries that coincide with the Government Offices for the Regions. They are Social Security Benefits Agency, Social Security Child Support Agency and Social Security Contributions Agency.

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what procedures exist concerning the accountability of next steps executive agencies to Ministers for the process of determining the content of next steps agency framework document; and if he will make a statement. [8349]

Mr. Kilfoyle: It is the responsibility of the departmental Minister to set the framework within which the department's executive agencies are to operate and therefore to determine which matters are to be assigned to a Chief Executive under the terms of an Agency's framework document.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Soil Erosion (Sheep)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to minimise the erosional impact of sheep in the hills. [7839]

Mr. Morley: Erosion is a widespread, natural process which may be exacerbated by a range of causes, including land use practice, atmospheric pollution and recreational activities. Earlier this year MAFF commissioned a three year project to identify the precise causes of upland erosion and propose potential solutions. Agri-environment schemes including Environmentally Sensitive Areas, the Moorland Scheme and (in England only) Countryside Stewardship are contributing to the positive maintenance of upland habitats, including through the encouragement of extensive grazing and improved management practices.

Piglets (Tail Docking)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to secure compliance with the prohibition on the routine tail docking of piglets in the Welfare of Livestock Regulations 1994; and if he will make a statement. [7857]

Mr. Morley: The docking of piglets' tails is not unlawful under the Welfare of Livestock Regulations 1994 where there is evidence on the farm that injuries to animals are otherwise likely to occur. We are currently examining the application of these rules to make sure that the objective of protecting pig welfare is properly met.

Genetically Modified Food

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he has commissioned into (a) segregation and (b) labelling of genetically modified food; what estimate he has made of the time scale by which (a) and (b) will be feasible; and if he will make a statement. [8499]

Mr. Rooker: The safety of foods produced using genetic modification is assessed by the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes and is underpinned by scientific research work carried out by the Department. I see no need for the Government to commission research into the segregation or labelling of genetically modified food. The Government is pressing at European level for all foods which may contain genetically modified ingredients to be clearly labelled whether they have been fully segregated or not.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to require labelling on all foods that contain genetically modified ingredients, informing potential customers to that effect; and if he will make a statement. [8593]

Mr. Rooker: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 9 June 1997, Official Report, columns 356–57.

Beef (Intervention Stores)

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many tons of beef held in United Kingdom intervention stores have been removed and made inedible. [8638]

Mr. Rooker: A total of 254 tonnes of intervention beef taken into UK intervention stores prior to 27 March 1996 has been disposed of by incineration.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas Report

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reply he proposes to make to the Second Report of the Agriculture Committee on Environmentally Sensitive Areas and Other Schemes Under the Agri-Environment Regulation (HC 45 (1996–97)), published on 19 March 1997. [9166]

Mr. Morley: The Government has today published its response to the conclusions and recommendations of the Agriculture Select Committee's report on these agri-environment schemes. Copies of the publication have been placed in the Library of the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Immigration

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what instructions have been given to British high commissions and embassies about dealing with appeals and applications for leave to appeal in respect of husbands, wives, fiancés and fiancées who were refused admission under the primary purpose rule; and what assessment he has made of how long such applicants will have to wait. [5526]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 7 July 1997]: In cases where an application has been refused solely on primary purpose grounds and an appeal is pending the Home Office will remit the papers to the Entry Clearance Officer for issue of entry clearance, subject to there being no change of circumstances. In cases where no appeal was lodged, posts will issue if further representations are made, subject to no change in circumstances. Where applicants have been refused and an appeal dismissed, applicants may re-apply for entry clearance in the normal way.

In fairness to those who have already re-applied, any new re-application resulting from the abolition of the Primary Purpose rule which is submitted by an individual who has already completed the appeal process will take its normal place in the queue. The maximum waiting time laid down for considering settlement re-applicants is nine months, although in practice the actual waiting time is significantly less than the maximum allowed. We shall continue to make every effort to process these re-applications quickly.

Land Mines

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress being made towards the banning of the trade in anti-personnel mines; and what has been the reaction of foreign Governments to Her Majesty's Government's activities in this area. [8124]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The United Kingdom's ban on export of anti-personnel landmines is in place. We are considering the legislation needed to implement bans on transfer, import, production and trade through the UK. We are also considering the circumstances in which movements of anti-personnel landmines might need to continue and will inform Parliament once we have reached conclusions. Any exceptions will end as necessary in 2005 or according to the provisions of an effective international agreement when it comes into force, whichever comes first.

Our new policy on anti-personnel landmines had been widely welcomed.

Russia

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to President Yeltsin concerning the law on freedom of conscience and religious associations passed by the Russian Parliament. [8450]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The EU Troika Ambassadors in Moscow carried out a démarche on Mr. Sidorov, the Deputy Foreign Minister, on 9 July. The démarche calls upon President Yeltsin not to allow the law to come into effect in its present form, since it appears to contravene both the Russian Constitution and Russia's OSCE and Council of Europe human rights obligations.

Mr. Sidorov confirmed that the EU démarche would be brought to President Yeltsin's attention.

Venezuela (British Nationals)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date and at what time the British embassy in Caracas (i) was informed and (ii) informed the Foreign Office in London of the sentence imposed on James Miles and Paul Loseby. [8849]

Mr. Fatchett: The British Embassy in Caracas was informed of Mr. Miles and Mr. Loseby's sentence on 8 July at 21.45 hours BST. The Embassy immediately informed this Department by fax.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received concerning James Miles and Paul Loseby from sources other than the Venezuelan authorities. [8780]

Mr. Fatchett: Consular staff in Caracas have received reports concerning James Miles and Paul Loseby from their lawyers, representatives of the Anglican church and journalists who have visited them.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will obtain a copy of the transcript of the court hearing concerning James Miles and Paul Loseby which took place in Caracas on 2 July. [8850]

Mr. Fatchett: The Venezuelan court process does not involve a "hearing". A copy of the written summary of evidence and statements of the Court's decision has been obtained by this Department and can be made available to my hon. Friend if he so wishes.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date in 1997 the British embassy in Caracas made representations to the Venezuelan Government concerning the cases of Paul Loseby and James Miles. [8779]

Mr. Fatchett: No representations have been made this year. The British Ambassador in Caracas wrote to the Judge on 10 April and 10 July to request medical checks for Paul Loseby.

Amsterdam Treaty

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for the implementation of the provisions of the Amsterdam treaty if it is not ratified by one or more of the member states. [8575]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Treaty must be ratified by all 15 Member States in accordance with their respective constitutional requirements, before it can come into force. Should any Member State fail to ratify the Treaty, it could not be implemented in its current form.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if the definition of human rights, as referred to in the new article F1 of the treaty on European Union as created by the draft Amsterdam treaty, will be the same as that in the European convention on Human Rights; [8852]

(2) if the definition of human rights, as referred to in the new article F1 of the treaty on European Union as created by the draft Amsterdam treaty, will include (a) freedom of information, (b) rights to welfare, (c) rights for the disabled, (d) rights for gays and lesbians, (e) employment rights, (f) the rights of refugees and asylum seekers, (g) health and safety provisions, (h) the right to strike and (i) social rights; [8854]

(3) what scope there is for the definition of human rights as referred to in the new article F1 of the treaty on European Union as created by the draft Amsterdam treaty to be widened beyond the scope of the European convention on Human Rights; [8853]

(4) what is the definition of human rights as referred to in the new article F1 of the treaty on European Union as created by the draft Amsterdam treaty. [8851]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The reference to human rights and fundamental freedoms in Article F.1 of the Treaty on European Union (TEU) is clarified by Article F.2 as "fundamental rights, as guaranteed by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights (ECHR) and Fundamental Freedoms signed in Rome on 4 November 1950 and as they result from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, as general principles of Community law." The second part of that definition may differ from or go beyond the rights guaranteed by the ECHR. Article F.2 does not by itself confer such rights as freedom of information, welfare rights, rights for disabled people, rights for gays and lesbians, employment rights, rights of refugees and asylum seekers, health and safety provisions, the right to strike or social rights. It requires EU and Community Acts in any of those areas to respect the relevant requirements of the ECHR or other rules on fundamental rights.

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the outcome of his Department's investigation into the use of British-made equipment by the Indonesian authorities during recent events in Bandung and Jakarta. [8732]

Mr. Fatchett: We are studying the information available regarding the alleged use of UK supplied water-cannon in Bandung and Jakarta in June and July 1996. No firm conclusions have yet been drawn.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Live Performances

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to ensure the greater dissemination of live performances from national lottery-funded venues. [8672]

Mr. Banks: We place the highest importance on access to cultural and sporting events. The Government are reviewing all aspects of the National Lottery. A White Paper setting out our proposals in greater depth will be published shortly.

Recreation and Leisure Facilities

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the income from recreation and leisure facilities for each local authority in the north-west in the last available year. [8540]

Mr. Banks: The following table details the income from recreation and leisure facilities for each local authority in the north-west for 1995–96, the latest figures available. The table is based on data collected annually from local authorities by the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions through its Revenue Outturn exercise.

Broadcasting

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to ensure diversity, choice and quality in the provision of radio programming in the independent broadcasting sector. [8687]

Mr. Fisher: The Radio Authority is statutorily responsible for licensing and regulating independent radio services in the UK. The Radio Authority is already required under the Broadcasting Act 1990 to do all that it can to secure the provision within the United Kingdom of a diversity of national services, each catering for the tastes and interests different from those catered for by others, and to secure a range and diversity of local services. The Authority is also required under the 1990 Act to facilitate the provision of licensed services which (taken as a whole) are of high quality.

The substantial increase in the number of independent stations presided over by the Authority over the past six years has fostered diversity and choice. In my hon. Friend's constituency, for example, there are now three national and four local independent stations (including the newly awarded small-scale local licence for Huddersfield), compared with none and two respectively. Positive quality is not so readily measured, but worthwhile radio programming is not confined to the BBC; audience figures suggest that the public is satisfied with the output of the independent sector and the Authority actively monitors programming to hold broadcasters to their promises of performance and to maintain standards.

Film

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money has been announced for film from the national lottery so far; and how much is it expected will be allocated to film by 2002. [8016]

Mr. Tom Clarke: Original estimates in 1995 were that around £100 million would be available for film production, distribution and cinema improvements across the UK by 2000. So far almost £90 million has been awarded to film and cinema projects. In addition, over £90 million has been allocated over the next six years to three National Lottery film franchises.

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list for the Review of the British Film Industry (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8238]

Mr. Clarke: The Film Review Group is planning to publish its report early next year, and will continue to meet thereafter to discuss any follow-up. There is no fixed budget or costing for the review; the Review Group will be supported by officials from my Department, and as required, resources from DCMS research and consultancy budgets.

Hotel Rating

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what advice he has given organisations introducing hotel ratings systems on the merits of a quality versus a facilities-based system. [8168]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 14 July 1997]: It is for the organisations concerned to make their own decisions. my view is that facilities, services and quality are all important and should increase at each level. I therefore welcome the joint ETB/AA/RAC scheme announced in February, which will rate hotels in this way.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer of 9 June, Official Report columns 293–96, on aid and trade projects with Indonesia, what is the location of the 150/1500kv substation; what type of substation it is; who are the primary beneficiaries of the project; and what are the mixed credits involved. [8766]

Clare Short: The power transmission substations for both 150kV and 500kV supplies are all sited on Java in the following locations:

New Tangareng, Cenkareng, Bogor Baru, Sentul, Pondok Pinang, Jombang, Rancakasumba, Cikasungka, Bandung Selatan, Margahayu, New Padalarang, Grati, Surabaya Selatan and Surabaya Selatan.

The primary beneficiaries are domestic, commercial, industrial and public sector electricity consumers. Mixed credit financing for a sum of up to £15,516,493, representing 35 per cent. of the UK content of the project, has been made available in support of a contract awarded to GEC Alsthom-Cegelec Substation Projects Limited.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list each aid project currently funded by her Department in Indonesia, indicating (a) the type of agreement, (b) the allocated expenditure, (c) the location, (d) the sector involved and (e) the expected completion date. [8762]

Clare Short: Details of the projects in Indonesia currently funded by the Department for International Development are set out in the following tables.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer of 9 June, Official Report, columns 293–96, on aid and trade projects with Indonesia if she will list the location of each project listed. [8761]

Clare Short: The locations of the aid and trade projects listed in my response of 9 June, Official Report, columns 293–96, are set out in the following table.

The locations by province of the bridges funded under Phase II of the Steel Bridging project, were listed in a previous reply (Official Report of 15 June 1995, column 632).

The power transmission substations for both 150kV and 500kV supplies are all sited on Java in the following locations:

New Tangareng, Cenkareng, Bogor Baru, Sentul, Pondok Pinang, Jombang, Rancakasumba, Cikasungka, Bandung Selatan, Margahayu, New Padalarang, Grati, Surabaya Selatan and Surabaya Selatan.

I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave to her earlier question (8766).

Cambodia

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid programmes for Cambodia are currently in place; and what are her future plans for aid to Cambodia. [8699]

Clare Short [holding answer 15 July 1997]: Under our bilateral development programme, which will be worth some £3 million in 1997–98, we are supporting projects in health, education, urban poverty and landmine clearance.

In health, we are financing four projects designed to improve Cambodian capacity to deliver basic health services to poorer people, improve reproductive health especially for women, reduce malaria and slow the spread of HIV and other sexually transmitted diseases. In education, we are helping to improve the teaching of English in secondary schools and funding the preparation of a master plan for teacher training. In urban poverty, we are funding a UN project designed to improve physical and social conditions for poor people in Phnom Penh. We are also contributing with other donors to a UN Trust Fund which finances landmine clearance.

In addition, under our Joint Funding Scheme, we are helping to finance the programmes of a number of British Non-Governmental Organisations involved in areas such as health, community development, landmine clearance and support for landmine victims.

We are obviously concerned by recent events in Cambodia and will be monitoring the situation there closely through the British Embassy. The FCO has advised UK nationals to leave Cambodia, but our understanding is that most UK aid staff intend to stay. Given that our programme is designed to help poorer people in Cambodia, we propose to maintain it.

As the UK delegation at the recent Cambodia Consultative Group meeting in Paris made clear, future commitments of government to government assistance will depend not only on political stability, but also on the Cambodian Government's performance on the rule of law, transparent financial management and forestry policy. A key factor will be progress towards free and fair democratic elections scheduled for 1998.

Departmental Budgets

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what new plans she has to introduce cuts and savings in her Department as a result of the effect on her Department's budgets for 1997–98 and 1998–99 of the upward revisions to the GDP deflators in the Budget on 2 July; and if she will make a statement. [8314]

Clare Short [holding answer 14 July 1997]: All Departments are reallocating spending within their Departmental ceilings as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if, following the recent Budget, she will give her estimate of the total real level of her Department's budget, in 1995–96 prices, in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99; if she will estimate what such figures were for (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1998–99 following the November 1996 Budget on the basis of the estimates of the GDP deflator contained in that Budget; and if she will make a statement. [8313]

Clare Short [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The figures requested for my Department's spending plans within the Control Total are as follows: (a) £2,071 million, (b) £2,140 million, (1) £2,120 million, (2) £2,177 million.

The figures for 1997–98 have not been adjusted to take account of the Summer Supplementary Estimates presented to Parliament on 8 July but not yet approved.

Commercial Lobbyists

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department have attended meetings with organisations representing (i) commercial and (ii) non-commercial interests organised by commercial lobbying firms; and if she will introduce a register of such meetings; [8084]

(2) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department have met commercial lobbyists to discuss matters relating to the business of her Department; and if she will introduce a register of such meetings. [8083]

Clare Short: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained in response to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn), Official Report, 2 June 1997, column 99, Ministers and officials in the Department receive deputations from many groups who are concerned to press their own interests or those of their clients, which Ministers and officials take due care to consider within the wider public interest and Government policy. The Department keeps normal records of such meetings. It is not practicable to distinguish particular groups as lobbyists, nor is it practicable to keep a register of such meetings.

Know How Consultancies

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what was the value of Know How consultancy contracts in each year since the scheme was established; and what value of such contracts was awarded in each year to companies headquartered in Scotland. [8286]

Clare Short [holding answer 15 July 1997]: Information on Know How consultancy contracts awarded before 1992–93 is not centrally recorded and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The value of such contracts let in the United Kingdom from 1992–93 was:

Financial year	Total value £
1992–93	27,709,426
1993–94	55,965,059
1994–95	59,220,754
1995–96	49,322,326
1996–97	85,072,905
1997–98 (to date)	16,929,706

Contracts awarded to companies with headquarters in Scotland are not recorded separately.

Development Assistance

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if it is the Government's policy that the United Kingdom should continue to give development assistance to Commonwealth countries which are in clear breach of the Harare Declaration. [8581]

Clare Short [holding answer 15 July 1997]: The UK Government's objective is the achievement of human rights for all people. We welcome and support the Commonwealth's commitment to the high standards set out in the Harare Declaration. A government's commitment to human rights will therefore be taken into account when decisions are made on development cooperation. My department will focus in its main efforts on promoting the rights essential for eliminating poverty and for achieving sustainable livelihoods and dignity for disadvantaged people in poor countries. This will frequently include aspects of good government and improved institutions. We will work in partnership with government, NGOs and civil society.

Kenya

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much bilateral development assistance her Department plans to spend in the Republic of Kenya in the years 1997–98 and 1998—99. [8580]

Clare Short [holding answer 15 July 1997]: Total bilateral aid expenditure is currently expected to be about £30 million in the 1997–98 financial year. It is not possible to predict the size of the programme for 1998–99 in advance of the annual Resource Allocation Round. But the level of assistance will take account of our current policy review of international development and the extent to which Britain can work in partnership with the Government of Kenya, as well as the private sector and NGOs, to reduce poverty in Kenya.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what changes she plans in her policy on giving development assistance to the Republic of Kenya following the recent suppression of democracy activists. [8582]

Clare Short [holding answer 15 July 1997]: The Government has made clear its concern about recent events in Kenya and its wish to see free and fair elections.

We will continue to urge the Government of Kenya to promote policies which demonstrate a clear commitment to the reduction of poverty. Our future policies will reflect the extent to which the Kenya Government is able to demonstrate a willingness to pursue pro-poor economic growth, more accountable government and greater respect of human rights and the rule of law.

Organic Produce

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the role of organic produce in assisting (a) Caribbean countries and (b) other developing countries to increase their international trade; and if she will make a statement. [8735]

Clare Short: I am keen to explore the potential for organic production in developing countries. My Department has seconded an agricultural specialist to the Delegation of the European Commission in the Eastern Caribbean to serve as Donor Co-ordinator to the Banana Industry. The Co-ordinator is working with Government and banana industry representatives on how the Windward Islands might best respond to any proposed erosion of the preferential trade agreement for bananas with the European Union. This agreement comes to an end in 2002. A range of options are being considered for improving the quality of Windward Islands' bananas and to identify niche markets.

Some Caribbean producers are beginning to take an interest in organic exports. The European Commission is helping farmers in the Windward Islands to consider the potential of organic production.

My Department recently commissioned a study from the Henry Doubleday Research Association and Coventry University on the potential for further development of organic agriculture in sub-Saharan Africa. This study concluded that in the short-term there is limited scope for small-scale farmers in Kenya and Ghana to export organic produce. I will place a copy of this report in the Library of the House once it is finalised.

There is, however, considerable interest in adopting individual organic technologies which conserve resources. But, with the exception of some non-perishable crops such as coffee and tea, it would appear that, without some assistance, few resource-poor farmers will be able, in the short to medium-term, to achieve international standards of organic accreditation.

Through our Sustainable Agriculture Strategy my Department will work with poor farmers to develop and use technologies which conserve resources and minimise the use of agricultural pesticides. Where this is appropriate we will also help groups of farmers to achieve organic accreditation, thus increasing their incomes by exporting produce or selling to urban centres.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Travel-to-work Costs

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her estimate of (a) the cost to her Department and (b) the numbers gaining, if the costs of travel-to-work were disregarded in full for claimants of (i) income support, (ii) jobseeker's allowance, (iii) housing benefit and (iv) council tax benefit; and what is her estimate of the costs and numbers gaining if such costs were subject to a taper of (X) 70 per cent. and (Y) 50 per cent. for costs exceeding the level of the disregard. [2967]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Our objective is to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives. One of our first steps will be to help people off welfare and into work.

The information is in the table.

Disregarding travel-to-work costs in calculating earnings

Benefit	All costs		70 per cent. taper		50 per cent. taper
	Costs £ million	Gainers	Cost £ million	Gainers	Cost £ million	Gainers
Income support/income-based jobseeker's allowance cases	15	80,000	10	80,000	[1]—	80,000
Contribution-based jobseeker's allowance only cases	[1]—	10,000	[1]—	10,000	[1]—	10,000
Housing benefit	70	160,000	50	160,000	35	160,000
Council tax benefit	20	120,000	15	120,000	10	110,000

[1] Denotes negligible cost i.e. less than £2.5 million.

1. Modelled on the 1994–95 Family Resources Survey (FRS) uprated to 1997–98 benefit levels and earnings.

2. Costs are rounded to the nearest £5 million, gainers to the nearest 10,000.

3. The estimate for income support and jobseeker's allowance (JSA) has been combined due to difficulties in separately identifying the unemployed not in receipt of contributory benefit on the FRS.

4. This is a deadweight estimate: there is insufficient information on which to estimate possible behavioural responses.

5. A number of benefit units on family credit would be better off on income support/JSA as a result of this change. It is assumed that they do move onto out of work benefits, and the IS/JSA(Income Based) cost is net of the family credit saving.

6. No figures are collected directly on the cost of running cars and motorcycles. Instead, costs are estimated using mileage rates (42 pence per mile for cars and nine pence per mile for motorcycles). Outlying cases have been ignored.

Pension Age

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of women aged 60 years in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available have ceased working and started to draw their state pension. [3847]

Mr. Denham: We will retain the Basic State Pension as the foundation of pension provision, increasing it at least in line with prices and we will review the central areas of insecurity for older people.

Information on women who were working prior to drawing their State Pension at State Pension Age and who then stopped working, is only available for those who were employed earners paying Class 1 National Insurance contributions (NICs) during the tax year in which they reached 60. This information, which excludes women who were self-employed or earning less than the lower earnings limit for paying NI contributions (currently £62.00), is used to derive the proportions provided in the table.

Year	Proportion of women aged 60 who have been awarded Retirement Pension and have paid Class 1 NICs in the tax year of their 60th birthday prior to that date, and whose employers have not subsequently paid any Category C NI contributions in respect of them during the remainder of that same year (per cent.)
1992–93	8
1991–92	8
1989–90	8
1988–89	7
1987–88	8

1. The figures are for Great Britain and are derived from the 1 per cent. sample of National Insurance Records analysed using the February 1996 version of the Lifetime Labour Market Database.
2. Category C contributions are paid by employers and are recorded on the P14 End of Year Return when an employee has no liability due to reaching State Pension Age. They may also be paid where people have multiple employments and earnings are expected to exceed the Upper Earnings Limit for National Insurance, thus avoiding a rebate of contributions. It has been assumed that for all women in the tax year of their 60th birthday, Class C contributions arise after that birthday and therefore signal that the woman has not retired reaching State Pension Age.
3. The percentages in the table are of the estimated resident population for each year supplied by the Population Estimates Unit, OPCS.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the cost per year of additional (a) income support, (b) housing benefit and (c) council tax relief if the pension age of women were raised to 65 years. [3846]

Mr. Bradley: The policies of the previous administration have created real poverty, growing inequality and widespread insecurity for pensioners. We believe that all pensioners should share fairly in the increasing prosperity of the nation.

The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Year	Income related benefit costs £ million
2035	300

1. Costs are estimated using the approach discussed in Appendix 1 of the discussion document Options for Equality in State Pension Age CM1723, adjusted to 1994–95 price levels and a phasing profile beginning in 2010 taking two years to achieve each single year of State Pension Age change.
2. As in the discussion document Options for Equality in State Pension Age Cm1723, estimates are provided for 2025, when the financial effects are likely to be at their maximum, and 2035 when the estimates should provide a reasonable representative indicator of the scale of the effects up to 2050.
3. Estimates are subject to considerable uncertainty and are rounded to the nearest £100 million. They should be interpreted as broad indicators rather than precise estimates.

Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the cost, in the latest year for which figures are available, of introducing an extension period for the payment of income support and jobseeker's allowance mortgage interest, equivalent to the scheme for extended payments of housing benefit and council tax benefit for the newly employed. [5445]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The estimated cost of introducing an extension period for the payment of mortgage interest, in line with current provisions available in both housing benefit and council tax benefit for the newly employed, is £4 million a year.

Earnings Disregards

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the current value of the earnings disregards which apply for housing benefit, income support and income-related benefit for the unemployed if they had been uprated in line with these benefits since 1988. [5443]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Our objective is to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives. We will develop a system that supports work, savings and honesty.

The information requested is in the table.

Benefit	Rate at introduction	Date of introduction	Current rate	Value if increased in line with benefit since date introduced
Income support	£5	April 1988	£5	£7.35
	£10	October 1996	£10	£10.25
	£15	April 1988	£15	£22.05
Income-based jobseeker's allowance	£5	October 1996	£5	£5.15
	£10	October 1996	£10	£10.25
	£15	October 1996	£15	£15.40

Benefit	Rate at introduction	Date of introduction	Current rate	Value if increased in line with benefit since date introduced
Housing benefit	£5	April 1988	£5	£7.35
	£10	April 1988	£10	£14.75
	£15	April 1988	£15	£22.05
	£15	April 1988	£25	£22.05
Housing benefit Child Care disregard	£40	October 1994	£60	£43.05

1. The Retail Price Index (all items) less rent, local taxes and Mortgage Interest payments as published by the Office of National Statistics, has been used in this table.
2. Jobseeker's allowance replaced income support and unemployment benefit as the main benefit for the unemployed in October 1996.
3. The standard disregard is £5 a week, but a higher £15 disregard is available to the following groups:—lone parents entitled to the lone parent premium; disabled people entitled to the disability premium; certain people aged over 60; carers entitled to the carer premium; members of certain specialist groups eg: part-time firefighters and reservists.
4. Couples have the first £10 of their earnings disregarded.
5. The £15 disregard in housing benefit was increased for lone parents to £25 in October 1990.
6. The £40 child care disregard in housing benefit was increased to £60 in April 1996. From April 1998 it will be increased further to a maximum of £100 a week where there are two or more children in the family.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the maximum amount of housing benefit available to single people under the age of 25 years in each local authority area. [8806]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Our objective is to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives. One of our first steps is to focus on helping 250,000 young people off welfare and into work.

The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Housing benefit recipients who are single and aged under 25, average weekly housing benefit by region and Great Britain—May 1995

	Average weekly housing benefit (£)

Notes:
1. Average amounts are rounded to the nearest 1 pence.
2. Analysis by local authority area is not available from our 1 per cent. sample enquiries.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people under the age of 25 years have had their housing benefit reduced as a result of the limitation of housing benefit to the single room rent; and what proportion of these have been (a) male and (b) female. [8805]

Mr. Bradley: The information is not yet available. However, we are monitoring the impact of the Single Room Rent, by collecting information from a sample of local authorities on an on-going basis, and data from that exercise are currently being analysed. The number of under 25s who have had their Housing Benefit reduced as a result of the Single Room Rent will be available from the Housing Benefit/Council Tax Benefit Summary Statistics 1997 which is due to be published in August. The summary will be available in the Library, but the split between males and females will not be available.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment she has made of the impact of the limitation of housing benefit to single room rent for single people under the age of 25 years; and what plans she has to end the limitation. [8807]

Mr. Bradley: These measures were introduced by the previous Government. We have, however, announced our intention to revoke the extension of the single room rent to people aged between 25 and 59. We are gathering evidence on the impact of the single room rent for the under 25s. Information is being collected from a sample of local authorities on an on-going basis and officials are meeting local authorities, advice agencies and rent officers to obtain early, direct information on the impact of the changes. A survey has also been commissioned to obtain information on Housing Benefit and the private rented sector, the results of which are expected next summer.

We will give the results careful consideration.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she plans to implement the limitation of housing benefit to single room rent for single people aged 25–60 years. [8799]

Mr. Bradley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the hon. Member for Glasgow Pollock (Mr. Davidson) on 18 June, Official Report, columns 215–16.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is her Department's policy on Benefit Agency staff giving their name during telephone calls to (a) hon. Members and (b) claimants; and when this was last revised; [8887]

(2) what advice is given to Benefit Agency staff for giving information on constituency cases to hon. Members (a) over the telephone and (b) in writing; when this was last revised; and to what grade of staff it is disseminated. [8889]

Mr. Field: One of our key aims is to improve the service provided to claimants and other customers. We want a service that is open and accessible. Queries on Benefits Agency operational matters are the responsibility of Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. I have asked him to write directly to the hon. Member and for his reply to be published with the answer.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 15 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to provide you with some further details following the answers to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking about the policy on Benefits Agency staff giving their name during telephone calls to honourable Members and claimants and about Benefit Agency staff giving information on constituency cases to honourable members over the telephone and in writing.

The Benefits Agency (BA) has a clear policy on the giving of names to any customer who contacts us by telephone, in person, or in writing and this is published in the BA Conditions of Service Manual. When dealing with honourable Members and members of the public, staff are required to give their name over the telephone on request. There has been no revision of this policy since its introduction in June 1992. We propose to include this service commitment in our revised BA Customer Charter which is due for publication later this year.

The BA Parliamentary Guide provides advice to staff on giving information on constituency cases to honourable Members. Copies of the relevant extracts are attached and have been placed in the Library. The Parliamentary Guide was revised in March 1997 and is available to all staff.

Guidance is also provided to staff on the disclosure of information to representatives acting on behalf of benefit customers, and includes reference to honourable Members. Where enquiries are received by telephone, the enquirer's name and telephone number should be taken so that their identity can be confirmed before any information is disclosed. Written requests for information from customer representatives normally include the customer's written consent, although in constituency cases it should be assumed that the customer has given their consent for information to be disclosed by the Benefits Agency. This guidance was last revised in 1994, and is available to all staff.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the staff numbers for each Benefit Agency local office broken down into (a) temporary staff, (b) permanent staff with less than five years service, (c) permanent staff with five to 10 years service, (d) permanent staff with 10 to 15 years service and (e) permanent staff with over 15 years service. [8890]

Mr. Field: An overall aim of the Government is to streamline services to provide better, simpler and more efficient services to clients. As the staffing of the Benefits Agency is a matter for Peter Mathison, its Chief Executive, I have asked him to write directly to the hon. Member and for his reply to be published with the answer.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 15 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for Benefits Agency staff numbers for each Benefits Agency office.

The information is not available in the format requested and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However information is available broken down by Benefits Agency Area Directorate and is shown in the attached tables.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Housing Costs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment she has made of the impact of (a) single people's and (b) lone parents' ability to pay their housing costs in their decision to (i) take up work and (ii) increase their hours of work; and what plans she has to take action on this issue. [8808]

Mr. Bradley: We recognise that concern about housing costs is a factor which single people and lone parents may take into account in decisions about taking up work or increasing their working hours.

We believe that work is the best form of welfare for people of working age. Our objective is to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives. We have appointed Martin Taylor, Chief Executive of Barclays plc, to spearhead a Whitehall task force to consider these issues and make recommendations.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the future of the jobseeker's allowance. [8592]

Mr. Bradley: The Government believes that work is the best form of welfare for people of working age. Our Welfare to Work objectives are to provide work incentives, to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to strike a new balance between responsibilities and rights. A programme of monitoring and evaluation is under way to enable us to ensure that jobseeker's allowance contributes to achieving our objectives.

WALES

Children (Adult Wards)

10. Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many children aged under 16 years were nursed in adult wards in hospitals in Wales during the last 12 months. [7004]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Welsh Office does not collect this information centrally. However, it is our policy that children should not be nursed on adult wards and health authorities are required to frame policies to ensure that adequate facilities are developed to meet their needs.

Green Pound

11. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will introduce a compensation package to offset revaluations of the green pound during 1997. [7005]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Paying this aid would have very significant implications for UK public expenditure. We are considering very carefully the case made by interested parties for payment, but we do have until 31 January 1998 to decide on the matter.

Welsh Assembly

12. Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the additional public expenditure needed each year to fund a Welsh Assembly. [7006]

Mr. Ron Davies: The White Paper, which will be published on 22 July, will include costings of our proposals.

13. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultation exercise he plans in respect of the establishment of an assembly for Wales. [7007]

Mr. Davies: A referendum in September.

15. Mr Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from residents in south Wales relating to an assembly for Wales. [7009]

Mr. Davies: My hon. Friends and I have received a number of representations from people all over Wales, both in favour and against the establishment of a Welsh Assembly.

17. Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the total cost to be incurred in the research, preparation, publication and distribution of the summary of the White Paper on a Welsh Assembly. [7011]

Mr. Davies: The work has not yet been completed and our estimated budget remains commercially confidential at this stage. However, we estimate that the total costs for information and publicity associated with the Referendum will be £700,000. Parliamentary approval for this expenditure will be sought in a Supplementary Estimate for Class XIV, vote 3. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £700,000 is being met by a repayable advance from the Contingencies Fund.

19. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will invite the Prime Minister to accompany him during his campaign in respect of the referendum on a Welsh Assembly. [7013]

Mr. Davies: Yes.

25. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the annual cost of the proposed Welsh Assembly; and if he will make a statement. [7019]

Mr. Davies: My Hon. Friends and I have received representations, both for and against a Welsh Assembly, which have referred to its annual costs.

27. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has in respect of the number of hon. Members from Wales who will sit at Westminster if an assembly is established. [7021]

Mr. Davies: None. Hon. Members representing Welsh constituencies will continue to be involved in considering new legislation that applies to Wales, and to represent their constituents on all matters.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of jobs which will be created as a result of the establishment of a Welsh Assembly. [7014]

Mr. Hain: It would be unrealistic to attempt to make detailed forecasts but I am confident that a democratically elected and responsive Assembly would give a significant boost to the competitiveness of the Welsh economy.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for what reasons the Welsh Assembly referendum will be held after the Scottish Parliament referendum; and if he will make a statement. [7575]

Mr. Davies: Our proposals for Wales are quite different from those for Scotland. We need to give people a chance to focus on the distinctive Welsh plans without being deflected by the Scottish debate.

Sustainable Development Strategy

14. Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to draw up a sustainable development strategy for Wales. [7008]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Government will be looking again at the 1994 UK Sustainable Development Strategy in the light of our own objectives. My right hon. Friend and I will consider the need for a separate Welsh strategy in the light of that review.

Health Authorities (Finance)

16. Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the (a) total business from the Welsh Office and (b) the total financial deficits of all health authorities in Wales at the latest available date. [7010]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Welsh Office provides funding to health authorities to purchase health care for their resident population. In 1996–97, the revenue funding provided by the Welsh Office to the five health authorities in Wales totalled £2,134 million.

The unaudited accounts for 1996–97, presently indicate that the in-year financial deficit in income and expenditure terms for the five health authorities for their first year of operation was £5.255 million.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what factors his Department applies to adjust the crude population share of health authorities in Wales when determining their funding needs. [8412]

Mr. Griffiths: The factors included in the capitation model to adjust the crude population share are as follows:

Non-psychiatric in-patient services: age and sex structure of population weighted for hospital bed days, Standardised Mortality Ratio;

Psychiatric in-patient services: age and sex structure of population weighted for average length of hospital stay;

Non-psychiatric outpatient services: age and sex structure of population weighted for hospital attendances, Standardised Mortality Ratio;

Community health services: age and sex structure of population weighted for staff contacts, estimated staff travelling distances, Standardised Mortality Ratio; and Ambulance services: age and sex structure of population, Standardised Mortality Ratio; road length per head of population.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what would have been the total amount which the Dyfed-Powys health authority could have expected to have received from the Welsh Office for the year 1997–98 by way of discretionary expenditure on the basis of a crude population share. [8433]

Mr. Griffiths: On the basis of a crude population share of the total 1997–98 Recurrent Discretionary Allocation made to health authorities, Dyfed Powys would have received £223.6 million.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the names of the working party set up in his Department to review the methodology in respect of the distribution of resources to health authorities; and when he expects the review to be completed. [8546]

Mr. Griffiths: The membership of the Resources Allocation Working Group is as follows:

Mr. A. C. Wood: Health Finance Management Division

Mr. R. T. Kilpatrick: Health Finance Management Division

Miss B. Jones: Health Finance Management Division

Dr. B. Fuge: Health Professional Group

Mr. D. Hobbs: Health Strategy Division

Ms C. Durnell: Economic Advice Division

Mr. R. Jones: Health Statistics and Analysis Unit

Mr. M. Evans: Bro Taf Health Authority

Mrs. J. Sait: Dyfed Powys Health Authority

Mr. G. Coomber: Gwent Health Authority

Dr. P. Donnelly: Iechyd Morgannwg Health Authority

Mr. N. Morris: North Wales Health Authority

Mr. P. Davies: University of Wales Healthcare NHS Trust

Dr. N. Upton: Gowerton Medical Centre, Swansea

Mrs. C. Theobald: North East Wales Community Health Council

I expect the group to report later this year and, if possible, to feed the results into the 1998–99 health authority allocation round.

29. Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the current financial position of health authorities in Wales. [7023]

Mr. Griffiths: I shall expect all authorities to remain within their notified cash limits.

Industrial Investments

18. Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his plans to encourage industrial investment in areas outside the M4 corridor in south and east Wales and the A55 corridor in north Wales. [7012]

Mr. Hain: I am determined to see a more even spread of investment throughout Wales particularly in western areas, north western areas and the South Wales Valleys.

Pensioners

21. Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from pensioners in Wales in relation to the Budget. [7015]

Mr. Hain: None.

Dental Services

22. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new proposals he has to improve dental services in Wales. [7016]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Government is committed to ensuring that a comprehensive NHS dentistry service is available to all who wish to use it. We shall shortly be bringing forward proposals for strengthening and improving primary health care in Wales and we anticipate that these will include measures for developing NHS dentistry.

Transport

24. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for promoting sustainable transport schemes in Wales. [7018]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister announced on 5 June his proposals for a national strategy to develop an integrated transport policy, and explained that this should be set out in a White Paper, probably accompanied by detailed papers on specific subjects. A consultation document on the development of the policy, which will of course embrace Wales, will be issued shortly.

Referendum

26. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he next plans to visit north Wales to discuss the referendum campaign. [7020]

Mr. Ron Davies: I discussed the referendum campaign in North Wales on 30 June and 7 July and I expect to make other visits to North Wales to argue for our proposals in the coming weeks.

30. Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his role in the referendum debate in Wales. [7024]

Mr. Davies: Together with the Prime Minister and other Ministers I shall be arguing the case throughout Wales for the Government's proposals.

Welfare-to-work Programme

28. Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the implementation of the welfare-to-work programme in Wales. [7022]

Mr. Hain: I wrote to all Welsh MPs on 3 July providing details of how the New Deal will operate in Wales. Further details in respect of Employment Zones and the Lone Parents Initiative will be made available in due course.

Family Farms

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to help safeguard the future of viable family farms in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [7017]

Mr. Win Griffiths: My right hon. Friend and I will have the future of family farms very much in mind as we participate in developing the UK Government's policy towards reform of the Common Agricultural Policy; and as we design policy initiative such as a new Agri-Environment Scheme for Wales.

Departmental Budgets

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new plans he has to introduce cuts and savings in his Department as a result of the effect on his Department's budgets for 1997–98 and 1998–99 of the upward revisions to the GDP deflators in the Budget on 2 July; and if he will make a statement. [8312]

Mr. Ron Davies [holding answer 14 July 1997]: All Departments are reallocating spending within their Departmental ceilings as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if, following the recent Budget, he will give his estimate of the total real level of his Department's budget, in 1995–96 prices, in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99; if he will estimate what such figures were for (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1998–99 following the November 1996 Budget on the basis of the estimates of the GDP deflator contained in that Budget; and if he will make a statement. [8311]

Mr. Davies [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The figures requested for my Department's spending plans within the Control Total are as follows:

£6,529 million, £6,440 million, £6,598 million and £6,449 million

In addition Wales will benefit from part of the expenditure outside the Control Total which was announced in the Budget, for Welfare to Work and spending under the Capital Receipts Initiative.

EU Regional Development Fund

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will seek the restoration of Objective 2 status to North-east Wales. [7863]

Mr. Hain: Eligible areas for the European Structural Funds will not be changed before the end of 1999. For the period from the year 2000 onwards, the eligibility of areas will depend on the Commission's proposals for future financing of the EU and of the reform of the Structural Funds. These may lead to a substantial change in the current structure, including the system of Objectives. Once the Commission have put forward proposals for the reform of the Funds and these have been negotiated and agreed, the Government will then consider proposing particular areas within the United Kingdom.

In the meantime, my officials along with local partners, are already seeking to identify those criteria which most closely meet the socio-economic circumstances and difficulties of Wales, including the North East and which can be proposed for inclusion in the Commission's eventual Structural Funds Regulations. It will be against the criteria contained in these Regulations that the merits of North-east Wales will be evaluated.

Health Trusts

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what steps his Department plans to address the imbalance in the number of health trusts south of Merthyr Tydfil and north of Merthyr Tydfil; and if he will make a statement; [8330]

(2) what consultations are planned involving those who represent the general practice, primary care, community nursing, health visiting and mental health professions in the North Wales health authority area in connection with plans for the reconfiguration of health trusts in that area; and if he will make a statement; [8331]

(3) what mechanism there is for taking into account the views of general practitioners, psychiatrists and public health physicians concerning the reconfiguration of health trusts in Wales; and if he will make a statement; [8333]

(4) what mechanism there is for taking into account the views of local authorities and other elected representatives concerning the reconfiguration of health trusts in Wales; and if he will make a statement; [8334]

(5) what plans he has to consider alternative reconfigurations of health trusts in North Wales; [8335]

(6) if it is his policy that no final decision concerning the reconfiguration of health trusts in Wales will be taken until the completion of the All-Wales Service Review; and if he will make a statement. [8336]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I announced on 22 May a wide-ranging review of the number and configuration of NHS Trusts in Wales. I expect the review process to include detailed discussions with representatives of all sections of the NHS, including professional groups, as well as local authorities, Community Health Councils and other interested parties. Any proposals which arise will also be subject to a formal public consultation exercise. The NHS Wales' All-Wales Service Review will be taken into account and it is my aim to have in place a new shape of trust based services by April 1999.

Brecon Community Hospital

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will reject the bid made by Nevill Hall hospital trust to take over Brecon community hospital. [8511]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I am not aware of any such proposal.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Engineering

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to encourage school leavers of exceptional ability to study engineering at university; and if he will make a statement. [7054]

Dr. Howells: In 1994 the Department began the Top Flight Engineering Bursaries scheme to attract high quality A level students to higher education engineering courses. This is a three year pump priming initiative to encourage engineering employers to sponsor students to take engineering courses and consider employment in the engineering sector. Those undergraduates already in receipt of Top Flight Bursaries (at £500 per annum) will continue to receive them until the end of their course in about 2001. So far over 6,300 students have received a Top Flight Engineering Bursary from the Department.

The Department is also supporting the Year of Engineering Success and pilot summer school for teachers. The latter is a specific outcome from the earlier Action for Engineering initiative and took place in June this year at the University of Manchester Institute of Science and Technology.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many TECs have merged with chambers of commerce. [6947]

Dr. Howells: Thirteen TECs have merged with Chambers of Commerce to form Chambers of Commerce, Training and Enterprise.

Constituency Cases

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice is given to Employment Service staff on giving information on constituency cases to hon. Members (a) over the telephone and (b) in writing; when this was last revised; and to what grade of staff it is disseminated. [8888]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 15 July 1997]: The Department takes a positive and purposeful view on this matter. Responsibility for the specifics and local arrangements has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated July 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about advice given to Employment Service (ES) staff on giving information on constituency cases to Honourable Members. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

The Employment Service sets clear standards for handling telephone and written correspondence for all enquiries. The guidance is contained within two ES guides, the ES Corporate Style and ES Disclosure Guides, and in a circular on Open Government. The guidance makes clear that every effort should be made to be as helpful as possible in dealing with such enquiries.

The ES Disclosure Guide refers explicitly to requests from Members of Parliament in outlining the parameters within which Business Managers can comply within the terms of the Data Protection Act 1984. The other guidance does not explicitly refer to MPs, but I would expect all ES staff to meet these standards in contacts with Members of Parliament and others.

You asked about information on when this guidance was updated. The ES Corporate Style Guide was updated in March 1996, the ES Disclosure Guide in 1992 and the ES Circular on Open Government in 1994. This guidance is available to everyone working in the ES.

More generally we encourage all Honourable Members to contact their local Jobcentre Business Manager or District Manager, who are best placed to provide a quick and informed reply on local constituency matters, whenever they need to do so.

I hope this is helpful.

Universities (Overseas Earnings)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the overseas earnings attributed to the British university sector in each of the last three years. [6938]

Dr. Howells: The Department does not routinely estimate total overseas earnings attributable to the British university sector. However, the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals has estimated the impact on economic activity in the United Kingdom associated with international students at around £1 billion a year.

National Disability Council

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the Government will bring in legislation to replace the National Disability Council with a disability rights commission. [8714]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 5 June 1997, Official Report, column 247.

Disability Discrimination

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans the Government have to propose changes to the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 in relation to discrimination in employment. [8710]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow) on 26 June 1997, Official Report, column 635.

Blind and Partially Sighted People

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to improve facilities at (a) jobcentres and (b) job clubs for blind and partially sighted people. [7643]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department takes a positive and purposeful view on this matter. Responsibility for the specifics and local arrangements has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

HEALTH

Hospital Building

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals have been constructed in each year since 1979; and what was the cost of each such hospital. [6555]

Mr. Milburn: Information is collected centrally only on major capital projects, and not in terms of numbers of hospitals. A table listing the numbers and total works cost by national health service region of capital schemes in excess of £25 million completed between April 1980 and March 1997 has been placed in the Library. Details of the cost of individual capital projects have also been placed in the Library.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the criteria that each NHS Executive regional office uses to determine which health trusts and authorities are judged to have serious financial problems. [7759]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Executive assesses the seriousness of financial problems by initially looking at the scale of the financial problem reported (i.e. over £1 million deficit in health authorities and an adverse operating variance of over £0.5 million in trusts). The NHS Executive will supplement this with an assessment of additional factors such as the robustness of recovery plans.

Prescription Fraud

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the estimated savings resulting from his Initiative on Prescription Fraud in the current and next four financial years. [7756]

Mr. Milburn: The Efficiency Scrutiny report into Prescription Fraud in England and Wales was published on 19 June 1997. We have announced immediate decisions to implement some important recommendations, such as including scrutiny measures in the printing of prescription forms.

The remaining recommendations are being examined in detail in order to develop a comprehensive programme of action and an estimate of the savings which will arise.

Road Traffic Accidents

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the hospital trusts in England which recover moneys associated with the treatment of road traffic accidents (i) in part and (ii) in full; and which of these have recorded the amounts of money recovered in 1996–97. [7652]

Ms Jowell: We have placed in the Library details of Road Traffic Act income for each national health service trust in England for 1995–96, the latest year for which figures are available.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for the review of Private Finance Initiative health projects (a) the completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8259]

Mr. Milburn: The review of the private finance initiative (PFI) in the national health service, announced on 15 May 1997, consists of three stages. The first stage, to secure the market for PFI, involved the prioritisation of certain major acute sector PFI schemes. The results of this part of the review were announced on 3 July. The remaining stages of the review are expected to be concluded by the end of the year.

The review is being carried out by officials and consultants seconded to the NHS as part of their normal duties. No extra costs over and above these normal departmental running costs are envisaged.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the companies involved either as individual companies or in consortia in each of the PFI hospital projects which he has (a) approved and (b) rejected. [8155]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 11 July 1997]: Two private finance initiative schemes, at Dartford and Gravesham national health service trust and Norfolk and Norwich health care NHS trust, have reached agreement to proceed to financial close. The consortia and constituent companies for these two schemes are as follows:

Trust	Consortia	Constituent companies
Dartford and Gravesham NHS Trust	Pentland	Tarmac PFU Ltd. United Medical Enterprises Ltd. Tarmac Service Master Tarmac Construction Ltd.
Norfolk and Norwich Healthcare NHS Trust	Octagon Healthcare Ltd.	John Laing Group plc Serco

A further 14 major hospital PFI schemes have been selected to continue towards financial close under the first prioritisation exercise announced on 3 July. Those 23 schemes not selected had the opportunity to make representations to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health up to 14 July and all appeals are now being reviewed. However, all schemes not selected will now be eligible for consideration by the NHS Executive's capital prioritisation group to go forward either as part of the next tranche of PFI schemes or for funding from public sector capital. Six schemes are being considered as part of the London review.

Head Lice

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the level of incidence of head lice in schools in each of the last five years; [8496]

(2) what guidelines his Department has issued regarding the (a) prevention of and (b) treatment for head lice in schools. [8495]

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidelines his Department issues to schools concerning the prevention and detection of head lice amongst pupils; and if he will make a statement; [8559]

(2) how many children contracted head lice in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [8552]

Ms Jowell: In April 1996, the Department of Health launched a poster and leaflet campaign—"The Prevention and Treatment of Head Lice"—which advises families and teachers on the options for dealing with this problem. So far, over 1 million copies of the leaflet have been sent to parents, teachers and health professionals. Further guidance was included in the Department's publication, "Child Health in the Community: A Guide to Good Practice" issued in September 1996. National figures on the incidence of head louse infestation are not collected because not all cases are detected. However, the number of prescriptions for lotions to treat infestation quadrupled between 1991 and 1996 from 583,000 to 2,161,000.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the health risks associated with the use of malathion in head lice shampoo; and if he will make a statement. [8555]

Ms Jowell: Malathion is a licensed human medicinal product which has been subject to the usual processes of assessment of safety, quality and efficacy. As for all medicines marketed in the United Kingdom, its safety has been monitored continuously after marketing. No serious toxicity has been identified in normal conditions.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate how many children have suffered side effects after using head lice shampoo containing malathion; and if he will make a statement. [8556]

Ms Jowell: The Committee on Safety of Medicines has received 23 suspected adverse reactions reports associated with malathion head louse treatment via the Yellow Card scheme. Of these, 19 occurred in children. However, a report does not necessarily mean that the reaction was caused by the medicine.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the health risks posed by the use of organo-phosphates in head lice shampoos. [8557]

Ms Jowell: The Department of Health, through the Medicines Control agency, has received 12 representations on this issue since November 1995.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department issues to pharmacists selling head lice shampoo containing (a) malathion and (b) other organo-phosphates; what proposals he has to take further action; and if he will make a statement. [8558]

Mr. Milburn: Central guidelines have not been issued concerning the sale of Malathion. Health authorities issue guidelines on the rotational policies for treatment of head lice and these may include advice on use of Malathion.

In November 1995, the Chief Medical, Pharmaceutical and Nursing Officers wrote a joint letter to health professionals, including pharmacists, concerning the restriction for human medicinal use by limiting Carbaryl to prescription only use. Copies of this letter have been placed in the Library. This followed a review of information by the Committee on Carcinogenicity and advice from the Advisory Committee on Pesticides and the Committee of the Safety of Medicines. The insecticide Carbaryl is an active ingredient in a number of shampoos and lotions used to treat headlice.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of head lice medication currently contains permethrin and no malathion; and if he will make a statement. [8560]

Ms Jowell: There are eight products currently marketed which are indicated for the treatment of head lice. One, Lyclear Creme Rinse, contains permethrin but no malathion.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of using permethrin in head lice shampoo; and if he will make a statement. [8561]

Ms Jowell: The first medicinal product for human use for a shampoo containing permethrin was granted a marketing authorisation in November 1988. This product is indicated for the treatment of head lice. Before any medicinal product can be granted a marketing authorisation, applicants must submit data which demonstrates the efficacy of their product for the indications claimed. The data are fully assessed and scrutinised by experienced clinicians at the Medicines Control Agency. Additionally, all products containing an active ingredient not previously authorised in a medicinal product are further considered by the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM). The CSM considered the application and the efficacy of permethrin in 1988. A marketing authorisation can be issued only if the applicant has satisfactorily proved the efficacy of the product to the satisfaction of the Licensing Authority.

Obesity

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what new initiatives his Department is planning in respect of obesity; and if he will make a statement. [8742]

Ms Jowell: Tackling obesity is a particularly challenging problem. "The Health of the Nation" target is to reduce the percentages of men and women aged 16–64 who are obese to 6 per cent. for men and 8 per cent. for women by 2005. However in 1995 15 per cent. of men and 16.5 per cent. of women were obese, highlighting the gravity of the problem. Obesity is a long-term problem and needs a long-term strategy. We will continue to support the action on obesity and obesity-related illness initiated by the Nutrition Task Force and the Physical Activity Task Force which addresses:

(a) general initiatives offering guidance on correct bodyweight;

(b) the particular problems of high risk groups e.g. those already overweight; and

(c) treatment of those who are already obese.

These activities focus on addressing the major influences on increasing fatness—fat in the diet and physical activity. The nutrition task force programme comprises a number of projects which are continuing after the task force itself has completed its work.

The role of physical activity in helping to maintain a healthy weight is well recognised. The "Active for Life" campaign, which is funded by the Department and run by the Health Education Authority, promotes the value of increased physical activity. The campaign targeted people aged 16 to 74 in its first year and will continue to run to 1999. As part of this campaign we are also looking at physical activity and young people. To this end, an expert conference was held in June to establish the optimum levels of physical activity for school aged children and young people. A report and consensus statement will be published in the autumn.

We also recognise how important a balanced diet is for giving young people a healthy start in life. This is why my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has recently proposed the introduction of nutrition standards for inclusion in school meals contracts.

Junior Doctors

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what methods his Department is considering for the reduction of junior doctors' hours; what advice it is giving to local medical work force advisory groups and New Deal task forces in this respect; and if he will make a statement. [8741]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Executive issued an Executive letter to trusts, health authorities, task forces and local medical workforce advisory groups in January (EL(97)2). The Executive also published a draft consultation document, "A Working Draft to Develop the Quality Framework for Hospital and Community Health Services Medical and Dental Staffing", in April. Both documents (copies of which are available in the Library) contain the current guidance on action to reduce junior doctors' hours. Options for further action will be reviewed over the coming months.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Traffic (Bangor)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the daily traffic flows each way on the Bangor dual carriageway ring-road and the Balloo/Rathgael road in Bangor. [7719]

Mr. Murphy: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service under its Chief Executive, Mr. W. J. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from W. McCoubrey to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 11 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to respond to your recently tabled Parliamentary Question about traffic flows on the West Circular Road (Bangor ring-road) and the Balloo/Rathgael Roads, Bangor.

Roads Service has traffic monitoring equipment which is used on a rotational basis to collect data at a number of sites throughout Northern Ireland. The most recent information available for each of the roads in question is as follows:

Location	Traffic flow (vehicles per day)
West Circular Road (between Belfast Road and Clandeboye Road)	10,180 11,200	(east bound) (west bound)
Rathgael Road (between Belfast Road and Clandeboye Road) Balloo Road (between Newtownards Road and Bloomfield Road South)	12,182 14,449	Each way flows not available for these roads

I do hope you find this information helpful.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to her answer of 23 June, Official Report, column 404, if she will ensure that the Child Support Agency specifically sets out in every relevant letter to absent parents that part of the required periodic payment which relates to arrears. [7718]

Mr. Worthington: Responsibility for this subject has been delegated to the Northern Ireland Child Support Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. Patrick Devlin and I have asked him to arrange for a response to be given.

Letter from Mr. P. Devlin to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 11 July 1997:

I am replying to your parliamentary question in which you asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to ensure that the Child Support Agency specifically sets out in every relevant letter to absent parents that part of the required periodic payment which relates to arrears.

When a maintenance assessment is completed the absent parent is advised of the weekly amount which he is required to pay. He then receives a separate notification telling him of the method and frequency of payment. If any arrears are outstanding for the period between the effective date of the assessment and the date it is made (the initial payment period), he is also advised of this amount. He is asked either to pay this amount in full or to contact the agency to arrange an arrears agreement. If such an agreement is made the absent parent is again advised of the breakdown of his regular payment.

Should the maintenance assessment change the absent parent is again advised of the new total to be paid and how it is made up.

In those cases where an absent parent refuses to make an arrears agreement, or fails to keep to an agreement, he is warned that further action will be taken to recover the debt, including, where appropriate, the imposition of a deduction from earnings order. That notification shows the amount which he should have paid to date, the amount he has paid and the arrears. At that stage the amount to be included in a deduction from earnings order for arrears is not known so the notification does not include this information. The absent parent is advised to contact the agency to make an agreement and avoid the necessity of the order.

I hope you will see from this that the Agency does its best to keep absent parents fully informed. It is also open to any client to request a statement of account at any time.

I hope you find this information useful.

Irish Garda (Firearms)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements are made for armed Irish Garda to enter Northern Ireland without firearms licences; and to what extent these arrangements are reciprocal. [7716]

Mr. Ingram: The Chief Constable has advised me that any Garda officers entering Northern Ireland do not carry firearms. Any necessary protection is provided by the RUC and this is reciprocated for RUC officers entering the Republic of Ireland.

Sir David Fell

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what will be the total cost of the annual compensation payments made to Sir David Fell from his resignation on 1 October 1997 until his 60 birthday; and what are the grounds on which he is receiving compensation. [7720]

Mr. Murphy: With the approval of the former Secretary of State, Sir David was offered and accepted early retirement in February 1997, under the provisions of the Northern Ireland Civil Service Pay and Conditions of Service Code. The Code provides for flexible retirement on structural grounds where an officer's departure would assist in easing problems of succession planning. Under the scheme Sir David will receive an annual payment (know as an annual compensation payment) in lieu of pension until normal civil service retirement age.

The total cost of the annual payments is personal to Sir David, under the terms of the Data Protection Act 1984.

Anglo-Irish Secretariat

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list those receptions held or proposed to be held by the Anglo-Irish Secretariat at Maryfield in 1997. [7717]

Mr. Murphy: Two receptions have been held co-hosted this year by the Anglo-Irish Secretariat: on 18 March to mark St. Patrick's Day; and on 2 July on the occasion of an academic conference.

Government Purchasing Agency

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of (a) the shortlisting decisions and (b) the criteria used in relation to the Grade 7 posts in the Government Purchasing Agency for which interviews were conducted in May. [7715]

Mr. Murphy: It is not usual for either myself or my Ministerial colleagues to become involved in Personnel or other Management issues in the Northern Ireland Civil Service. These are matters for individual Departments and Agencies. I have not therefore made an assessment of the shortlisting decision or the criteria used in relation to the Grade 7 posts in the Government Purchasing Agency (GPA).

I am advised that this competition was arranged by the Department of Finance and Personnel. Shortlisting and subsequent interviews were undertaken on the basis of mandatory criteria as defined in the notice which invited applications for the competition.

Petrol Bombs

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland at how many locations in Northern Ireland petrol bombs were thrown at the RUC and the Army on 6 and 7 July. [7804]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The information is not available in the format requested, however, during the 24 hour period up to 6.00 am on 7 July 1997, there were 683 petrol bombing incidents in 22 Police Sub-divisions and in the following 24 hour period there were 753 incidents in 24 Sub-divisions. Each incident usually involves the throwing of more than one petrol bomb; therefore the number of petrol bombs thrown was substantially higher than the number of incidents.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many petrol bombs were thrown at the RUC and the Army in Portadown on 6 July. [7803]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The information is not available in the format requested, however, from 1800 hours on 5 July to 0600 hours on 7 July 1997 there were ten petrol bombing incidents in Portadown. Each incident usually involves the throwing of more than one petrol bomb; therefore the number of petrol bombs thrown was substantially higher than the number of incidents.

SCOTLAND

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for the review of compulsory competitive tendering in Scotland (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8243]

Mr. Chisholm: My right hon. Friend announced on 27 May and to the House on 2 June, Official Report, columns 67–68, that he was suspending Compulsory Competitive Tendering (CCT) for a further year in Scotland while the essential elements of the new Best Value arrangements in local government were being developed. Together with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities, he established a Task Force to develop these. The Task force presented their draft first report to my right hon. Friend and COSLA on 4 July. By the autumn, councils will be required to assess themselves to see how far they meet these essential elements, if they wish to apply for further exemption from CCT. My right hon. Friend will then consider whether to grant further exemptions from CCT. Costs of the Task Force work have been met from The Scottish Office budget in the usual way.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for the review of Private Finance Initiative health projects in Scotland (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8260]

Mr. Galbraith: My review of PFI health projects in Scotland was completed on 23 June. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member, for Glasgow, Shettleston (Mr. Marshall) on 23 June.

The review was carried out by officials in The Scottish Office as part of their normal duties.

School Leavers (Illiteracy)

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the number of young people who have left school in each of the last five years and who now require remedial literacy or numeracy assistance, expressed as a total and a percentage of the cohort for each year. [7928]

Mr. Wilson: This information is not held centrally. However, in 1996 the Scottish Office participated in an International Adult Literacy Survey. Results of this study will be published in September and will include data on literacy levels of 16 to 24 year olds in Scotland.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the role of the Office for Islamic propaganda in respect of its response to the Lockerbie bombing; and what inquiries he has instigated in respect of documents relating to their role. [7936]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 11 July 1997]: The Government view with considerable distaste any statement which welcomes the murder of 270 innocent victims. While the prosecuting and investigating authorities in any criminal case will not comment on the investigative steps they take, the appropriate action is being taken to look into these matters.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will itemise the planned Scottish Office expenditure for years 1996–97 to 1999–2000 in cash and real (1996–97) prices by category of expenditure as expressed in Table 1.4 of "Serving Scotland's Needs, The Government's Expenditure Plans 1996–97 to 1998–99", deflating the real terms figures using the estimates for the GDP deflator provided in the Financial Statement and Budget report of July 1997. [7743]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The tables are compiled from material published in "Serving Scotland's Needs: The Government's Expenditure Plans 1997–98 to 1999–2000". They cover 1996–97 outturn, and 1997–98 to 1999–2000 plans in both cash terms and real terms.

Nurses

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the percentage change in numbers of NHS nurses (a) in total and (b) in each NHS trust between 1991 and the latest year for which figures are available. [6383]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer Monday 7 July 1997]: The whole time equivalent number of nurses fell in Scotland by one per cent. between 1991 and 1996.

Information at Trust level is not available for the requested year 1991. A comparison by Trust between 1994 and 1996 is given in the table:

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Rail Services (Cycles)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received in respect of the provision of carriage of cycles on trains; and if he will make a statement. [8502]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have received 36 representations about the carriage of bicycles on trains.

The Government are encouraging operators to improve provision for the carriage of cycles on trains. Some operators have implemented or propose improvements in respect of their services. The Government welcome these initiatives.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress he is making in encouraging rail operators to adopt the code of practice, "Providing for Cyclists"; and if he will make a statement. [8534]

Ms Jackson: The Government are continuing to encourage rail operators to adopt the voluntary code of practice, "Providing for Cyclists", which has been developed by the cyclists' Public Affairs Group, the Cyclists' Touring Club and Sustrans, which I was delighted to have the opportunity to launch in June. Anglia Railways has been awarded the Cycle Mark under the code of practice for its Bikes on Trains initiative. A number of other operators are also making improvements in facilities for cyclists who wish to take their cycle on the train or park it at the station. We welcome these developments.

Sea Empress Incident

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will publish the report of the Chief Inspector of Marine Accidents into the grounding and subsequent salvage of the tanker 'Sea Empress' at Milford Haven in February 1996. [9308]

Mr. John Prescott: I am publishing the report by the Marine Accident Investigation Branch on the grounding and subsequent salvage of the tanker Sea Empress at Milford Haven between 15 and 21 February 1996 today. A copy has been placed in the Library and will be distributed by the Stationery Office. The report is open for public comment for a period of six weeks. Thereafter, the Government will issue a detailed response to the report. In the meantime, I have asked my officials to begin a review of the 1987 Pilotage Act. I have also asked Lord Donaldson of Lymington to conduct an independent review of salvage and intervention operations and their command and control, having satisfied himself that the Marine Accident Investigation Branch's report provides a reasonable basis for his review. Lord Donaldson's review will form part of the Government's ongoing review of the National Contingency Plan for Marine Pollution. The detailed terms of reference of these reviews will be announced later.

Lavatory Cisterns

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the annual water leakage rate likely to arise from permitting the importation of non-syphonic lavatory cisterns; and if he will make a statement. [7897]

Angela Eagle: I understand that the Water Regulations Advisory Committee is proposing that the use of non-siphonic flushing systems should be allowed in order to encourage the development of WCs with lower flush volumes. The committee is also proposing that such devices, whether manufactured in the United Kingdom or abroad, should be required to meet stringent performance specifications so that any possible leakage will be greatly outweighed by water savings from the considerable lower flush volumes that can be achieved.

The committee is currently consulting on these and other proposals to reduce the use and waste of water.

Organophosphates

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the health risks posed to farmers of exposure to organophosphate in sheep dip; and if he will make a statement. [8554]

Angela Eagle: All applications for marketing authorisations for veterinary medicine products must be supported by data relating to their safety, quality and efficacy. Assessments of the data are scrutinised by the Veterinary Products Committee (VPC), which advises Ministers and has twice reviewed OP sheep dips in the last five years. On both occasions the VPC advised that, provided they are used safely and in accordance with the manufacturer's instructions, there is no scientific justification for withdrawing them from the market. Any reports of human suspected adverse reactions to veterinary medicines (including sheep dips) are monitored through a surveillance scheme run by the Government's Veterinary Medicines Directorate.

In assessing the risk from the use of a product, the potential exposure must be taken into account as well as the inherent toxicity of the substance being considered. Studies have shown the principal sources of exposure during dipping and the steps that can be taken to control it and are described in leaflet AS29 "Sheep dipping". The Government have also commissioned both epidemiological and toxicological research, which continues. From the information available, it is clear that taking a large dose of OP sheep dip into the body will almost certainly result in immediate ill-health, but that it can be avoided if the proper control measures are adopted. It has also been suggested that prolonged, low-level exposure without immediate symptoms can cause chronic ill-health but scientific studies have so far revealed scant evidence for this. A major research project is however underway to investigate effects of this kind.

Rural Business Use

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he is considering to introduce a new rural business use class. [8922]

Mr. Caborn: A consultation paper was issued in July 1996 seeking views on the possible introduction of a new rural business use class. There were 291 responses, copies of which have now been placed in the Department's library. The majority of those responding felt that the new class would be very difficult to operate in practice. In particular, a wide range of concerns were expressed about the feasibility of using traffic levels to assess business intensification. Doubts were also expressed about the need for the new use class and a majority of respondents expressed support for existing planning mechanisms such as planning conditions in balancing the needs of rural businesses with environmental considerations. In the light of these comments, the Under-Secretary of State for Wales and I have decided not to proceed with this proposal or with the working group set up in February to take it forward.

In England, PPG7 explains how the existing provisions of the planning system can assist rural businesses. In Wales, equivalent guidance is provided in the first revision of "Planning Guidance (Wales): Planning Policy", which is being finalised for publication. Our manifesto outlines a range of wider measures which we will be taking to promote both rural and urban enterprise. The Government attach particular importance to the encouragement of sustainable development in rural areas. We want a healthy rural economy that creates employment opportunities but also respects the countryside.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what projections have been made by his Department of the long-term effects of the interaction of genetically modified organisms with their environment. [8040]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The purpose of part VI of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 is to prevent or minimise damage to the environment from the release of genetically modified organisms (GMOs). In considering applications for consent to release GMOs, the risks to human health and the environment, including long term effects, are assessed before a decision is made. A consent is granted only if the risks of the proposed release are low or effectively zero. The Department funds a research programme to identify potential risks, to monitor particular existing releases to confirm that the risk assessment is correct, and to support decision making in granting consents.

EU Object 2 Funding

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking to ensure the continuation of EU Objective 2 funding (a) for the United Kingdom and (b) for Thanet at its current levels in real terms after 1999; and if he will make a statement. [8583]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 15 July 1997]: The European Commission's proposals for reform of the European Structural and Cohesion Funds after 1999 are due to be published on 16 July. Detailed proposals for amending the regulations will come at a later date and will be the basis for negotiation. This may lead to substantial changes to the current structure, including the system of objectives. It will be a Government priority to secure reform which delivers a system that is affordable, efficient, durable and fair. It is too early to estimate the likely effect on specific regions.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Regional Assistance and Investment

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions she has had with the Deputy Prime Minister over responsibility for regional assistance and investment; and if she will make a statement. [6884]

Mrs. Beckett: I have ministerial responsibility for regional selective assistance which supports investment in the Assisted Areas of Great Britain. My Department and DETR are in regular contact about the carrying forward of the Government's policies for RDAs.

Minister for Trade and Competiveness in Europe

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe has any remaining interests in BP through the long-term performance plan described in Note 36 to the BP 1996 report and accounts. [8329]

Mrs. Beckett: Lord Simon is no longer an active member of BP's long-term performance plan. In accordance with the rules of the scheme, he gave up his active membership when he took over as Chairman in 1995. The plan continues to hold shares in trust for Lord Simon which relate to the period prior to his Chairmanship. He cannot influence these holdings in any way. These shares cannot be released under the terms of the plan before 7 May 1998 and 1 January 1999. These trigger dates relate to the required retention period in the rules for performance plans entered into before 1995.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe complied with the procedures set down in "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" relating to (a) his shareholding and (b) other requirements relating to financial interests. [7551]

Mrs. Beckett: The Minster for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe put in hand arrangements to do so from the day of his appointment.

Post Office

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will set out the Post Office's external financing limit for 1997–98 together with (i) the returns on capital employed by Royal Mail and Parcelforce, (ii) the returns on finance for Post Office Counters and (iii) the real unit cost reductions for Royal Mail. [8769]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The 1997–98 external financing limit for the Post Office is minus £313 million; the 1997–98 return on capital employed targets for Royal Mail and Parcelforce are respectively 20 per cent. and 3.5 per cent.; the 1997–98 return on turnover target for Post Office Counters Ltd. is 2.5 per cent. and the real unit cost reduction target for Royal Mail is a 6.2 per cent. reduction by 1998–99 over 1995–96. These targets are, however, under review.

Low Pay Commission

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many applications for membership of the Low Pay Commission had been received by the closing date. [7697]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 14 July 1997]: By the closing date of 10 July 1997, some 475 applications for membership of the Low Pay Commission had been returned.

Territorial Employment Pacts

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment her Department has made of the potential contribution of European Territorial Employment Pacts to the creation of new jobs; and if she will make a statement. [8680]

Mrs. Roche: The Government is committed to new partnerships which will attack long-term joblessness. Territorial Employment Pacts are a potentially innovative mechanism for bringing together the relevant partners in a local area to focus and co-ordinate their job-creation efforts. The pilot projects which the Government intends to nominate the European Commission, together with others in the United Kingdom and those going forward in other parts of Europe, will provide useful experience for future partnerships.

Mr. Bennett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much notice Stockport Metropolitan Borough Council was given of the request to bid for a pilot territorial employment pact by the Government Office for the North West. [8578]

Mrs. Roche: A letter, with written guidance, inviting regional partners including Stockport Metropolitan Borough Council to submit proposals for pilot projects to set up Territorial Employment Pacts was sent out by the Government Office for the North West on 4 July. Responses were requested by 9 July to meet DTI's deadline of 11 July. Stockport's response was the first of 13 proposals which the Government Office for the North West received. The short amount of time resulted from the new Government's desire to meet the European Commission's timetable for nominating up to 10 pilot projects from the UK.

Human Genome Project

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make an assessment of the potential for misuse through biological warfare of the Human Genome Project; if she will assess the national and international legislative framework for the output of this project; and if she will make a statement. [7210]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 8 July 1997]: There is no potential misuse, through biological or other warfare, directly from the Human Genome Mapping Project (HGMP) whose purpose is strictly the mapping and sequencing of the entire complement of human genes.

However, the British Medical Association have recently announced that they have commissioned an investigation into whether there could be any threat of genetic weapons being developed capable of biological ethnic cleansing. These forms of weapons do not exist but the BMA fears that developments in genetic therapy to cure disease could in principle, in future, be turned to attack certain body sites. The report is expected in 12 months.

There is no legislative framework, national or international, specifically relating to this project.

Sector Challenge

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what factors led her to exclude overseas trade fairs from future rounds of the Sector Challenge; and if she will put copies of all representations she received from industry recommending that Sector Challenge should be abolished for export promotion programmes in the Library. [7680]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 10 July 1997]: As my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade said in her answer on 21 May, Official Report, column 67, "industry has told us that it believes that a separate scheme is more appropriate for trade fairs than a challenge approach". There were over 350 individual letters from or on behalf of industry following the previous administration's announcement on 17 January 1997, Official Report, columns 392–93. In every case the correspondent was objecting to the inclusion of trade fairs support in Sector Challenge. Extracting and copying all those letters would cost over £450. I will place in the Library a list of the organisations and individuals who wrote in.

Aid and Trade Provision Projects

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many UK jobs are supported by the ATP projects in Chile, China, Ghana, Indonesia, Lesotho, Pakistan, the Philippines, Sri Lanka, Thailand and Zimbabwe. [8144]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 11 July 1997]: As over the past three years 21 ATP projects have started in these markets it will take a little time to collate the information requested. When it is available I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Trade Fairs

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what budget has been allocated to trade fair services support in 1998–99 [7681]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 10 July 1997]: In a move which has been widely praised by businesses the Government removed the trade fair services support from the Sector Challenge Scheme.

The Government is committed to maintaining existing Departmental spending ceilings until March 1999. A comprehensive spending review is being carried out. It will review all aspects of public expenditure, including export promotion. As the hon. Member will appreciate, I cannot discuss individual items within the spending review prior to its conclusions. I can confirm however that industry has been invited to bid for trade fairs and seminars to be supported in 1998–99.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the terms and conditions, including the price, of the contract with Metra Martech Ltd. for analysing responses to the Support for Overseas Trade Fairs and Seminars consultation paper. [8143]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 11 July 1997]: The terms and conditions for this contract with Metra Martech Ltd. are the standard DTI contract terms and conditions for service contracts. Details of these terms and conditions can be found in the DTI Procurement Manual, copies of which are held by the Libraries of both Houses. Other details of the contract with Metra Martech Ltd. are commercially confidential. Paragraph 13 of the Code of Practice on Open Government permits the withholding of such information.

UK Exports Database

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the database of United Kingdoms exports accessible on line by all overseas posts will be completed; and at what cost. [7685]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 10 July 1997]: There is no single database of UK exporters but a customised CD-ROM directory of British business is being made available to UK overseas posts by the FCO. This has been developed by Reed Business Information following an open tender procedure managed by the FCO. The contractual arrangements are commercial-in-confidence. Overseas posts are also being equipped with facilities to access the Internet enabling them to utilise the increasing range of commercially available directory products now appearing on the world wide web. In addition my department is supporting a project under the Information Society Initiative Programme for Business called TradeUK which aims to help UK exporters gain profile on the Internet. Further use of electronic databases in support of UK exporters will be considered by the Export Forum.

Small Firms

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which Government-funded services responsible for supporting small firms do not have representation from small firms; and if she will take steps to ensure that such businesses are represented. [7684]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 10 July 1997]: We are very keen that all Government-funded services and bodies responsible for supporting small businesses have adequate representation from the small business sector. My Department is looking at the current position and at how adequate representation can be achieved.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. Wills: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many claims to industrial tribunals under the employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 have been (a) settled through ACAS and (b) withdrawn since the date of implementation; [8711]

(2) how many claims have been heard by industrial tribunals under the employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 since the date of implementation; and how many of these claims have succeeded; [8712]

(3) how many applications have been issued to industrial tribunals under the employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 since the date of implementation. [8713]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Since the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 came into force on 2 December 1996, 483 applications have been made to the Industrial Tribunals under the employment provisions of the Act.

Thirteen of these applications have been settled through ACAS, 10 applications were withdrawn and a further six settled privately without hearing.

Twelve applications have been heard by a tribunal, of which one was successful.

DEFENCE

Northern Ireland

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cumulative cost is of this Department's support for the civil power in Northern Ireland since 1969. [8133]

Dr. Reid: The information is not available in the precise form requested because the necessary departmental records are no longer extant and the adoption in 1991–92 of the New Management Strategy (NMS) means that comparable costs across the period cannot be calculated.

Estimates prepared in response to previous parliamentary questions are available for the additional costs of conducting military operations in Northern Ireland between 1969–70 and 1987–88. Insofar as can now be determined, these contrasted the estimated cost at contemporary prices of maintaining a garrison of the size established in 1969 with the actual cost of the garrison and all its associated expenditure in the year in question. The figures are:

Financial year	Additional cost of military operations £ million
1971–72	14
1972–73	29
1973–74	33
1974–75	45
1975–76	60
1976–77	65
1977–78	69
1978–79	81
1979–80	96
1980–81	100
1981–82	149
1982–83	143
1983–84	141
1984–85	121
1985–86	135
1986–87	144
1987–88	168

Sources:

House of Commons Official Report for: 16 May 1977, Column 77; 26 March 1980, Column 593; and 16 June 1988, Columns 225–26.

I regret that I have been unable to trace any equivalent estimates for financial years 1989–90 to 1990–91.

The overall budgets held by the General Officer Commanding (Northern Ireland) for 1991–92 and subsequent financial years, for personnel, stores, services, lands and, except for 1991–92, works costs, are as follows:

Financial year[1]	General officer commanding (Northern Ireland's) budget (final outturn)
1991–92	£355 million
1992–93	£436 million
1993–94	£489 million
1994–95	£510 million
1995–96	£475 million
1996–97	[2]£514 million
1997–98	[3]£508 million

Notes:

[1] The General Officer Commanding (Northern Ireland) was vested as a Top Level Budget Holder on 1 April 1994., The figures for 1992–93 and 1993–94 are estimates of outturn prepared as comparators for the Class 1 Supply Estimates for 1994–95 (HC276–I) and 1995–96 (C271-I).

[3] This figure represents the provision made in Vote 1, section B of the 1997–98 Class I Supply Estimates (HC 335).

A more detailed explanation of these figures can be found in my predecessor's letter of 11 November 1996 to my right hon. Friend the Member for Redcar (Marjorie Mowlam), a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Portsmouth Naval Base

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to harmonise the conditions of employment of casual and permanent employees at Portsmouth Naval Base. [7451]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Naval Bases and Supply Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from J. A. Trewby to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 16 July 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about harmonisation of conditions of employment of casual and permanent employees at Portsmouth Naval Base as this falls within my area of responsibility.

All civilian staff at Portsmouth Naval Base are employed in accordance with the Civil Service Recruitment Code and terms and conditions of employment are in keeping with National Agreements and as laid out in the Ministry of Defence Personnel Manual. There are no plans to harmonise conditions of employment of casual and permanent employees.

Territorial Army

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money is allocated to maintaining the Territorial Army in the current financial year; what this sum is as a percentage of the defence budget; and what the allocation will be in (a) cash and (b) as a percentage of the defence budget in the next three financial years. [8183]

Dr. Reid: Identifiable costs for the TA for 1997–98 are £334 million which is approximately 1.6 per cent. of the Defence Budget. This figure excludes provision for those items which are not readily separable from the rest of the Army, including the TA's share of equipment costs, fuel, ammunition and transport.

The allocation of funds to the TA for the next three years will be determined as part of the MOD's long-term costing which is the process by which the Department re-costs and adjusts its internal plans. The Department's internal plans represent projections and assumptions, which inform advice to Ministers on the affordability of particular elements of the Defence programme and it has been the policy of successive Governments not to publish detailed information arising from this. Accordingly, I am withholding the information requested in the second part of the question which constitutes internal discussion and advice, under exemption 2 of the "Code of Practice on Access to Government Information".

Judicial Reviews

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many decisions by his Department were challenged by way of judicial review in each Parliamentary session since 1994–95; and in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld, (b) the court found for the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgment and (d) the Department appealed successfully against the judicial review decision. [7843]

Dr. Reid: Information for 1994–95 is not held centrally.

Eight decisions were challenged through judicial review in the sessions 1995–96 and 1996–97.

The Department's decision was upheld by the courts in one case. In another case leave to apply for judicial review was at first refused; when later the application for leave was renewed, the case was settled without the court making any order on the application for leave. In a third case an applicant withdrew the application after being given leave. Five cases have yet to be considered by the courts. In three cases the application for leave has not yet been heard (or the Department has not yet been informed of the result). In two other cases leave has been granted and a substantive hearing is awaited. But in one of these cases this will need to await the conclusion of a reference by the court to the European Court of Justice.

There were no cases in which the courts found for the applicant. There were, therefore, no cases in which the question of an appeal by the Department arose.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions since 1994–95 legislation has been introduced by the Department (a) to remove effects of judicial review decisions and (b) to implement them. [7835]

Dr. Reid: None.

Joint Service Command and Staff College

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of military and civilian students at the Joint Service Command and Staff College (a) under the proposals in the defence costs study, Front Line First and (b) currently attending. [8193]

Dr. Reid: The current year is unrepresentative because a number of courses were cancelled or truncated to facilitate the closure of single service colleges and moves to interim JSCSC accommodation. Figures are therefore also provided for 1998.

All figures exclude students on ISSC distance learning courses, which are non-residential, as well as other regular and occasional courses, e.g. for Reserves. Civilian students attend the Higher Command and Staff Course (HCSC), the Advanced Command and Staff Course (ACSC) and the RN Initial Staff Course (RNISC).

	Front Line First	1997–98	1998–99
Military students at JSCSC	[1] [2] 1,625	[3] 1,452	[3] 1,587
Civilian students	9 (and see[2])	18	20
Total	1,634	1,470	1,607

[1] Includes underlying assumptions for Junior Division numbers, on which no specific recommendations for change were made in Front Line First.
[2] Includes 60 places for "officers from overseas and selected civil servants" on the ACSC as well as around 40 places for overseas officers on Junior courses. The precise number of civilians on the ACSC was agreed after the publication of Front Line First.
[3] Includes 130 places for overseas students.

Mission Statement

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the exact date is when he intends publishing his Department's mission statement. [8190]

Dr. Reid: I have nothing at this stage to add to the reply I gave to the hon. Member on 16 June, Official Report, column 14.

National Service

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will introduce a medal to recognise the service given by National Service men during peacetime. [8323]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 5 June, Official Report, column 222.

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for the Strategic Defence Review (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8234]

Dr. Reid: We expect the work of Strategic Defence Review to be completed around the turn of the year. Although maximum use will be made of existing structures to conduct the review, extra costs will be incurred, including in the process of outside consultation. It is too early to predict the total additional cost.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary for Defence if he will list the names and appointments of those military and civilian personnel in his Department working in the Strategic Defence Review section. [8191]

Dr. Reid: The Strategic Defence Review is making maximum use of existing structures. It is being co-ordinated by the Directorate of Defence Policy, but a large number of military and civilian personnel across the Department are involved in work relating to the review.

Department for International Development

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which departmental assets and funds he will in future be allocating to support the work of the Department for International Development. [8187]

Dr. Reid: It is my Department's policy to assist the work of the Department for International Development (DFID) whenever it is practicable to do so. My Department is not voted funds for this purpose and any extra costs involved are recovered from DFID. The military assets involved depend on the nature of the task; no element of our Armed Forces is specifically maintained to provide this support.

RAF 14 MU

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has completed his review of all aspects of the disposal of RAF 14 MU. [8127]

Mr. Spellar: I have examined the progress of the disposal of 14 MU RAF Carlisle and am satisfied that the MOD should negotiate with the local councils over how the future use and ownership of the site can be determined to the benefit of both the taxpayer and the local economy. I believe in the special circumstances of this case that the councils should be given the option of acquiring the core of the site with the remaining outlying areas being sold on the open market.

Defence Budget (Germany)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the defence budget in (a) cash and (b) percentage terms is taken up by the cost of maintaining the Army and RAF in Germany in the current financial year. [8134]

Dr. Reid: The estimated operating costs of the Army and RAF in Germany for the current financial year are £1,163 million and £184 million respectively. These costs represent about 5.3 per cent. of the Defence budget in the case of the Army and 0.8 per cent. for the RAF.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the ethnic minorities are currently serving in the Civil Service in his Department at grade 5 and above. [7828]

Mr. Spellar: The number of permanent civilian staff in my Department and its agencies at grade 5 level and above who have indicated that they are of ethnic minority origin in the MOD's ethnic origin survey is 10.

Homosexuality

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military personnel have been administratively discharged in each year since 1990 for reasons of homosexuality or lesbianism. [7830]

Dr. Reid: The number of Armed Forces personnel who have been administratively discharged each year since 1990 is as follows:

	Male	Female	Total
1990	39	26	65
1991	23	19	42
1992	30	23	53
1993	32	21	53
1994	29	21	50
1995	53	9	62
1996	43	22	65
1997[1]	20	7	27
Total			417

[1] Figures as at 30 June 1997.

Joint Rapid Deployment Force

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what sum is allocated to maintaining the Joint Rapid Deployment Force in the current financial year; and what it is as a percentage of the defence budget. [8184]

Dr. Reid: The Joint Rapid Deployment Force (JRDF) is not a standing force. Rather, it brings together existing forces and equipment from the Royal Navy, Army and Royal Air Force to form the most appropriate joint force for the circumstances. It is not however possible to determine what proportion of their costs might be attributable to JRDF roles, since this fluctuates over time.

The Chief of Joint Rapid Deployment Force Operations is the peacetime focus for the JRDF and as such is separately identifiable. He and his staff, who are embedded within the Permanent Joint Headquarters and would form the core of a deployed headquarters, together cost some £1.5 million per year. As this represents only a single, small element of the JRDF concept, it is not sensible to compare their costs to the overall Defence Budget.

Millennium Celebrations

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's contribution to the Millennium celebrations; and what the cost to his Department will be. [8186]

Dr. Reid: My Department intends to give the Millennium celebrations its fullest support both in the United Kingdom and, where possible, overseas. It is represented on the Millennium Co-ordinating Group chaired by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and has tabled a number of alternative proposals for consideration.

Until a choice has been made on the options offered, it is not possible to provide a meaningful estimate of cost to the Department.

Ex-Service Affairs Ministry

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will assess the advantages of introducing a United Kingdom equivalent of the American Ministry for ex-Service Affairs; and if he will make a statement. [7495]

Dr. Reid: The Government are giving very careful and detailed consideration to the proposals for an ex-Service Affairs Unit and will be looking into the matter in some detail.

In doing so, we will have regard for the fact that many of the benefits offered by the United States Department of Veterans Affairs are already available to ex-Servicemen in this country under the National Health Service, the War Pensions Agency and other elements of our social security system.

Radioactive Materials (Transportation)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many crashes have occurred in each year since 1967 in which (a) United Kingdom military aircraft and (b) United States military aircraft have been involved while carrying radioactive materials within United Kingdom airspace; and (a) what volume and (b) level of radioactivity was involved in each case. [7606]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 14 July 1997]: There have been no crashes in UK airspace involving either UK or US military aircraft carrying radioactive materials.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what environmental and safety information has been provided to his Department by those contracted to destroy outstanding British chemical weapon grenades, 9140-M6-CN-DM, held at RAF base Bad Wulfen. [4302]

Mr. Spellar: Pursuant to my recent answer of 25 June regarding chemical weapon grenades (Official Report, column 547), it should have been pointed out that the grenades at BAD Wulfen were of US origin, not British, and are believed to have been abandoned at the base during a brief period of US occupation in June 1945. The British Army had no grenades of that type.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensions Review

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement about the review of pensions which her Department is to undertake. [9606]

Ms Harman: Our Election Manifesto promised a review of the central areas of insecurity for elderly people in this country. I have today launched a wide-ranging review of pensions.

We have inherited a major pensions challenge. The failure over the last two decades to develop an adequate pensions strategy has resulted in widening inequalities amongst pensioners. Too many of our older citizens do not enjoy security in retirement.

Only by achieving a sustainable consensus for change can the country meet the pensions challenge. We want everyone who can make a positive contribution to this review to do so.

Our starting-point must be the health and success of the wider economy. We must give everyone a real opportunity to be able to participate in it. By establishing the conditions for stable, sustainable growth, we will build a stronger economy and provide the essential foundations for decent and secure pensions. By opening up fresh opportunities to come off welfare and into work, we will ensure that more people have the opportunity to contribute to their own pensions.

The review will address nine fundamental challenges:

To achieve a sustainable consensus on pensions policy. We need to reach a broad-based agreement, which will allow people to plan for their long-term future and avoid the constant changes in pensions policy we have seen in the last 20 years.

To agree where the responsibility for funding pensions should lie and to establish the right balance between the public and private sectors.

To respond to demographic change. Talk of a demographic "time-bomb" is exaggerated, but there are real issues to address as the ratio of working age people to pensioners falls in the first half of the next century.

To respond to social and labour market change. The last 50 years have seen far-reaching changes in the way we live and work. The pension system needs to reflect this. It must be capable of responding to future change. We need to ensure it provides everyone—men and women, the self-employed, full and part-time workers, those in permanent jobs and those on short-term contracts—with the chance to build up better pensions in their own right.

To ensure resources devoted to pensions are used to maximum effect. We need to make sure that every penny available for pensions is used as efficiently and effecively as possible, whether it comes directly from individuals and employers, or indirectly from them through the tax system.

To get the regulation of pensions right. The personal pensions mis-selling scandal illustrates too clearly what can go wrong when pensions are not properly regulated. People need to have confidence in pensions and be sure their pensions are secure. We need to find a balance with provides an appropriate level of security, eliminates the scope of abuse and does not impose an undue burden on providers.

To raise awareness of pensions and improve the level of financial education so that people understand the importance of saving for retirement and make the right choice about which pension product is best for them.

To narrow the pensions gap between men and women so as to give women more security in retirement. Many pensions are simply not flexible enough to cope with women's working patterns. Women still earn less on average than men and are more likely to have caring responsibilities.

To strike the right balance between the generations. We face the challenge of providing for the future, but we must also look at the position of today's pensioners. The views and concerns of current pensioners will be at the heart of the review process. We will ensure that current pension costs are manageable and that excessive costs are not placed on future generations.

This is a formidable challenge and the Government has a key role in bringing change about. But it cannot tackle the issues on its own. We want to receive advice and hear new ideas from everyone with an interest in pensions.

We shall retain the basic state pension as the foundation of pension provision, and SERPS for those who wish to remain in it.

We will also build on the good quality second pensions that many employees enjoy by supporting and strengthening the existing framework of occupational pension provision where that is necessary. And we wish to consider with the pensions industry how an Investors in Pensions award could be established to set a benchmark against which employers, employees and trustees can measure the quality of their own scheme.

We recognise that, for many people, security in retirement can best be achieved by building up their own funded second pension. We shall therefore consult widely on how best to take forward our proposals for new Stakeholder Pensions. These will offer secure, flexible and value for money second pensions for those who cannot join an employer's occupational scheme, whose pay is low or intermittent, and for whom personal pensions are usually unsuitable.

The review will take forward consultation on the development of Citizenship Pensions for carers who are unable to contribute to pensions in their own right. As a result, carers can lose out on the pension entitlements they would otherwise acquire, and end up on means-tested benefits.

Both these proposals, which we plan to legislate for and implement in this Parliament, will be particularly good news for women.

As part of our consultative approach, I have invited Tom Ross, of Alexander Clay and vice-president of the National Association of Pension Funds, to chair a group of pensions experts to report to me on the current state of pension provision in the United Kingdom and on likely future trends. Their work will inform the development of our plans for a modern, responsive pensions system for the future.

Modernising the social security system is a key priority of the Government. Our long-term objective is to ensure that everyone has the opportunity to build up an adequate pension to guarantee security in retirement. We aim to build a society in which there is a wide consensus on the future for pensions, both now and tomorrow, and provide dignity in retirement for the whole nation.

Chief Adjudication Officer

Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she will publish the thirteenth annual report of the Chief Adjudication Officer; and if she will make a statement. [9607]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The report published today records some welcome improvement in the Benefits Agency and the Employment Service in standards of decision making. Whilst overall the improved performance of last year has been maintained. the report makes clear that there is still much to be done.

The Social Security Bill introduced on 10 July is a key step towards building a modern welfare state using new technology to develop improved benefit processes. The Bill makes provision for the simplification of decision making and appeals.

The report describes favourably the numerous initiatives that the Agencies have introduced to tackle weaknesses and improve their overall performance. But the decision making and appeals framework at present works against the decision makers. Despite the valuable help the Agencies get from the Chief Adjudication Officer and his staff, the system is too cumbersome, over-legalistic and prevents the use of modern technology.

The Social Security Bill will create a framework which enables the Agencies to make decisions in a more straightforward way. The decisions made will be more accurate and easier for both the decision makers and customers to understand.

Social Fund

Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she intends to publish her annual report on the Social Fund for 1996–97 and the annual report of the Social Fund Commissioner. [9608]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Secretary of State's annual report on the Social Fund for 1996–97 (CM 3667) was published today and has been laid before Parliament. The report records that the gross budget allocated to the discretionary part of the Fund during the year was £440.5 million.

Total gross expenditure in 1996–97 was £539 million. This included almost 2 million non-repayable grants and interest free loans worth £432 million and Funeral, Maternity and Cold Weather Payments worth £107 million.

The Secretary of State makes clear in the Report our commitment to modernising and improving welfare delivery. The current Social Security Bill will enable the decision-making process for budgeting loans to be made easier for applicants to understand, less time consuming for staff to operate and more cost effective to administer.

The Social Fund Commissioner's annual report has also been published today and copies placed in the Library.

Windfall Tax

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will ensure that social security entitlements are increased to match any increases in consumer charges due to the windfall tax. [2976]

Mr. Field: Any increase in consumer charges will be a matter for the regulators. Representations from individual companies would have to be considered on their own merits, but we can see no reason for any price increases as a result of the windfall tax. Benefit amounts will be reviewed at the normal time in the normal way taking account of movements in the Retail Prices Index and Rossi indices.

Immunisation (Disability Compensation)

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will review the compensation available for people disabled by immunisation. [7238]

Mr. Denham: The Vaccine Damage Payment scheme is currently being considered.

Income Support

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will give a breakdown of the current numbers of people claiming and in receipt of income support by (a) duration, (b) client group and (c) local authority area. [8514]

Mr. Bradley: The information has been placed in the Library.

Child Support Agency

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make it her policy to abolish the Child Support Agency. [9020]

Mr. Bradley: Children are entitled to the support of both parents wherever they live. The receipt of regular maintenance is a key part of our programme for helping lone parents into work and we are determined to ensure that all absent parents honour their responsibilities to their children. We intend to look closely at all aspects of the Child Support Agency to ensure that it provides an efficient and effective service. Our key objectives for the Agency during the coming year are to sort out cases faster, tackle the backlog of cases and pursue fathers who avoid paying.

Disability Living Allowances (Parkinson's Disease)

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will (a) list and (b) make a statement on recent amendments to the rules for Parkinson's disease sufferers' entitlement to disability living allowances. [9110]

Mr. Denham: Entitlement to Disability Living Allowance is based not on specific disabilities, but on the effects that a person's disability has on their need for help with personal care and/or mobility needs. There are no particular rules relating to the claims from people with Parkinson's Disease.

TREASURY

Self-employed Building Contractors

Mr. Collins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what legislative changes affecting the tax status of self-employed building contractors (a) have been made since 1994 and (b) are planned for the future; when such changes will take effect; what penalties are provided for non-compliance; and if he will make a statement. [7458]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 11 July 1997]: Legislation contained in the 1995 Finance Act introduces new rules governing entitlement to subcontractors' tax certificates. Further legislation in the 1996 Finance Act provides for the introduction of registration cards for those subcontractors who will not qualify for certificates under the new rules. The Inland Revenue are continuing to discuss with industry representatives the legislation which will contain more detailed arrangements for the scheme. An announcement will be made shortly about the implementation of these changes. Penalties of up to £3,000 will be chargeable for certain offences under the scheme.

Endowment Mortgages

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of the changes in tax credit provisions in the Budget on the maturation of with-profits endowment mortgages; and if he will make a statement. [7896]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 July 1997]: The changes to the tax credit provisions should have very little, if any, effect on the maturity benefits from ordinary life assurance policies, including those used to back mortgages. Tax credits are not generally paid to insurance companies in respect of the investments supporting this type of business.

Pocket Budget

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost of preparing, printing and distributing the pocket Budget edition of the Budget proposals. [8927]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury has for some years printed and distributed a "popular" short-form version of the Budget. The final cost for this year will depend on the demand for copies but is expected to be around £50,000.

Consumer Expenditure

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which of his Budget proposals he estimates will reduce consumer expenditure. [7578]

Dawn Primarolo: The Budget tightens fiscal policy in a balanced way and puts the public finances on a sound long-term footing.

Departmental Budgets

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, following the recent Budget, he will give his estimate of the total real level of his Department's budget, in 1995–96 prices, in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99; if he will estimate what such figures were for (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1998–99 following the November 1996 Budget on the basis of the estimates of the GDP deflator contained in that Budget; and if he will make a statement. [8321]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The figures requested for the spending plans of the Chancellors' Departments within the Control Total are as follows: (a) £3,000 million, (b) £2,949 million, (1) £3,027 million, (2) £2,999 million.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what new plans he has to introduce cuts and savings in his Department as a result of the effect on his Department's budgets for 1997–98 and 1998–99 of the upward revisions to the GDP deflators in the Budget on 2 July; and if he will make a statement. [8322]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 14 July 1997]: All Departments are reallocating spending within their Departmental ceilings as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Members' Pension Fund

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effects of the Budget changes to ACT on the hon. Members' pension fund surplus or deficit; and if he will review the decision concerning whether the hon. Members' scheme should remain opted out of SERPS. [8477]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 14 July 1997]: These are matters for the Scheme's trustees and the House Authorities in consultation with their professional advisers.

Stationery

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department spent on stationery provision in respect of paper items in each of the last five years. [8865]

Mrs. Liddell: The amount spent on paper by the Treasury in each of the last five years was:

1992–93: £95,518

1993–94: £73,182

1995–96: £96,310

1996–97: £94,729.

In real terms, the amount spent has declined by 10 per cent. between 1992–93 and 1996–97.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy towards economic and monetary union. [9758]

Mr. Gordon Brown: Economic and Monetary Union (EMU) will have profound implications for British businesses and the British economy whether Britain is in or out. Britain's national interest demands a better informed and more reasoned debate than we have had in the past.

I have therefore announced the publication of a report on the pros and cons of EMU. Copies are available in the Vote Office. The report was first published by David Currie earlier this year for the Economist Intelligence Unit. The Government has republished it today, in a shorter and more accessible form.

I have also announced that the Treasury will publish on 24 July a practical guide for businesses on EMU. Copies of the guide will also be available from the Vote Office. The aim of this is to give businesses the information they need to make the preparations that are necessary whether or not we join EMU.

I announced today that I shall be establishing an advisory group with senior representatives from across the private sector, to discuss matters of common concern about the practical implications for business of EMU.

The Government's policy towards EMU has not changed. Those countries that choose to take part in EMU must do so on the basis of sustainable convergence as set out in the Maastricht Treaty. Any decision about Britain joining the single currency will be determined by a hard headed assessment of Britain's economic interests.

While nothing has been ruled out, there are still formidable obstacles to the UK joining the single currency in the first wave.

End-year Flexibility

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the amounts for 1997–98 resulting from the carry forward of underspends allowed under the end-year flexibility schemes for capital, running costs, health, EU structural funds and nationalised industries expenditure. [9759]

Mr. Darling: A list of amounts for end-year flexibility totalling £198 million for capital expenditure; £387 million for running costs; £234 million for health expenditure; £499 million for EU structural funds and £63 million for Nationalised Industries expenditure is shown in tables that have been placed in the Library.

Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, individual cash limits and running costs limits will be increased when end-year flexibility is taken up.

The total increase in cash limits resulting from the take-up of end-year flexibility will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

WALES

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to have regular review of his relationship with a Welsh Assembly after its establishment. [8491]

Mr. Ron Davies: The White Paper, which will be published later this month, will set out the Government's thinking on the role of the Secretary of State for Wales after the Welsh Assembly is established.

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to announce the date of the referendum to establish a Welsh Assembly. [9803]

Mr. Davies: Subject to the House of Commons approving a motion to disagree with the amendment on dates of referendums inserted into the Referendums (Scotland and Wales) Bill in another place, the referendum in Wales will be held on 18 September 1997.

Press Releases

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department spends on biking press releases to (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals or groups, each time his Department issues a press release; how many such press releases were issued by his Department (i) in the period 1 May to 1 July and (ii) in the period 1 January to 1 March; and if he will review his Department's use of couriers to deliver press releases and investigate the possibility of using fax or e-mail. [8811]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Department does not use couriers to bike press releases. Press releases are sent to media outlets by fax where appropriate. Work is in hand to make press notices available publicly on the Internet.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales in the targets set for the WDA, what are the boundaries of (a) the M4 corridor and (b) the A55 corridor; and what is the total population within each corridor. [8992]

Mr. Hain: For the purpose of Welsh Development Agency strategic guidance and targets, the eastern M4 corridor is defined as the coastal strip running from Chepstow in the east to Pyle in the west to the southern boundary of the programme for the valleys areas, extending east to include, broadly, the southern half of Monmouthshire. The total population is approximately 800,000.

In north Wales the eastern A55 corridor is defined as the non-rural part of the Wrexham county borough council area, the whole of Flintshire and the northern part of Denbighshire, including the towns of St. Asaph, Rhyl and Prestatyn. The total population is approximately 320,000.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if the 50 per cent. target set for the WDA for new jobs outside the M4 and A55 corridors is based on full-time job equivalents. [8993]

Mr. Hain: The target for jobs created and safeguarded is on the basis of full-time equivalents.

CADW

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what targets he has set for CADW Welsh Historic Monuments Executive Agency for 1997–98. [9761]

Mr. Ron Davies: CADW has been set the following key targets for 1997–98:

1. To complete 90 per cent. of the approved conservation maintenance programme.
2. To complete 75 resurvey lists.
3. To resolve 75 per cent. of ad hoc listing cases within 17 weeks.
4. To complete 110 scheduling actions, of which at least 70 per cent. involve additional protection.
5. To resolve 75 per cent. of listed building consent cases within 4 weeks and 90 per cent. of cases in 6 weeks.
6. To resolve 75 per cent. of scheduled moment consent cases within 13 weeks and 90 per cent. of cases within 17 weeks.
7. To resolve 80 per cent. of historic building grant applications in 18 weeks.
8. To resolve 80 per cent. of ancient monument grant applications within 6 weeks.
9. To pay 90 per cent. of properly presented claims for historic buildings and ancient monuments grants within 5 weeks of receipt.
10. To achieve a market share of 63 per cent. of the number of visitors to the top twenty heritage sites in Wales.
11. To reduce direct net cost per visitor at Cadw's sites to an average of 32 pence.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Schengen Acquis

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the documents comprising the Schengen Acquis, giving (a) titles, (b) date adopted and by which body and (c) length and language of each document, indicating which of the documents are confidential; and if he will place copies in the Library. [6393]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 3 July 1997]: I wrote to the hon. Member on 15 July and have placed a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) on what occasions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have refused to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings with hon. Members to discuss matters relating to interests registered by those hon. Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests; [8097]

(2) if he will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department refuse requests from hon. Members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those hon. Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 of the Register of Members' Interests. [8094]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The First Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) made it clear that, when Members are meeting Ministers or others on topics in which they have an interest, the onus is on the Member to declare that interest, not the Minister to know. It is not practicable for Ministers and officials, amongst their other duties, to vet requests for meetings against the Register of Members' interests.

Commercial Lobbyists

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have met commercial lobbyists to discuss matters relating to the business of his Department; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings; [8095]

(2) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have attended meetings with organisations representing (i) commercial and (ii) non-commercial interests organised by commercial lobbying firms; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings. [8096]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained in response to the hon. Member for Newport, (Mr. Flynn) West on 2 June, column 99, Ministers and Officials will in the normal course of business receive deputations from many groups who are concerned to press their own interests or those of their clients, which Ministers and Officials take due care to consider within the wider public interest and Government policy. As it is not practicable to distinguish particular groups as lobbyists, we cannot keep a register of such meetings.

Amsterdam Treaty

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the representations he has received concerning the possible infringement of religious liberties under new article 6a of the proposed treaty of Amsterdam. [8788]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister today.

Press Releases

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department spends on biking press releases to (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals or groups, each time his Department issues a press release; how many such press releases were issued by his Department (i) in the period 1 May to 1 July and (ii) in the period 1 January to 1 March; and if he will review his Department's use of couriers to deliver press releases and investigate the possibility of using fax or e-mail. [8820]

Mr. Fatchett: This Department does not deliver press releases by courier. They are distributed by fax or e-mail, and are also available on the Internet.

Islamabad Embassy

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements he has made for amending the opening hours for provision of visas to the public in the Islamabad embassy; on what date he anticipates it will be open for normal hours; what is the size of the backlog of visa applications; and what factors underlie the problems experienced. [9108]

Mr. Fatchett: The normal operation of the Entry Clearance Section in Islamabad has been disrupted over recent weeks by a number of crashes of the Section's computer equipment. I am pleased to say that the faults have been repaired. We also expect to install a new system within a few weeks.

In the meantime, the Visa Section ended its restricted operation, and re-opened for normal business, on Monday 14 July. It is giving priority to Visit applications. New settlement applications will be accepted from 21 July, and the backlog of 1,200 settlement applications is being tackled as quickly as possible.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Press Releases

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much her Department spends on biking press releases to (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals or groups, each time her Department issues a press release; how many such press releases were issued by her Department (i) in the period 1 May to 1 July and (ii) in the period 1 January to 1 March; and if she will review her Department's use of couriers to deliver press releases and investigate the possibility of using fax or e-mail. [8819]

Clare Short: My department does not use a biking service for any of its press releases. They are sent by fax, post and through the Central Office of Information's News Delivery Service. Nine press releases were issued in this way between 1 January and 1 March 1997 and 12 between 1 May and 1 July.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Oil and Gas Developments

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she proposes to introduce regulations requiring environmental impact assessments for all oil and gas developments for which licenses are being sought. [7102]

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she plans to initiate an environmental impact assessment on the development of oil fields west of the Shetland Islands. [8049]

Mr. Battle: I have today published for consultation draft regulations which would implement the Environmental Impact Assessment Directive (85/377 EC) as it applies to offshore oil and gas activities on the United Kingdom Continental Shelf.

Implementing the Directive for oil and gas projects will give the public improved rights of access to environmental information about projects likely to have significant effects on the environment and make the decision process more open than it is now. This should give people greater confidence that consent decisions are being made on the basis of proper science and thorough evaluation.

Member States are required by the Directive to consider environmental information which the interested public has had an opportunity to see and comment on before consent can be given to projects which could have a significant effect on the environment.

The draft Regulations would implement the Directive as it applies to consents for significant offshore oil and gas projects, including deep drillings, production developments and pipeline construction. They set out how the Secretary of State should decide which projects are likely to have significant effects on the environment and so require environmental assessments; the initial data companies must provide to permit that decision to be made; and, if one is required, the detailed information needed in any environmental statement.

They also require applicants to place notices to inform the public that an environmental statement has been required for a particular project and that copies of the statement can be obtained from or inspected at public addresses so that the public's views may be taken into account in reaching any decision on consent.

The proposed regulations would replace the Department's present procedures under which assessments have been required for developments within 25 miles of the coast or in other sensitive areas where recommended by the Government's statutory environmental advisers such as the Joint Nature Conservation Committee. These advisors will continue to be consulted under the new procedure.

The draft regulations have been sent to other Government departments and to the organisations normally consulted on oil and gas licensing, including the Wildlife and Countryside Links' Oil and Gas Environmental Consortium—which represents Friends of the Earth, the Marine Conservation Society and other national and regional environmental interest groups—and a number of fishermen's organisations as well as oil and gas industry representatives. Copies have also been placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

Comments on the proposed Offshore Petroleum Production and Pipe-lines (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1997 should be made to the Department of Trade and Industry by 1 October 1997.

Coal Board Property Sales

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how the sale of National Coal Board Estates was conducted; how many tenders were received; and what were the criteria which decided that National Coal Board Estates be sold to Fell Estates Ltd; [7235]

(2) what assurances were (a) sought from and (b) given by Fell Estates Ltd. concerning the status of existing leaseholders; [7236]

(3) what assessment she had made of the sale of National Coal Board Estates to Fell Estates Ltd.; and if she will make a statement. [7234]

Mr. Battle: British Coal have undertaken a thorough trawl of their completed property sales and have been unable to find any record of selling any of their property to Fell Estates Ltd.

Information Technology

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total spending in the United Kingdom on (a) computers, (b) telecommunications and (c) peripherals in 1996; what was the net monetary vale of United Kingdom exports of information technology for 1996; what is the sum of these figures as a percentage of total gross domestic product for that year; and if he will make a statement. [8715]

Mr. Battle: Figures for sales within the UK and of exports from the UK of the specified items in 1995 (the latest year for which complete information is available) are as follows:

£ million

	Total sales in UK	UK exports
Computers	10,362	7,540
Telecommunications equipment	3,749	1,859
Computer peripherals	1,061	417

The contribution of these industries to gross domestic product was 0.6 per cent.

Musical Instrument Industry

Mr. Dismore: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will take steps to encourage the United Kingdom domestic musical instrument manufacturing industry; and if she will make a statement. [9004]

Mr. Battle: The Government acknowledges the continuing contribution to the economy of the UK's musical instrument industry. However a changing world environment and intensified competition pose new challenges which must be overcome if the sector is to maintain and improve its performance. The Government is in regular contact with the sector through its representatives and is keen to continue this partnership for the future benefit of the sector.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the licences expire in respect of each operating nuclear power station; and if she will list the stations where the operating licence has been extended, indicating for each station listed the dates of the expiry of the original licence and the dates of renewals granted. [8911]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 16 July 1997]: Nuclear site licences do not have set expiry dates. A licence remains in force until such time as either a new licence is granted for the site, the operator surrenders the licence, or it is revoked by the Health and Safety Executive.

As explained in my answer of 10 July 1997, Official Report, column 599, subject to nuclear power stations continuing to meet the high standards of safety demanded by the Health and Safety Executive, decision on their closure are a matter for the operators.

Debt Payments

Mrs. May: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultations she has had with bodies representing industry, including small businesses, in preparation for the forthcoming Green Paper on the late payment of debt. [9102]

Mrs. Roche: I have met the following bodies representing all sizes and types of business: the Forum of Private Business, the Federation of Small Businesses, the Confederation of British Industry, the British Chamber of Commerce, the Institute of Directors, the British Bankers Association, the Union of Independent Companies, the Country Landowners Association, and the National Farmers Union. In addition, my officials have met interested parties, including the Credit Services Association.

We will continue to meet interested parties during the consultation period following the publication of the Green Paper.

Director General of Fair Trading

Helen Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she intends to publish the report by the Director General of Fair Trading for the year 1996. [9757]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The 23nd Annual Report by the Director General of Fair Trading has been published today. It covers the period from 1 January 1996 and 31 December 1996. Copies of the Report have been laid before Parliament.

Small Businesses

Mrs. May: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her Department's definition of small businesses. [9021]

Mrs. Roche: There is no single definition of a small business, mainly because of the wide diversity of businesses.

The question of an appropriate definition is meaningful only in the context of a specific measure for which it is considered necessary to separate one category of enterprises from another for reason of size.

In practice, a variety of definitions are adopted depending on the objective of the schemes or initiative. Such definitions are normally based upon the number of employees, but may also refer to turnover or other factors such as growth potential.

For statistical purposes the DTI usually uses the following definitions:

Micro firms: 0–9 employees

Small firms: 0–49 employees (includes micro businesses)

Medium firms: 50–249 employees

Large firms: 250+ employees.

Advice from Business

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she has taken to ensure that Ministers in her Department receive advice from business. [8974]

Mr. Battle: Ministers and officials are in regular contact with business people representing all sectors and sizes of firms from across the country. In addition to consulting business and other interested parties from time to time on specific policy proposals, my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has initiated a more formal process of consultation with business on policies and priorities to improve competitiveness.

This initiative—Competitiveness UK—will include establishing an Advisory Group of prominent business people to advise the President on all aspects of competitiveness; holding a Business Summit on 23 July to establish common ground on a range of areas for further discussion; and creating a number of Working Parties drawn mainly from business to advise on specific aspects of competitiveness. This will help inform the development of policies for a White Paper on Competitiveness to be published next year.

Arms Export Licences

Mr. Forth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will give for the Review of Criteria for Assessing conventional Arms Export Licences (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8235]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

The review of criteria used in considering licence applications to export conventional arms is being taken forward as a matter of urgency. We expect to complete the review in the next few weeks. It is being conducted by officials in the relevant Government departments as part of their regular duties. The cost of the review could be calculated only at disproportionate cost.

PRIME MINISTER

Amsterdam Treaty

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the representations he has received concerning the possible infringement of religious liberties under new article 6a of the proposed treaty of Amsterdam. [8789]

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of representations. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office, who lead on European matters, have also received a number of representations on this matter.

Computers (50th Anniversary)

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Prime Minister what plans the Government have to commemorate the 50th anniversary on 21 June 1998 of the first running of a stored program on a computer at Manchester. [8285]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 15 July 1997]: The Government recognises the significance of this anniversary. The original stored-program computer, known as The Baby, was created at Manchester's Computer Science Department, and ran the first computer program on 21 June 1948. The Government welcomes an initiative of the computer conservation specialist group of the British Computer Society, to build a replica of the original machine, to mark the event. The replica is being built at Manchester University, with sponsorship from ICL.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister how many and what percentage of employees in his Policy Unit are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [8970]

The Prime Minister: One Afro-Caribbean.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 14 July, Official Report, column 43, and the answer of 11 July, Official Report, column 626, if he will transfer responsibility for the Lockerbie bombing investigation to the Metropolitan police. [9023]

The Prime Minister: Dumfries and Galloway Constabulary have from the outset conducted the Lockerbie Criminal Investigation. There is no reason to depart from that. The investigation relates to the mass murder of 270 people committed in Scotland. My noble and learned Friend, the Lord Advocate has responsibility for ensuring that crimes in Scotland are properly investigated and Section 12 of the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act 1995 authorises him to issue instructions to any Chief Constable with regard to reporting offences alleged to have been committed in his area. The transfer of this inquiry to the Metropolitan police would remove that power from the Lord Advocate in this case and would impede the proper investigation of it.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 14 July, Official Report, column 43, what steps he proposes to bring to a conclusion the Lockerbie issue. [9024]

The Prime Minister: As I told my hon. Friend on 18 June, Official Report, column 509, we will try every avenue to make progress in this matter, but the onus is on Libya to comply with the relevant United Nations Security Council Resolutions.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departmental Budgets

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what new plans he has to introduce cuts and savings in his Department as a result of the effect on his Department's budgets for 1997–98 and 1998–99 of the upward revisions to the GDP deflators in the Budget on 2 July; and if he will make a statement. [8306]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 14 July 1997]: All Departments are considering the case for reallocating spending within their Departmental ceilings as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if, following the recent Budget, he will give his estimate of the total real level of his Department's budget, in 1995–96 prices, in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99; if he will estimate what such figures were for (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1998–99 following the November 1996 Budget on the basis of the estimates of the GDP deflator contained in that Budget; and if he will make a statement. [8305]

Mr. Smith [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The figures requested for my Department's spending plans within the Control Total are as follows: £875,285,000, £884,375,000, £883,977,000 and £899,727,000.

Stationery

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much his Department spent on stationery provision in respect of paper items in each of the last five years. [8869]

Mr. Tom Clarke: My Department was created in April 1992 by transferring certain areas of responsibility from six Departments. The 1992–93 figures are not available as the costs were partly met by these Departments. Expenditure for the last four years was:

1995–96: £25,127.51

1996–97: £27,630.39.

Television Licences

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people received a television licence at the £5 discount price (a) at the latest date for which data are available, (b) 12 months before that date and (c) 24 months before that date; and in each case what was the total cost of the scheme calculated against a colour licence. [9013]

Mr. Fisher: I understand from the BBC that the information is as follows:

March 1997—650,000 people; cost £54.9 million; colour licence fee—£89.50

March 1996—641,100 people; cost £52.2 million; colour licence fee—£86.50

March 1995—678,800 people; cost £54 million; colour licence fee—£84.50.

National Lottery

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he expects to publish his White Paper on his proposals for the national lottery. [9826]

Mr. Chris Smith: The White Paper will be published on 21 July.

Tourism

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to review the role of those of his Department's bodies with responsibility for tourist (a) promotion, (b) registration and (c) accommodation standards; and if he will make a statement. [7900]

Mr. Tom Clarke: As "Breaking New Ground" made clear, we shall conduct a thorough review before putting forward any proposals for change. The timing and scope of this are currently under consideration.

Press Releases

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much his Department spends on biking press releases to (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals or groups, each time his Department issues a press release; how many such press releases were issued by his Department (i) in the period 1 May to 1 July and (ii) in the period 1 January to 1 March; and if he will review his Department's use of couriers to deliver press releases and investigate the possibility of using fax or e-mail. [8816]

Mr. Tom Clarke: My Department does not bike press releases either to hon. Members or other recipients each time it issues a press release.

None of the 61 press releases issued in the period 1 May to 1 July or of the 59 issued in the period 1 January to 1 March were distributed by bike or courier. My Department uses fax, the Internet and the Central Office of Information's News Distribution Service which, inter alia, supplies my Department's Press Releases to the Parliamentary Online Information Service (POLIS), which is available on line to all hon. Members.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Huntingdon Life Sciences

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the results of the investigation into Huntingdon Life Sciences currently being undertaken by the Home Office Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate will be made public with particular reference to any action taken against members of staff found guilty of cruelty to animals. [8337]

Mr. George Howarth: The personal licences of two individuals have been revoked. The police have charged these two individuals with offences under the Protection of Animals Act 1911.

We expect to issue a public statement about the outcome of the Home Office investigation and are currently seeking legal advice on its extent, nature and timing. Section 24 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 prohibits the disclosure of information given in confidence and we must also avoid prejudicing the prosecutions being sought by the police.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many licences for experimentation on animals in the field of microsurgery have been applied for under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. [8661]

Mr. George Howarth: Twenty-four. Applications for microsurgical training are referred to the Animal Procedures Committee and are noted in the Committee's annual report.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the members of the Animal Procedures Committee and their area of expertise. [8668]

Mr. Howarth: The information requested is as follows:

	Age of expertise
Professor Margaret Brazier	Law
Professor Ronald Anderson	Animal husbandry
Professor Margaret Boden	Philosophy and psychology
Professor Barry Bridges	Histology
Professor Fiona Broughton Pipkin	Perinatal physiology
Dr. David Christopher	Regulatory toxicology
Dr. Yvonne Cripps	Law
Professor Robin Dunbar	Primate behaviour
Professor Paul Flecknell	Comparative biology
Mr. John Gregory	Laboratory animal science
Professor Susan Iversen	Experimental psychology
Mrs. Judy MacArthur Clark	Veterinary science
Miss Cindy Milburn	Animal welfare
Dr. Iain Purchase	Toxicology
Dr. Jacqueline Southee	In-vitro toxicology
Professor Michael Spyer	Physiology
Dr. Anthony Suckling	Animal welfare
Professor John Turner	Evolutionary genetics
Mr. Les Ward	Animal welfare

Perjury

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 10 July, Official Report, column 522, when he expects the police investigation into the alleged perjury of Jonathan Aitken in the discontinued libel action against The Guardian to be concluded. [8736]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner informs me that the investigation is being pursued as expeditiously as possible. When the investigation is complete, a report will be sent to the Crown Prosecution Service. This investigation is an operational matter for the Commissioner.

Foxhunting

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the impact on farmers' incomes of a ban on foxhunting. [7286]

Mr. George Howarth: A Private Member's Bill to ban hunting with hounds is currently before the House. This will provide the opportunity for Parliament to consider all the effects of a ban.

Press Releases

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spends on biking press releases to (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals or groups, each time his Department issues a press release; how many such press releases were issued by his Department (i) in the period 1 May to 1 July and (ii) in the period 1 Janaury to 1 March; and if he will review his Department's use of couriers to deliver press releases and investigate the possibility of using fax or e-mail. [8818]

Mr. Straw: No Home Office press releases are sent out by courier. In the period of 1 May to 1 July, my Department issued 41 press releases. In the period 1 Janaury to 1 March the number was 55. The Home Office uses both electronic distribution and fax to deliver press releases speedily to the media. In addition, all releases are placed on the Internet.

Homosexuals

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with regard to Application Number 28186/94 Euan Sutherland v. United Kingdom concerning the age of consent for homosexuals, if the United Kingdom's case includes the contention that such matters are within the margin of appreciation of each member state; in the event of the Government being minded to settle the case, what steps will be taken to ensure that the United Kingdom's rights in this respect are protected; and if he will make a statement. [8995]

Mr. Michael: The European Court of Human Rights recognises that states have a margin of appreciation in deciding, through a democratic process, how best to legislate in controversial areas. The Government welcome the Court's recognition of the importance of this doctrine in enabling countries to have distinctive, appropriate and fair controls that reflect genuine national differences. Social and moral questions, on which there can be widely differing opinions, will often fall within the margin of appreciation. In taking the view that the age of homosexual consent is a matter on which Parliament should decide what is appropriate for the United Kingdom, on the basis of a free vote, the Government again emphasise the importance of the margin of appreciation in such issues.

International Crimes

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that responsibility for the investigation of major international crimes involving (a) foreign Governments and (b) state prosecutors in other countries is devolved to the Metropolitan police. [9022]

Mr. Michael: The investigation of crime is primarily a matter for the police force in whose area the offence occurred. All chief officers may call for, and be asked to provide, assistance in such investigations, whether the offence was committed in this country or elsewhere. The Metropolitan police exceptionally takes the lead in providing assistance in respect of hostage situations involving British citizens abroad. As the present arrangements are tried and tested, I see no reason to change them.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for asylum were lodged (a) at the point of entry, (b) in country and (c) in total, in each month since January 1996; and how many asylum applications were awaiting an initial decision as at the end of each month since January 1996. [9756]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested is given in the table and takes into account recent upward revisions to the number of in-country asylum applications lodged between September 1996 and May 1997. Due to an error in the method of calculation, certain in-country applications were not recorded in the monthly totals during this period.

Applications[1] received for asylum in the United Kingdom, excluding dependants, by location of application, and applications awaiting an initial decision, January 1996 to May 1997

Principal applicants

	Number of asylum applications
	Lodged at port	Lodged in-country	Total	Applications awaiting an initial decision[2]
1996
January	1,070	2,240	3,310	69,765

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crime Victims and Witnesses

32. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Attorney-General what discussions he has had with the Home Secretary about the care of victims of crime and of witnesses. [7311]

The Attorney-General: It is not my practice to give details of meetings with Ministerial colleagues on particular topics. I have frequent discussions with my right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary about Departmental matters of members interest. As regards fulfilment of our commitment to improving the position of victims and those who give evidence in court, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Home Secretary on 3 July, Official Report, columns 235–37.

Serious Fraud Office

33. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the work of the Serious Fraud Office. [7312]

The Attorney-General: The aim of the Serious Fraud Office remains to investigate and prosecute serious and complex fraud and so deter fraud and maintain confidence in the probity of business and financial services in the United Kingdom. To this end since 5 April 1996 the SFO has secured the conviction of 26 defendants out of 29 prosecuted.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Forth: To ask the Attorney-General if he will give for the proposed review of the Crown Prosecution Service (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8250]

The Attorney-General: Sir Iain Glidewell is aiming to report by the end of the year.

No firm estimate as to the likely cost is yet available.

Lenient Sentences

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Attorney-General how many sentences considered unduly lenient he has sought leave to refer to the Court of Appeal since 1 May. [7313]

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Chope).

SCOTLAND

NHS Operations (Cancellations)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were admitted to hospital for surgery and subsequently discharged without the operation having taken place in each NHS hospital trust or health board hospital in the period 1 October 1996 to 31 March 1997. [6854]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer 4 July 1997]: I regret that information on cancellations of operations in the level of detail requested is not collected. The figures for cancellations of planned admissions for in-patient and day case treatment during the period 1 October 1996 to 31 March 1997 are given in the table. The number of cancellations involved is very small in relation to the total number of admissions. The Government and the NHS in Scotland are working to reduce to as few as possible the number of occasions when patients have their operations cancelled.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many patients awaiting operations were informed by letter of the cancellation of their hospital admission for the operation in respect of each NHS hospital trust and health board hospital during the period 1 October 1996 to 31 March 1997. [6855]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer 4 July 1997]: I regret that information on cancellations of operations in the level of detail requested is not collected. The number of cancellations involved is very small in relation to the total number of admissions. The Government and the NHS in Scotland are working to reduce to as few as possible the number of occasions when patients have their operations cancelled. I would expect all hospitals to notify patients of the cancellation of their admission for treatment as soon as possible and by the most appropriate method.

Local Authority Pension Funds

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make an assessment of the additional amounts that local authorities in Scotland will have to pay into their pension funds as a result of the proposed changes to advance corporation tax; and from where these moneys will be provided. [7342]

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 8 July 1997]: The funding of local authority pension funds is a matter for local authorities. Although the loss of tax credits will have some impact on the income of local authority pension funds, the extent to which these changes feed through to authorities' budgets will depend on the overall judgements made by the funds' actuaries as they undertake subsequent revaluations to the funds. In addition, pension funds should benefit from improved company performance as a result of the reduction in Corporation Tax and other measures in the Budget to encourage quality long term investment.

Scottish Parliament

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the date of the Scottish Assembly referendum. [7662]

Mr. McLeish: The referendum on the establishment and tax-varying powers of a Scottish Parliament will be held by this Autumn. My noble Friend Lord Sewel gave an undertaking during Committee on the Referendums (Scotland and Wales) Bill in another place that the Government would announce the date of the referendum by Report. [House of Lords O.R. Volume 581 Number 25. Column 103]. On the currently envisaged timetable, the date will therefore be announced by 21 July.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Minister of State's meeting with Professor J.D. Percy and colleagues of the Accounts Commission on arrangements and responsibilities for a Scottish Parliament. [9109]

Mr. McLeish: I have agreed to meet with Professor Percy and the Accounts Commission but have yet to arrange a date.

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the date of the referendum to be held in Scotland on the establishment of a Scottish Parliament. [9825]

Mr. Dewar: Subject to the Referendums (Scotland and Wales) Bill receiving Royal Assent, the referendum on our proposals for a Scottish Parliament will be held on Thursday 11 September 1997.

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what occasions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have refused to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings with hon. Members to discuss matters relating to interests registered by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8065]

Mr. Dewar: It would not be practicable for Ministers and officials, among their other duties, to check requests for meetings against the Register of Members' Interests. The First Report of the Nolan Committee made it clear that, when hon. Members are meeting Ministers on matters in which they have an interest, the onus is on the Member to declare that interest and not on the Minister to know of it (Cm 2850 paragraph 2.63).

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department refuse requests from hon. Members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8062]

Mr. Dewar: The First Report of the Nolan Committee (Cm. 2850) recognised the value of enabling hon. Members to retain interests outside the House, provided these were properly declared, both in the Register of Members' Interests and on other occasions. Subject to these requirements, and to the Rules of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, hon. Members are free to seek meetings relative to such interests with Ministers and officials. Such requests are considered alongside the many other approaches from individuals and organisations concerned to press their own interests or those of others.

Commercial Lobbyists

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have met commercial lobbyists to discuss matters relating to the business of his Department; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings; [8063]

(2) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have attended meetings with organisations representing (i) commercial and (ii) non-commercial interests organised by commercial lobbying firms; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings. [8064]

Mr. Dewar: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained in response to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 2 June Official Report, column 99, Ministers and officials receive deputations from many groups who are concerned to press their own interests or those of their clients. These are considered in the context of the wider public interest and of Government policy. As it is not practicable to distinguish particular groups as lobbyists, I do not propose to introduce a register of such meetings.

Multi-storey Flats (Glasgow)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of housing units in Glasgow classified as multi-storey flats; and how many of these are unoccupied at the last date for which figures are available. [8245]

Mr. Chisholm: Information on the number of dwellings by type and location is available only for dwellings owned by local authorities. At 1 April 1996, the latest date for which information is available, there were 23,145 local authority dwellings in Glasgow classified as high rise flats. Information on unoccupied dwellings (vacant stock) is collected from local authorities, but not specifically by type of dwelling.

Less-favoured Areas

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to propose extension of less-favoured area status in Scotland. [7275]

Mr. Chisholm: My right hon. Friend has no plans to propose an extension to the less favoured areas in Scotland.

Beaufort's Dyke

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide details of the nature of material, quantity and degree of radioactivity of the radioactive material dumped in Beaufort's Dyke in the 1950s. [8721]

Mr. Chisholm: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland on 8 July 1997, Official Report, columns 427-28.

As indicated therein copies of the relevant documentation, containing such information as is available, have been placed in the Library of the House.

Skye Bridge

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will institute an immediate review by a senior advocate of the Skye Bridge toll order. [9153]

Mr. Dewar: The Invergarry–Kyle of Lochalsh Trunk Road (A87) Extension (Skye Bridge Crossing) Toll Order 1992 sets out the tolling regime for the bridge. My officials will consider the terms of the Toll Order in the light of the decision of the High Court in the appeal and my decision on toll levels for regular users set out in my reply to the hon. Member on 4 July, Official Report, columns 288–90. There is no case for the wider review suggested.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will review the costs to public funds of buying out the Skye Bridge contract. [9152]

Mr. Dewar: The exit value of the contract is governed by the terms of the concession agreement with the operator. My Department calculated an estimate of the cost of termination of the contract on those terms as part of my delivery of our manifesto commitment to review the toll regime. All information relevant to that calculation is known to my Department and there would be no basis or purpose for a review.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will suspend Skye Bridge toll collection pending the hearing of the appeal; and what powers he has to pay interim recompense to Skye Bridge Ltd. pending the outcome of the appeal. [9155]

Mr. Dewar: No. Accordingly the question of paying interim recompense does not arise.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Safety

5. Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures his Department is taking to ensure higher standards of food safety. [7279]

Mr. Rooker: Our top priority is the creation of a Food Standards Agency to raise standards of food safety. But we are not waiting for the creation of the Agency: we are reviewing all of the work of the Department to ensure we have in place the right policies and procedures to deliver the highest standards of food safety.

Farm Animal Welfare

15. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to improve farm animal welfare; and if he will make a statement. [7291]

Mr. Morley: We have already implemented new rules on welfare in transit, commissioned an urgent review of pre-export enforcement arrangements for live animals, and secured an amendment to the Treaty of Rome which recognises animals as sentient beings.

We shall be announcing further initiatives shortly.

Beef Farmers

16. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for additional assistance to beef farmers. [7292]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: Substantial sums of money have already been spent on helping the industry. In the circumstances and in view of the need for tight control on public expenditure, I have no current plans to make additional payments to beef producers to compensate them for the relatively low level of beef prices.

Open Government

17. Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to publish more information under the provisions of the open government code. [7293]

Mr. Morley: I am fully committed to maximising openness both under the Code of Practice and in the proposed Freedom of Information Bill and am making steps to improve availability of information.

Food Imports

18. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce new controls on imported food. [7294]

Mr. Rooker: I assume that this question refers to our proposals to extend existing UK rules on Specified Bovine Material (SBM) to bovine material that has been imported. SBM may not be used in human or animal food or in cosmetic, pharmaceutical or medical products. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend, the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Thomas) on 5 June, Official Report, columns 227–228, by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Cereal Growers (Green Pound)

19. Mr. Lansley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the impact of revaluations of the green pound on cereal growers. [7295]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: Market prices for cereals have fallen significantly over the past twelve months but it is difficult to say how much of this is due to green pound revaluations and how much to other factors. Arable area payments to farmers in 1997 have been substantially protected from the effects of recent revaluations under arrangements agreed by the EU Agriculture Council in March this year.

Diet

20. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what role his Department plays in (a) compiling and (b) disseminating information about healthy diets. [7296]

Mr. Rooker: In order to ensure that healthy eating advice is based on firm scientific grounds, the Ministry supports a programme of research and, together with the Department of Health, a surveillance programme of the diet of the population.

The Ministry, working closely with the Department of Health and the Health Education Authority, develops literature on healthy eating based on this information and on expert advice from the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy (COMA), and disseminates a range of materials to the general public and to health professionals.

Agri-environment schemes

21. Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what role the Government's plans for agri-environment schemes will play in its proposals for reform of the common agricultural policy. [7298]

Mr. Morley: In the forthcoming negotiations on CAP reform the Government will press for progressive cuts in production-related support and for a part of the resultant savings to be used for targeted measures to help rural areas, including through agri-environment schemes.

25. Mr. Reed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Government's policy in respect of agri-environment schemes. [7302]

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what economic measures he is assessing to direct United Kingdom agriculture towards more ecologically sustainable systems; and if he will make a statement. [8500]

Mr. Morley: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply given to my hon. Friend, the Member for Wolverhampton, North-East (Mr. Purchase) on 16 July, Official Report, column 184.

Sheepmeat and Goatmeat Imports

22. Mr. Gray: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ban the import of sheepmeat and goatmeat form countries where there is no requirement for the removal of specified offals in ovines. [7299]

Mr. Rooker: No. The specified materials of sheep and goats that are currently prohibited from sale for human consumption in the UK are the heads, excluding the tongue, unless from Australia or New Zealand.

Following advice form the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee my right hon. Friend announced on 5 June proposals for legislation to extend the list of specified materials to include the spleen of all animals and the spinal cord of animals over 12 months of age. These additional measures would apply to animals slaughtered in the UK and to sheepmeat and goatmeat imported into the UK, other than from New Zealand and Australia.

Common Agricultural Policy

23. Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for speeding up change to the common agricultural policy; and what policy priorities he will promote in its place. [7300]

Mr. Rooker: The Government's objective is to secure a more market-oriented Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) through the phasing out of production related support. The Commission is expected to produce legislative proposals for reform of several key sectors of the CAP later this year. Making progress on discussion of these will be a priority for the UK Presidency of the Agriculture Council.

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his discussions with his European Union counterparts about the reform of the common agricultural policy. [8722]

Mr. Rooker: My right hon. Friend, the Minister, has had a number of discussions with the Commission and with Ministers of other Member States, in which he has made clear the need for early radical reform of the CAP. The strength of our argument has been broadly accepted by the Commission in its "Agenda 2000" paper which was published yesterday. We look forward to leading the debate on this and on the legislative proposals for reform which the Commission should produce later in the year.

Milk Quotas

26. Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to reform the system of milk quotas. [7303]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: Reforming the CAP dairy regime and its system of milk quotas is a high priority for the Government. I shall continue to press in the Agriculture Council for cuts in support prices and the removal of quotas, to be accompanied by time limited, degressive and non-discriminatory aid payments to dairy farmers, decoupled from production, in order to facilitate adjustment to these reforms.

Beef Export Ban

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will next meet his European counterparts to discuss the next steps towards lifting the beef export ban. [7301]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I will be attending the Agriculture Council on 22–23 July. Although the lifting of the export ban is not on the agenda for this meeting, I will be taking every opportunity to raise this as appropriate in the informal discussions which take place in the margins of these meetings.

Fish Breeding

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to implement the recommendations on fish-breeding areas in the report chaired by Lord Perry. [7158]

Mr. Morley: The House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology recommended that consideration should be given to the establishment under the Common Fisheries Policy of a system requiring fishermen to report to the authorities if there is a high proportion of juvenile fish in their catch. Following receipt of such a report the area should be surveyed by the appropriate national authority and, providing that the report is verified, the area should be closed until the juvenile fish have dispersed.

Following the Committee's report, the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science (CEFAS) undertook a review of the feasibility of operating temporary closures of areas with large numbers of juvenile fish. They concluded that, where the nursery areas are large, permanent and contain high concentrations of juveniles that are discarded, then it is to the benefit of the fishery to close such areas on a permanent or temporary basis. This applies primarily to flatfish nursery grounds, for which there is already a closed area known as the Plaice Box, and the Government is seeking to improve the effectiveness of the Plaice Box in current negotiations on a European Commission proposal for new technical conservation measures.

For the large stocks of roundfish, the juveniles are much more dispersed and their distribution is more dynamic. For these stocks CEFAS concluded that temporary closure of areas in the way proposed by the Committee does not appear to be a practical proposition, and monitoring and enforcement would be costly. However, there are a number of fixed areas which are closed to different types of fishing to protect young roundfish and pelagic fish. The Norway Pout Box, off eastern Scotland, protects young haddock and other gadoids from small mesh industrial fisheries. The Mackerel Box off south Cornwall protects juvenile mackerel. Many herring spawning grounds are protected as the vulnerable spawn are densely laid on the gravel seabed. The UK has also introduced restrictions on fishing in the estuarine nursery areas of bass.

The scope for further measures to protect juvenile fish is being explored in the negotiations on new EC technical conservation rules.

Beef (Consumer Confidence)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the level of consumer confidence in British beef in the United Kingdom; and if he will bring this information to the attention of the Council of Agriculture Ministers. [7297]

Mr. Morley: We have seen significant improvements in the level of beef consumption since March 1996. Most recently McDonald's and Burger King have announced that they will be using British beef again. We see this as further evidence that confidence in British beef is returning. The level of consumption will no doubt feature in discussion at future Councils of Agriculture Ministers.

Press Releases

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much his Department spends on biking press releases to (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals or groups, each time his Department issues a press release; how many such press releases were issued by his Department (i) in the period 1 May to 1 July and (ii) in the period 1 January to 1 March; and if he will review his Department's use of couriers to deliver press releases and investigate the possibility of using fax or e-mail. [8824]

Mr. Morley: MAFF does not use motor-cycle messengers to deliver press releases. These are made available to hon. Members, to the media and other interested parties via both the Central Office of Information's News Distribution Service (NDS) and direct mailing.

The COI's NDS delivery mechanisms include a newswire service which supplies press releases to the Parliamentary Online Information Service (POLIS) [which can be accessed by all MPs and Lords], hand deliveries, fax and postal deliveries, online databases, and a widely accessed [World Wide] Web site on the Internet.

MAFF also has a website containing its press notices which is updated daily and used by journalists and other individuals and organisations.

The Department keeps a watching brief on new developments in information transmission to ensure the most cost-effective delivery mechanisms are used at all times.

In the period 1 May to 1 July 1997, MAFF issued 65 press notices and in the period 1 January to 1 March issued 67 press notices.

Food (Chemical Contamination)

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what statistics his Department holds on chemical contamination incidents involving foodstuffs; and if they are available to the public. [9760]

Mr. Rooker: The Department compiles annual reports on all such incidents reported to it. These reports are available to inquirers, free of charge. The latest report by the Department's Incident Response Team, entitled "Food Protection 1996" has been placed in the Library of the House.

Cattle Slaughter Scheme

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle have been slaughtered to date under the Selective Cull scheme; and at what cost to public funds. [7379]

Mr. Rooker: The total number of animals slaughtered under the Selective Cull scheme as at 9 July was 11,304.

Scheme expenditure to 4 July 1997 was £9,063,800.77, which is broken down as follows:

Compensation	8,106,720.82
Incineration	5,128.87
Slaughter fees	483,467.19
Rendering fees	241,821.69
Storage and transport	226,662.20

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle have been slaughtered to date under the over 30 months scheme; and at what cost to public funds. [7380]

Mr. Rooker: As at 30 June 1997, 1.533 million animals have been slaughtered under the Over Thirty Months Scheme, at a cost of:

	£ million
Compensation	751.780
Slaughter	91.735
Rendering, incineration and hides	89.806
Storage and Transport	56.357
Total	989.678

Old Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by his Department which has not been passed on to the Public Records Office for release for public inspection. [7201]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 July 1997]: The earliest records held by my Department date from 1940 and consist of three documents which form part of Public Record Office Class MAF 152: Ministry of Food war history papers (1914 to 1962).

Rodent Control

Ms Atherton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the next national rodent survey will be undertaken. [8447]

Mr. Morley: Information on the level of rat and mice infestation is being collected as part of the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions' 1996 English House Condition Survey. The results of the survey are expected to be published towards the end of this year.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the recommendations of the Chartered Institute of Environmental Health relating to Government responsibility for rodent control; and if he will make a statement. [8449]

Mr. Morley: The recommendations of the Chartered Institute of Environmental Health were made following publication of the 1993 National Rodent Survey and they were fully considered at the time. The position will be reviewed after the results of the 1996 English House Condition Survey on rodent infestation are known later this year.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what requirements are placed upon local authorities to (a) record and (b) respond to incidents of rat infestation. [8442]

Mr. Morley: Under the Prevention of Damage by Pests Act 1949, local authorities are required to keep their districts as free as practicable from rats and mice and to carry out such inspections as may be necessary for this purpose. The Act requires occupiers of land, other than agricultural land, to give notice in writing to the local authority of rodent infestations.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has to bring about a reduction in levels of rat infestation in domestic properties. [8452]

Mr. Morley: Although the results of the 1993 National Rodent Survey showed that there had been a small increase since the late 1970s in the level of rat infestation in properties used for domestic purposes, overall, the survey did not provide sufficient evidence to warrant a change in current rodent control policies. The situation will be reviewed in the light of the 1996 survey, the results of which are expected to be published towards the end of this year.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many rat infestations were recorded (a) in total and (b) by local authority for each year since 1990. [8443]

Mr. Morley: In 1993, 4.8 per cent. of properties were infested with rats. This information is not available at the level of local authority due to the small sample size. Figures are not available for other years.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the factors underlying the growth in the incidence of rat infestation in domestic properties. [8448]

Mr. Morley: Rodent numbers can be affected by a number of factors including climate, food availability, level and effectiveness of control, availability of breeding sites and levels of predators. The 1996 English House Condition Survey, the results of which will be available later this year, will provide more detailed information about levels of rodent infestation.

National Parks

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what specific grants are available to encourage the adoption of environmentally sound practices in agriculture in the national parks. [8507]

Mr. Morley: MAFF operates a wide-ranging package of voluntary incentive schemes which are available to farmers in the national parks. In addition, the national parks have their own schemes.

Departmental Budgets

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new plans he has to introduce cuts and savings in his Department as a result of the effect on his Department's budgets for 1997–98 and 1998–99 of the upward revisions to the GDP deflators in the Budget on 2 July; and if he will make a statement. [8298]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 14 July 1997]: All Departments are reallocating spending within their Departmental ceilings as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, following the recent Budget, he will give his estimate of the total real level of his Department's budget, in 1995–96 prices, in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99; if he will estimate what such figures were for (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1998–99 following the November 1996 Budget on the basis of the estimates of the GDP deflator contained in that Budget; and if he will make a statement. [8295]

Mr. Morley: The figures requested for the Department's spending plans within the Control Total are as follows: £3,541 million, £3,149 million, £3,452 million and £3,201 million.

BSE

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the study from Oxford University on horizontal transmission of BSE, with particular regard to its relationship to stocking density; and if he will make a statement. [8695]

Mr. Rooker: Professor Anderson, who heads the team at Oxford University, was a member of the epidemiology sub group of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee (SEAC) which advised Government on maternal transmission. That advice was made public through a MAFF press notice issued on 18 April 1997, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

I understand that Professor Anderson's team are shortly to publish further papers. Professor Anderson has recently been reported as saying that the higher incidents of BSE in larger herds, as compared with smaller herds, could be due to one of two factors, either:

(i) greater use of concentrated cattle feed in larger herds; or

(ii) horizontal transmission from cow to cow as opposed to maternal transmission which is from a cow to its own calf.

Professor Anderson went on to say that he was not able, on the basis of the information available to him, to distinguish between these two hypotheses.

The variation in risk according to herd size is one of a number of observations first published by scientists from the Central Veterinary Laboratory, Weybridge in the Veterinary Record in 1992. I am putting a copy of that paper in the Library of the House. The view of my own advisers is that the more likely explanation for the higher incidents in the larger herds is more intensive use of animal feed in such herds as this ties in with certain other epidemiological observations, including the fact that a number of large herds which had a high incidence of BSE have, as a result of changing feed patterns, eradicated BSE within those herds which had been free for some years. This explanation argues in favour of the feed rather than the horizontal transmission hypothesis.

I must emphasise that Professor Anderson was talking about research findings not yet published and I will of course look to the independent advisory committee, SEAC, for further analysis of this work.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will review the compensation levels for farmers with cattle affected by tuberculosis. [8833]

Mr. Rooker: It would be inappropriate to review compensation while Professor Krebs' Committee is looking at badgers and bovine tuberculosis.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to receive the Krebs report on future policy in relation to badgers and tuberculosis. [8832]

Mr. Rooker: Later this year.

Broiler Chickens

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning the need for legislation to protect broiler chickens; and if he will make a statement. [8657]

Mr. Morley: The Government intends to ensure that the broiler industry works to high welfare standards. Work on a new welfare code is already in hand. I have received various representations that there is a case for further legislation and will consider this in the light of developments here and in Europe.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of broiler chickens which suffer from (a) leg disorders and (b) heart disease because of rapid body growth. [8658]

Mr. Morley: (a) It is not possible to give a simple estimate of the number of broiler chickens which suffer from leg disorders. Those that occur may be the result of one, or a combination of, a number of different factors. The severity of the effect on individual birds will also be subject to variation.

(b) I know of no scientific data which allows for conclusions to be drawn on any direct relationship between rate of growth and the incidence of heart disease in broiler chickens.

Hunting Ban (Disposal of Stock)

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what alternative arrangements he is considering for the disposal of fallen stock and destruction of animal casualties if hunting were banned. [8843]

Mr. Rooker: There are already arrangements for disposing of fallen stock and the destruction of animal casualties other than via hunt kennels. Disposal can be by rendering at an approved rendering plant, incineration or burial, in accordance with the provisions of the Animal By-Products Order 1992 (as amended). This Order also provides for certain premises to receive fallen stock, including knackers' yards: knackermen will usually be licensed slaughtermen for the purpose of killing animal casualties.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Contaminated Land

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to lay new regulations about contaminated land. [7874]

Angela Eagle: We hope shortly to be able to make an announcement of how we propose to proceed regarding the implementation of the contaminated land provisions in Part IIA of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 (inserted by section 57 of the Environment Act 1995).

Voluntary Sports Clubs

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his assessment of the cost of granting mandatory rate relief to voluntary sports clubs in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [7991]

Mr. Raynsford: We have insufficient data on which to make a reliable estimate of the cost of granting mandatory rate relief to voluntary sports clubs. However, we are currently reviewing the basis on which voluntary sports clubs are eligible for rate relief.

Water Companies

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those water companies which offer lower drainage charges where a property does not drain surface water into a public sewer; and if he will ensure that all water companies are obliged to offer such a charge. [8462]

Angela Eagle: Lower drainage charges for customers who do not receive a surface water drainage service are offered by three water companies: North West Water, Severn Trent Water and (for customers with rateable values over £7000) Northumbrian Water. Customers are liable for sewerage service charges and companies are not obliged to offer this rebate. The Director General of Water Services, however, would not like to see customers charged for a service which is not provided, and has raised this matter in discussion with companies.

Construction Industry

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, if he will list the membership of each of his Department's non-departmental public bodies with responsibility for the construction industry, indicating their functions and terms of reference; and if he will make a statement on their role in respect of Government policy in the construction industry. [8458]

Mr. Raynsford: There are four such bodies.

BUILDING REGULATIONS ADVISORY COMMITTEE

Chairman:

Professor Jack Anderson

Members:

Mr. Ken Blount
Mr. Norman Bright MBE
Mr. Graham Butler
Mr. James Carter
Mr. Henry Dawson
Mr. Michael Finn
Mr. Stuart Holt
Professor Patrick O'Sullivan OBE
Miss Pat Tindale
Professor John Wiltshire.

The Committee is established under Section 14 of the Building Act 1984 to advise the Secretary of State on the exercise of his power to make building regulations, and on other subjects connected with building regulations.

BRITISH BOARD OF AGRÉMENT

Chairman:

Mr. A. J. Jackson CBE

Members:

Mr. N. M. Chaldecott OBE
Mr. A. M. Cooper
Mrs. O. C. Dargan
Mr. R. F. Gainsford
Mr. D. J. Harper
Dr. P. C. Hewlett
Mr. T. Henney
Mr. D. W. Quinion
Mr. C. A. Rackcliffe
Miss. P. Tindale
Mr. J. W. Turner CBE
Mr. C. A. Wilson.

The British Board of Agrément (BBA), established in 1966, assesses and certifies the performance of construction products and materials which are new or innovative or for which no technical standards exist. Agrément Certificates are recognised within the Approved Document to Building Regulation 7 as a means of establishing a product's fitness for use.

BBA also provides important services in relation to implementation of the Construction Products Directive, representing the UK in the European Organisation for Technical Approvals (EOTA), and in the European Union of Agrément. BBA currently holds the Presidency of EOTA.

Although BBA is an executive NDPB, it also runs as a commercial organisation and is a company limited by guarantee.

ASSESSMENT PANEL FOR CONSTRUCTION RESEARCH

Chairman:

Professor Peter Dale

Members:

Professor Jack Anderson
Mr. Norman Bright MBE
Miss Pat Tindale
Mr. Don Leeper
Dr. Jack Chapman
Miss Judith Stammers
Dr. Dipesh Bhattacharya
Mrs. Sandi Rhys Jones.

The terms of reference of the Panel are to provide informed, strategic advice to the Department on trends in construction and the development of research strategies in relation to emerging technical issues relevant to the construction process and to the Department's statutory responsibilities and policy objectives; and to give informed, strategic advice on the value of past research—its appropriateness, relevance to policy, management, impact, achievement and transfer into effective application.

EXPORT ACTION GROUP FOR BUILDING MATERIALS

Chairman:

Mr. P. M. Rose CBE

Members:

Mr. J. Bonney
Mr. P. D. Marshall
Mr. J. Gill
Mr. C. Jarvis
Mr. J. R. Owens
Mr. A Lorentzen

Mr. D. Wilkinson

Mr. C. M. F. Newton

Ms A. Carew-Cox

Mr. K. Lambourne

Mr. M. Arndell.

The terms of reference of the Group are:

To provide timely and effective advice to DETR Ministers and Officials on methods and priorities for pursuing business opportunities overseas for UK suppliers of building materials and construction products.

To provide feedback more generally on the delivery and effectiveness of support mechanisms provided by government and other organisations and, where appropriate, to suggest improvements.

To provide advice on measures to improve co-ordination, communication and presentation of export opportunities and initiatives within the industry and between government and industry.

Sewerage Pipes

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the extent of damage being caused to plastic sewerage pipes by rats; and what assessment he has made of potential risks to public health from this. [8454]

Angela Eagle: I understand that the water industry is not aware of any documented evidence of a problem of rats chewing through sewer pipes and there are no indications that such damage to plastic pipes is causing risk to public health.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what regulations control the use of high pressure water jets to clean sewerage pipes; and if these take account of possible damage caused to the pipes. [8453]

Angela Eagle: No formal regulations exist to control the use of high pressure water jets to clean sewerage or drainage pipes. The Water Research Centre has prepared a Code of Practice on pressure jetting which has been accepted by the manufacturers of such equipment and contractors. I understand that water companies are likely to specify its use in pressure jetting contracts.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if standards for the manufacture of plastic sewerage pipes take account of the need to resist damage by rats. [8445]

Angela Eagle: Standards for plastic sewer pipes do not contain any particular provisions to take account of the need to resist damage by rats but my Department will ensure that the issue is raised with the British Standards Institution and organisations which test the suitability of plastic pipes to be used for drainage.

Environmental Task Force (Horticulture Training)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will examine the potential role of horticultural training within the environmental task force; and if he will make a statement. [8487]

Angela Eagle: We want to see as wide a range of organisations as possible in the environmental field involved in constructing high quality programmes, projects and training for the environmental task force. We hope that horticultural projects will be included among these.

Planning Applications

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of local authority planning applications are currently dealt with under the delegated powers procedure (a) in total and (b) by local authority; and what assessment he has made of the adequacy of these procedures for planning matters. [8461]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department is this year collecting, for the first time, statistics on the number of planning applications which were decided by planning officers under delegated powers by each local authority. This information should allow an assessment, over time, of the relationship between the numbers of applications decided by local authorities, their performance and their use of delegated powers. The first figures will be collated at the end of September. I will ensure the figures are forwarded to my honourable Friend as soon as possible after they have been compiled and checked.

Home Buyers

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will assess the adequacy of the protection afforded to new house buyers. [8455]

Mr. Raynsford: I am aware of criticisms of the protection afforded by the National House-Building Council's warranty scheme for new houses. The Council has announced a wide ranging review including insurance cover, inspection service, communications with consumers and house builders, and powers to discipline bad builders. I have recently met representatives of the Council and I have asked to be kept closely in touch with the progress of this review.

My hon. Friend, the Minister for Local Government and Housing has also recently met the Council of Mortgage Lenders and the Association of British Insurers to discuss ways in which the mortgage lending and insurance industries can develop better mortgage protection products.

Climate Change

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has evaluated into the relationship between agricultural production and global climate change; and if he will make a statement. [8488]

Angela Eagle: UK emissions of greenhouse gases from agriculture are evaluated using research sponsored by my Department and by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

We estimate that, in 1995, UK agricultural production was responsible for about 1 per cent, 30 per cent. and 10 per cent. of UK emissions of carbon dioxide, methane and nitrous oxide respectively. Agricultural land use change resulted in the release of a further 4 per cent. of total emissions of carbon dioxide. Together these emissions were equivalent to about 7 per cent. of the climate change impact of all UK greenhouse gas emissions in 1995. Land set aside from agricultural production removed an amount of carbon from the atmosphere equivalent to about 1 per cent. of UK carbon dioxide emissions in 1995.

Research evaluated by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) indicates that emissions of carbon dioxide, methane and nitrous oxide from global agricultural production and related land use change together account for about 34 per cent. of the climatic disturbance from current man-made greenhouse gas emissions.

Rat Infestation

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what responsibilities have been placed upon the water companies to control rat infestation of the sewerage system. [8451]

Angela Eagle: There is no specific duty on water and sewerage companies in relation to the control of rats in sewers. However, all sewerage undertakers have programmes to control and reduce the number of rats in their systems. This includes the use of baits in pumping stations and air vents to stop rats entering the system, or on ledges within sewers. In addition, I understand that the water industry will be undertaking some research into the issue of rats in sewers early next year.

Local authorities have a long standing duty to keep themselves informed about the sufficiency of drainage systems in their area to ensure that they do not pose a threat to public health. Failure to control rat infestations on property could be enforceable by the Local Authority Environmental Health Officer under Part III of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, if it is judged to be a statutory nuisance.

I have no plans at present to introduce legislation to regulate the performance of sewerage undertakers in this field.

"Household Growth"

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the statistical assumptions behind the household composition growth figures contained in his Department's response to the consultation paper "Household Growth" with particular reference to Bradford metropolitan district council. [8457]

Mr. Raynsford: Descriptions of the methodology and main statistical assumptions underlying the household projections presented in the consultation paper "Household Growth: where shall we live?" are set out in the annexes of "Projections of Households in England to 2016", published by HMSO in March 1995, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. The projections for the Metropolitan District of Bradford are given in Table 9 of this publication.

Hedgerows

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many miles of hedgerow he estimates will be (a) planted and (b) cut down in the next three years. [8508]

Angela Eagle: The most recent statistics on hedgerow planting and removal come from a survey of hedgerow changes in England and Wales between the years 1990 to 1993, undertaken by the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology on behalf of the Department of the Environment. That survey estimated that on average some 4,400 km of hedgerows were newly planted each year, whilst an average of 3,600 km of hedgerows were removed each year.

Estimates for future years have not been made. New planting is encouraged, in England, through the Countryside Stewardship and Environmentally Sensitive Areas Schemes administered by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and, in Wales, through Tir Cymen and the Hedgerow Renovation Scheme operated by the Countryside Council for Wales. Important hedgerows are protected from removal under the Hedgerows Regulations 1997.

Environmental Information Appeals Tribunal

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans the Government have to introduce an independent environmental information appeals tribunal. [8676]

Angela Eagle: The Government's proposals for appeals procedures relating to information in general, including environmental information, will be set out in our forthcoming White Paper on freedom of information.

Animal Furs

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps his Department has taken to (a) control and (b) prohibit the import of animal furs on conservation grounds. [8662]

Angela Eagle: The import of furs into the United Kingdom is controlled under European Council Regulation 338/97 which implements the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) within the European Union as a whole. A permit is required from the Department of the Environment to import the fur of any species listed in the CITES Appendices. Trade in furs from endangered species, such as leopards and tigers, is strictly prohibited. Trade in other less sensitive species is strictly controlled and monitored to ensure that they are not over-exploited. My Department is also responsible for the EU ban on the import of furs from harp and hooded seal pups under the EC Seals Directive 83/129. The Directive is implemented in the UK through the Import of Seal Skins Regulations 1996.

Housing

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many homes are (a) owner occupied, (b) privately rented without housing benefit, (c) privately rented with housing benefit, (d) rented from local authorities and (e) rented from housing trusts or housing associations (i) in England and Wales and (ii) in the Borough of Bournemouth; and if he will provide comparable figures for 1987. [8756]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 15 July 1997]: The Department's estimates of the stock of dwellings in England as at December 1987 and December 1996 are shown in the table below.

England—stock of dwellings

(000s)

	Owner occupied	Rented privately or with job[1]	Rented from housing associations	Rented from local authorities	Total
December 1987	12,264	1,899	512	4,403	19,078

[1] Notionally includes renting from other public sector.

The information used to compile these figures does not show how much of the privately rented stock contains people claiming housing benefit. However information from the Family Resources Survey (FRS) shows that during 1995–96 nearly one third of private renters (including those in rent free accommodation) were claiming housing benefit. Comparable figures for 1987 are not available.

The only information about the stock of dwellings in Bournemouth comes for the annual "Housing Investment Programme" (HIP) returns, which combine the owner occupied and rented privately groups together. The figures for April 1987 and April 1996 are as follows:

Bournemouth—stock of dwellings

	Private	Rented from housing associations	Rented from local authorities	Rented from other public sector	Total
April 1987	60,644	638	6,591	375	68,248
April 1996	65,325	1,985	5,726	60	73,096

It is not possible to provide reliable information at local authority area level compatible with the FRS data quoted above.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people have been living in houses in multiple occupation in each of the last five years; how many of them have been aged under 25 years and what proportion of those aged (a) under 25 years and (b) over 25 years have been (i) male and (ii) female. [8800]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 15 July 1997]: I regret that information in the form requested is not available. The following table shows the latest estimate of occupants of houses in multiple occupation by age and gender in England.

Age and gender of occupiers of HMOs in England (percentage in brackets)

Hostels

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many direct access hostel places in London currently cater for clients with partners; [9008]

(2) how many direct access hostel places in London cater for clients with pets. [9009]

Mr. Raynsford: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many direct access hostel places there are currently in London. [9007]

Mr. Raynsford: This information is not held centrally. The London Hostels Directory, published by Resource Information Service, and partly funded by my Department, gives details of more than 27,000 bedspaces in over 600 different buildings. It is not possible to say how many of these places are direct access. As part of the Rough Sleepers Initiative in London, my Department is funding 278 places in hostels and nightshelters. Most, though not all of these places will be direct access.

Council Tax

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has conducted into the correlation between income levels and council tax bands. [9070]

Mr. Raynsford: None. The council tax is a property based tax and council tax benefit is available to help meet the bills of people on low incomes.

Press Releases

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much his Department spends on biking press releases to (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals or groups, each time his Department issues a press release; how many such press releases were issued by his Department (i) in the period 1 May to 1 July and (ii) in the period 1 January to 1 March; and if he will review his Department's use of couriers to deliver press releases and investigate the possibility of using fax or e-mail. [8810]

Angela Eagle: The Department uses a courier for delivery of press releases to the Press Gallery. This is part of a general courier service for the Department as a whole and costs for these specific deliveries are not separately identified.

With this exception, it is not normal practice for the Department to send press releases by courier to hon. Members, other individuals or groups.

In common with other Departments, press releases are distributed to the media through the Central Office of Information's News Distribution Service, which utilises a combination of electronic and hard copy delivery methods. In addition to this, the Department issues releases to other interested parties by post, or exceptionally fax.

Roads Programme (Leicester)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions if orders have been submitted for (a) the Leicester Eastern district distributor road and (b) the Leicester A46–47 link road scheme stage 2. [8324]

Ms Glenda Jackson: (a) No; (b) Yes.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the funding considerations underlying his Department's advice to the city council to apply for funding through the 1998–99 TPP bid for the Leicester A46–47 trunk road. [8325]

Ms Jackson: My Department's advice was that if the City Council wished the A46–47 scheme to have any possibility of obtaining funding under the 1998–99 TPP settlement they must bid for it. In giving the advice it was made clear that there can be no guarantee of funding for this or any other project, ahead of the settlement.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his Department's policy on the construction of the Leicester A46–47 link road; and what priority it accords to (a) environmental issues and (b) economic benefit in determining this policy. [8326]

Ms. Jackson: The policy on the construction of the A46–47 link road is the same as that for all road schemes presented to the Secretary of State. The overall merits are assessed in the context of the public interest.

The A46–47 forms part of the accepted package of transport proposals which constitute the Central Leicestershire Package. Advice on the appraisal of projects and on the preparation of package bids is issued to authorities each year. This covers, inter alia, environmental issues and economic benefit.

Red Routes

Mr. Cox: To ask the secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the red-route proposals under consideration by his Department for the London Borough of Wandsworth. [9098]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The roads in Wandsworth designated as red routs are the A3, A24, A205, A214, A217, A306, A3205 and A3220. We are currently consulting on whether the A214 should remain in the red route network. The implementation programme for other red routes in Wandsworth is set out in the Traffic Director for London's Annual Report and Accounts for 1996–97, a copy of which is in the Library.

Network Cards

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the decision by train operators to limit when network card holders can use their cards; and if he will make a statement. [8227]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government has no powers to prevent train operators changing the conditions applying to the Network Card. Train operators' participation in the Network Card scheme is entirely voluntary and there is no formal obligation on them to offer the Network Card.

HEALTH

Closures

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the hospitals and health units currently subject to proposals for closure. [6824]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not collected systematically. However, a recent survey carried out for management purposes identified the hospitals listed as having recently been, or are currently, the subject of consultation which could lead to the full closure. Closure is normally dependent on the reprovision of services elsewhere and/or are conditional on a successful Private Finance Initiative contract.

NHS Pay

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the additional costs to the NHS in England if pay rates were set at hourly rates (a) £2.75, (b) £3.00, (c) £3.25, (d) £3.50, (e) £3.75, (f) £4.00, (g) £4.25, and (h) £4.50 for (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [7447]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Romsey (Mr. Colvin) on 2 June at column 37, and also to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Bridgwater (Mr. King) on 9 June at column 421.

Commercial Lobbyists

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have met commercial lobbyists to discuss matters relating to the business of his Department; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings; [8091]

(2) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have attended meetings with organisations representing (i) commercial and (ii) non-commercial interests organised by commercial lobbying firms; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings. [8092]

Ms Jowell: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained in response to my hon. Friend the Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 2 June 1997 at column 99, Ministers and officials in the Department receive deputations from many groups who are concerned to press their own interests or those of their clients, which Ministers and officials take due care to consider within the wider public interest and Government policy. As it is not practicable to distinguish particular groups as lobbyists, the Department cannot keep a register of such meetings.

Benzodiazepines

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what quantity of each individual type of benzodiazepine was prescribed via community pharmacists in England and Wales in (a) 1995 and (b) 1996. [8497]

Mr. Milburn: The available information is shown in the tables.

Table 1: Benzodiazepines: number of prescription items dispensed (thousands), 1995 and 1996

England

Drug group	1995	1996
Temazepam	6,063	5,540
Diazepam	3,411	3,600
Nitrazepam	2,582	2,539
Lorazepam	818	785
Chlordiazepoxide	438	428
Oxazepam	300	304
Lormetazepam	201	234
Loprazolam	213	221
Clonazepam	168	180
Clobazam	70	74
Totals	14,266	13,905

1. Data cover all prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists and appliance contractors, dispensing doctors and prescriptions submitted by prescribing doctors for items personally administered.
2. A "0" indicates less than 500 prescription items.
3. Figures may not add up due to rounding.

Table 2: Benzodiazepines: number of prescription items dispensed (thousands), 1995 and 1996

Wales

Drug group	April 1995 to March 1996	April 1996 to March 1997
Temazepam	588	548
Diazepam	371	416
Nitrazepam	245	243
Lorazepam	78	76
Chlordiazepoxide	35	37
Oxazepam	35	35
Lormetazepam	21	24
Loprazolam	21	23
Clonazepam	12	14
Clobazam	1	3
Midazolam Hydrochloride	1	1
Totals	1,411	1,420

Note: These figures were obtained from the Welsh Office.

Day and Domiciliary Care

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures his Department is taking to ensure that local authorities monitor the effect of changes to charging policies for day and domiciliary care service take-up and use. [8509]

Mr. Boateng: Currently local authorities are not required to keep the Department informed about their charging policies, nor when they introduce charging for the first time or when revising their charges.

Local authorities are, however, expected to monitor the effect of charges themselves as suggested in the Advice Note issued by the Social Services Inspectorate in January 1994.

Long-term Care (Elderly People)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he expects his Department to have determined the form of its examination into the future funding of the long-term care of the elderly; and if he will make a statement; [8532]

(2) what is his Department's policy on establishing a Royal Commission on the funding of long-term care for the elderly; and if he will make a statement. [8501]

Mr. Boateng: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him and the hon. Member for Tewkesbury (Mr. Robertson) on 30 June at columns 28–29.

Erb's Palsy

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will require hospital trusts to collate statistics on the incidence of Erb's palsy in new born babies.[8327]

Ms Jowell: Erb's Palsy and brachial plexus injuries are, fortunately, rare occurrences. Most babies with Erb's Palsy recover spontaneously within a few months.

We do not intend to require the collection of information on incidence.

Tamworth Primary Care Project

Mr. Brian Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the Tamworth Primary Care Organisation project. [8434]

Mr. Milburn: None. There are two stages to the application process—an expression of interest followed by a formal application. Everyone who has submitted an expression of interest to pilot the new arrangements under the NHS (Primary Care) Act 1997 will receive feedback on their proposal from their local health authority and will be given the opportunity to re-visit their proposal in light of the comments made. Formal applications to enter the Primary Care Act Pilot scheme have to be with Health Authorities by 1 November and applicants will be notified as to whether their application has been approved before the end of December.

Rat Infestation

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy for reducing public health problems arising through rat infestation. [8441]

Ms Jowell: Statutory responsibility for the control of rat infestations rests with local authorities. There is no evidence that the levels of infestation found in the 1993 National Rodent Survey were associated with detectable effects on public health. Officials from the Department of Health, in discussion with officials from other government departments, will continue to monitor trends in infestation and the adequacy of current control measures.

Private Finance Initiative

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 3 July, Official Report, column 230, relating to PFI schemes, how many of these schemes contain an element of service provision; and what services are to be provided under PFI in each case. [8460]

Mr. Milburn: Of the 14 major hospital Private Finance Initiative schemes selected for prioritisation, two, at Dartford and Gravesham National Health Service Trust and Norfolk and Norwich Health Care NHS Trust, have reached agreement to proceed to financial close. Both trusts will continue to provide a full range of NHS services to NHS patients under their respective PFI schemes. The following support services have been transferred to, and will be managed and operated by, the trusts' private sector partners:

Dartford and Gravesham NHS Trust

Estate maintenance
Domestic services
Catering
Laundry
Portering
Security
Non-emergency patient transport.

Norfolk and Norwich Healthcare NHS Trust

IM&T Systems
Grounds and Estate Maintenance
Domestic services
Portering
Financial services
Catering
Waste disposal and Laundry
Car parking
Non-emergency patient transport
Security
Telecommunications
Energy and Utilities.

The other 12 NHS trusts with major hospital PFI schemes selected for prioritisation are at various stages of negotiation with their private sector partners.

Waiting Times

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the North Staffordshire Hospital NHS Trust area were awaiting non-emergency treatment for (a) up to 12 months, (b) up to 18 months and (c) over 18 months. [8874]

Mr. Milburn: Information about patients waiting for admission to National Health Service trusts on either an in-patient or day case basis is published twice yearly in "Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England". The latest available shows the position on 31 March 1997. Similar information is given on a health authority basis in the quarterly "Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England (Resident Based)". The latest available information gives the position on 31 December 1996. Copies of both documents are available in the Library.

General Practitioners

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his plans to improve the recruitment and retention of general practitioners in the NHS in Stoke-on-Trent, North. [8872]

Mr. Milburn: We are aware that in some areas recruitment and retention difficulties are occurring and are talking to the profession about ways in which some of the difficulties might be overcome.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners are trained to deal with people with learning difficulties. [8876]

Mr. Milburn: All general practitioners practising as principals have had to undergo vocational training. During this period of vocational training the general practitioner will be exposed to the variety of patients who present in Primary Care. As most people with learning difficulties are living at home, they will be included in this training. EL(96)109 stated that the Government intends to take steps to improve the vocational training scheme for GPs to allow those starting constructed schemes after 1997 to spend a greater proportion of training time in general practice from April 1998. This will result in greater exposure to such patients.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners were working in the NHS for each of the last five years in Stoke-on-Trent, North. [8873]

Mr. Milburn: The available information is shown in the table.

Number of General Practitioners in Staffordshire FHSA

	1992	1993	1994	1995	[1]1996
Restricted principals	3	3	3	2	0
Unrestricted principals	502	511	515	504	239
Assistants	5	5	6	10	4
Trainees	31	33	22	26	6
All practitioners	541	552	546	542	249

Health Action Zones

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the criteria he is planning to use in the selection of health action zones; [8880]

(2) if he will list the number of areas he intends to designate as health action zones. [8881]

Mr. Milburn: The Government intends to set out criteria and arrangements for selecting areas as health action zones in due course.

Health Provision (Variation)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the variation in health provision nationally; and if he will make a statement. [8882]

Mr. Milburn: Purchasers are responsible for funding those services which are clinically effective and meet the needs of local people in light of the resources available.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to encourage hospitals to be more energy efficient; and if he will make a statement. [8738]

Mr. Milburn: The Department of Health is committed to encouraging hospitals to be more energy efficient. The Department will be requesting all National Health Service trusts to comply with the new target level as made by the Secretary of State for the Environment on 17 March 1997 at columns 457-459, of an overall 20 per cent. improvement by March 2000.

NHS trusts are required to provide data on energy consumption which is analysed by NHS Estates, an Executive Agency of the Department of Health. NHS trusts receive detailed information on energy usage in the NHS which they can use to effectively monitor their efficiency performance.

To assist energy efficiency performance management, NHS trusts are encouraged to participate in benchmarking networks to enable them to compare their performance relative to other similar trusts.

Foreign Doctors

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what investigations are carried out into the backgrounds of foreign doctors, with particular reference to previous human rights violations, prior to employment by the NHS, and if he will make a statement. [8731]

Mr. Milburn: No routine investigations are carried out into the background of foreign doctors specifically in respect of previous human rights violations. However, such doctors are subject to a number of checks as part of immigration control and prior to registration with the General Medical Council and employment within the National Health Service. If as a result of these investigations doubts were raised in relation to possible human rights violations, these would be pursued.

Hospital Discharge Procedures

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to review hospital discharge procedures. [8879]

Mr. Boateng: We wish to encourage a collaborative and co-operative approach to hospital discharge from all agencies. In order to support this, we are exploring proposals to address the difficulties around hospital discharge procedures and the problems which are caused by ensuing delays.

Medicines Control Agency

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the Annual Report and Accounts of the Medicines Control Agency. [9806]

Mr. Milburn: We have received the report and copies have today been laid before both Houses of Parliament in accordance with the requirements of section 5(2) and 5(3) of the Exchequer and Audit Departments Act 1921. Copies have also been placed in the Library.

Medicine Commission

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to receive the annual report of the Medicine Commission for 1996. [9609]

Mr. Milburn: We have received the report, and copies have been laid before both Houses of Parliament today in accordance with the requirements of section 5(2) of the Medicines Act 1968.

Bound volumes have been placed in the Library containing the 1996 reports of the Medicines Commission, the Committee on Safety of Medicines, the Advisory Board on the registration of Homeopathic Products, the British Pharmacopoeia Commission and the Veterinary Products Committee.

We are glad to acknowledge the valuable work done by the distinguished members of the Medicines Act Advisory Bodies and thank them for the time and effort dedicated in the public interest to this important work.

Hepatitis C

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contingency plans have been made for meeting projected increases in the incidence of Hepatitis C; and if he will make a statement. [7898]

Ms Jowell: There is little reliable data on the prevalence and likely future incidence of Hepatitis C in the population. The Department of Health made £1 million available to fund research into the natural history, transmission and prevalence of Hepatitis C. To date nine studies have been commissioned and the results of this research will become available over the next three years. A further £0.5 million has been allocated this year to expand this research programme. Once we have a clearer picture, we will be able to plan accordingly and make sure that the National Health Service is equipped to deliver the services required based on the best scientific evidence available about the disease.

Drugs

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision is being made in respect of places on fast track and stabilisation programmes for drug users; and if he will make a statement. [7901]

Ms Jowell: It is for health authorities and local authority social services departments to determine the needs of their local population for treatment and rehabilitation for drug misusers and to commission services to meet those needs.

The Task Force to Review the Effectiveness of Services for Drug Misusers, whose report was published in May 1996, found that treatment and care services were effective in reducing the level of criminal activity amongst the drug misusing population. Guidance to health and local authorities issued in March this year asked them to prioritise the needs of drug misusers who are involved in, or at risk of, criminal activity when commissioning services.

We are committed in our Manifesto to introducing a Testing and Treatment order to break the link between drugs and crime. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary will be responsible for the introduction of this order.

Press Releases

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department spends on biking press releases to (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals or groups, each time his Department issues a press release; how many such press releases were issued by his Department (i) in the period 1 May to 1 July and (ii) in the period 1 January to 1 March; and if he will review his Department's use of couriers to deliver press releases and investigate the possibility of using fax or e-mail. [8821]

Ms. Jowell: The Department of Health's press releases are made available to hon. Members and to the media via the Central Office of Information's News Distribution Service (NDS).

NDS's delivery mechanisms include a newswire service which, among others, supplies press releases to the Parliamentary Online Information Service (POLIS), which can be accessed by all Members of Parliament and Peers, hand deliveries, fax and postal deliveries, online databases, and a widely accessed World Wide Web site on the Internet.

These mechanisms are used either singly or in combination to ensure the most cost-effective methods are used to reach the relevant target audiences and to suit the nature of the documents; eg whether press releases are despatched on their own, or accompanied by reports or consultation documents. No separate costing is available for the hand delivery service alone.

1 January 1997 to 1 March 1997	50
1 May 1997 to 1 July 1997	63

The Department and the COI keep a watching brief on new developments to ensure the most cost-effective delivery mechanisms are used.

Secondary Care Services (East Kent)

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what priority will be accorded to the medical needs of the population of east Kent in the East Kent Authority's Review of Secondary Care Services in East Kent. [9101]

Mr. Milburn: We understand that the review is taking full account of local health needs. My hon. Friend may wish to contact the chairman of East Kent Health Authority for further information.

Mercury Fillings

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statistics he has collated about how many dentists are using mercury in teeth fillings; what studies he has made of the toxic side effects of mercury fillings on children; and if he will make a statement. [9103]

Mr. Milburn: Out of 14,512 dentists who received payment under the General Dental Services for at least one filling in the quarter April to June 1997, we estimate that 13,600 received a payment for at least one amalgam filling. Evaluation of relevant, scientific research by authoritative national and international expert committees has indicated no risk of systemic toxicity and only a few cases of hypersensitivity. The Department continues to monitor and evaluate research in this area.

Departmental Budgets

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, following the recent Budget, he will give his estimate of the total real level of his Department's budget, in 1995–96 prices, in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99; if he will estimate what such figures were for (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1998–99 following the November 1996 Budget on the basis of the estimates of the GDP deflator contained in that Budget; and if he will make a statement. [8303]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The figures requested for the Department of Health's spending plans within the Control Total are as follows: (a) £33,079 million, (b) £33,516 million, (1) £33,422 million and (2) £33,174 million. (Source: Treasury)

On the new estimate of the GDP deflator announced in the Budget on 2 July, the health budget will increase from £34,928 million in 1997–98 to £36,362 million in 1998–99. For the NHS, this means a real terms increase in resources of 2.35 per cent. in 1998–99.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Schools (Capital Investment)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what mechanism will be used to allocate funds for capital investment to (a) local education authority schools and (b) grant-maintained schools; [7254]

(2) what proportion of capital investment in schools will go to (a) local education authority schools and (b) grant-maintained schools in (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99; [7255]

(3) how much money will be made available for capital investment in (a) local education authority schools and (b) grant-maintained schools in (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99. [7256]

Mr. Byers: Under plans originally announced by the previous Administration last December, central government support for schools capital investment in 1997–98 has been set at £396 million for local authority county and controlled schools, £145 million for grant-maintained schools, and £104.2 million for voluntary aided schools. Their plans for 1998–99 were £363 million for local authority county and controlled schools, £141 million for grant-maintained schools, and £102 million for voluntary aided schools.

Taking account of estimated local authority capital receipts and revenue and governors' contributions to voluntary aided schools, we would expect some £672 million to be devoted to projects at county and voluntary controlled schools, £145 million in grant-maintained schools and £117 million in voluntary aided schools in 1997–98, and on the same basis some £656 million in county and voluntary controlled schools, £141 million in grant-maintained schools and £115 million for voluntary aided schools in 1998–99.

As to the allocation mechanism, in the financial year 1997–98, it is for the relevant local authority to determine capital programmes in county and voluntary controlled schools, and for the Funding Agency for Schools to allocate capital to grant-maintained schools. For voluntary aided schools, the Department pays grant of up to 85 per cent. on capital and repair projects.

On 2 July, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced that a further £83 million will be made available for schools capital work in 1997–98, and £250 million for 1998–99. Guidance on the allocation will be issued shortly.

Assisted Places Scheme

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if funds released by the abolition of the assisted places scheme will be distributed according to the Barnett Formula. [7566]

Mr. Byers: The method of distributing these funds is being considered but they will be allocated across the United Kingdom.

LEAs (Inspections)

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the timetable for the inspection of local education authorities outlined in the Education Bill; how the local education authorities will be chosen; how many are to be inspected; and on what basis they will be reviewed.[7565]

Mr. Byers: As announced in the White Paper "Excellence in Schools", the programme of LEA inspections under the 1997 Education Act will begin in January 1998. The inspections will be led by OFSTED assisted by the Audit Commission. Announcements about the selection of LEAs and the framework of inspection, will be made in the autumn.

Lifelong Learning

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects to publish his White Paper on Lifelong Learning. [7572]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment plans to publish his White Paper on Lifelong Learning in the autumn.

New Deal

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the estimated cost to public funds per capita, for each of the options, over their six months on the New Deal. [8212]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Average costs will be determined by the detailed contracting process which will take place in the autumn.

Mr. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many private sector employers have indicated their willingness to participate in the New Deal scheme. [8210]

Mr. Smith: Following the seminar at No. 11 Downing St., 30 of the country's top companies have expressed their wish to be involved. We have also received, and continue to receive, expressions of interest from other employers, both small and large.

There will be a major campaign to win the commitment of the business community. At national level, we are creating an Advisory Task Force, chaired by Sir Peter Davis, to carry out a national effort to win support for New Deal from the top 500 companies.

At regional level in England, ES and Government Offices will hold a series of events—including conferences, roadshows and visits to employers—to win support, and each ES district will work with local partners to contact local firms to gain their commitment.

Similar campaigns will run in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department refuse requests from hon. Members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those hon. Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8102]

Dr. Howells: The First Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) recognised the value of enabling Members to retain interests outside the House, provided these were properly declared, both in the Register of Members' Interests and on other occasions. Subject to these requirements, and to the rules of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, Members are free to seek meetings with Ministers and officials, who will consider such requests alongside the many other approaches from individuals and organisations concerned to press their own interests or those of others.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what occasions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have refused to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings with hon. Members to discuss matters relating to interests registered by those hon. Members under categories 1, 2, 3 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8105]

Dr. Howells: The First Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) made it clear, that, when Members are meeting Ministers or others on topics in which they have an interest, the onus is on the Member to declare that interest not the Minister to know (paragraph 63 of Cm 2850). It is not practicable for Ministers and officials, amongst their other duties, to vet requests for meetings against the Register of Members' Interests. Should evidence of non-declaration emerge, or contravention of the Resolution of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, the matter would be brought to the attention of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards.

Commercial Lobbyists

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have attended meetings with organisations representing (i) commercial and (ii) non-commercial interests organised by commercial lobbying firms; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings; [8104]

(2) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have met commercial lobbyists to discuss matters relating to the business of his Department; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings. [8103]

Dr. Howells: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained in response to my hon. Friend the Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn), Official Report, 2 June 1997, column 99, Ministers and officials in the Department receive deputations from many groups who are concerned to press their own interests or those of their clients, which Ministers and officials take due care to consider within the wider public interest and Government policy. As it is not practicable to distinguish particular groups as lobbyists, the Department cannot keep a register of such meetings.

Playing Fields

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what plans he has to stop the sale of playing fields; and if he will make a statement; [8000]

(2) if he will make a statement on current guidelines and standards relating to school playing fields; [8001]

(3) what plans he has to review current guidelines on the provision of school playing field facilities; and if he will make a statement. [8002]

Mr. Byers: We intend to make sure that those playing fields which schools and their local communities need are not sold in future. My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Education and Employment and for Culture, Media and Sport are discussing this as a matter of urgency. We are looking at a wide range of options to ensure that all school pupils will have access to proper sports facilities.

The Education (School Premises) Regulations 1996 set out statutory minimum areas of grassed playing field, or equivalent sports facilities, for all state schools with pupils aged 8 years or older.

My Department has published guidance on the size of school grounds in Building Bulletin 82 "Area Guidelines for Schools".

A new Building Bulletin, "School Grounds—a guide to good practice", which is in preparation now for publication this Autumn, will include detailed, practical advice on playing fields.

Employment Service

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if there will be any increase in staffing levels at the Employment Service to implement (i) The New Deal and (ii) The Gateway. [8203]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mrs. Teresa Gorman, dated 17 July 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to respond to your question about staffing levels in the Employment Service as a result of implementing the New Deal. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency. This reply refers to the New Deal including the "Gateway" process for young people which we see as an integral part of the New Deal programme rather than as a separate entity.

For the New Deal to operate successfully it is clear that there will need to be additional staff in Jobcentres to support each of the elements and options of the programme. We are in the process of assessing how these activities will be delivered together with their associated staffing requirements. The net impact on staffing in Jobcentres will need to take into account other factors such as changing levels of unemployment.

I hope this is helpful.

Physical Education Teachers

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to introduce flexible contracts for teachers of physical education; and if he will make a statement. [8003]

Mr. Byers: It is for school governing bodies to negotiate contracts of employment with teachers of physical education. My right hon. Friend has no plans to change the statutory conditions of employment of those teachers.

Education Funding

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to apply his policy of fair funding of education to the county of Hereford and Worcester. [7826]

Mr. Byers: We are reviewing the education SSA methodology on which the distribution of revenue support grant to local education authorities will be based in 1998–99. Consultative meetings between central and local government representatives are taking place over the summer leading up to the compilation of a report on options for possible SSA changes in the autumn.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what additional amount would need to be spent (a) by each local education authority and (b) in total if the rate at which grants for education support and training are payable changed from 60 per cent. to 50 per cent. without change in his Department's planned expenditure for 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [8886]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 15 July 1997]: Plans for 1998–99 GEST programme and its funding have yet to be finalised. The following table shows the increase in each LEA's contribution for the 1997–98 programme if grants currently paid at 60 per cent. were paid at 50 per cent. and the DfEE's contribution remained the same.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the level in constant prices of education spending per school pupil in (a) England and (b) each English LEA for (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99 and (iii) 1999–00 assuming that all of the additional funding allocated to education in the Budget is spent on education. [8584]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 15 July 1997]: For 1997–98, net Education Standard Spending (ESS) for England equates to £2,382 per pupil. In 1998–99, at constant prices, this will rise to £2,499. Allocations for each LEA in the form of Standard Spending Assessments for 1988–89 will be made in the Autumn. Figures for 1999–00 will be determined nearer the time. ESS is not prescriptive: LEAs are free to spend more or less, in the light of their own view of priorities.

Schools (Windfall Tax)

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) when the criteria for qualifying for help from the funds for schools set aside from the windfall tax will be produced; [8018]

(2) what proposals he has to give areas with a larger percentage of old school buildings priority when the funds for schools from the windfall tax are distributed. [8019]

Mr. Byers: We shall shortly be writing to Schools, Local Education Authorities, the Funding Agency for Schools and the representatives of Voluntary Aided Schools with details of how New Deal for Schools capital will be distributed.

Income Support

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many claimants had their income support reduced in each of the first two quarters of 1996–97 for non-attendance or failure to complete (i) jobplan workshops, (ii) restart courses, (iii) workwise and worklink and (iv) 1–2–1; [7730]

(2) how many claimants had income support reduced for (a) two weeks and (b) four weeks for non-attendance or failure to complete project work in the first two quarters of 1996–97. [7729]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 10 July 1997]: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 17 July 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about how many claimants had their Income Support reduced in each of the first two quarters of 1996–97 for non-attendance or failure to complete (i) Jobplan Workshops, (ii) Restart Courses, (iii) Workwise and Worklink and (iv) 1–2–1, and how many claimants had Income Support reduced for (a) two weeks and (b) four weeks for non attendance or failure to complete Project Work in the first two quarters of 1996–97. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Unfortunately, the information is not available in the form you require. It may help if I explain that decisions on Income Support for non attendance on or failure to complete Project Work are based on opinions given by Employment Service adjudication officers. In the period April 1996 to September 1996, Employment Service adjudication officers gave 43 opinions which may have led to a reduction in the amount of Income Support payable. The information available does not show whether this would have been for two weeks or four weeks. Not all adverse opinions will necessarily have resulted in a reduction of Income Support.

Information on the number of claimants whose Income Support was reduced during the same period for non attendance on or failure to complete Jobplan Workshops, Restart Courses, Workwise, Worklink, and 1-2-1 was not collated centrally and unfortunately can not therefore be provided.

I hope this helps to clarify the situation.

School Performance Tables

Mrs. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his Department's assessment of the (a) advantages and (b) disadvantages of league tables for public examination results; and what assessment he has made of the utility to parents of data contained in these reports. [8438]

Ms Estelle Morris: Performance tables of examination results inform the debate on standards and focus attention on the areas where action is needed. Most parents are aware that the information is available and find it valuable when making decisions. But they need to have a fuller picture. Secondary tables this November will show how schools have improved over time. We aim to include value-added measurements the following year.

Mrs. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the advantages of taking account of secondary school intake in school performance tables. [8440]

Ms. Morris: Secondary school performance tables need to show the progress pupils have made, from their different starting points, as well as success in public examinations. The School Curriculum and Assessment Authority have reported that it is possible to measure value added in schools. I have asked them to take forward this work with the aim of including such measures in secondary tables in 1998. We shall consult fully on this.

Further Education (Mentally Ill People)

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when his departmental officials last met representatives of the Further Education Funding Council regarding the provision of further education services to patients detained under the Mental Health Act 1983. [8504]

Dr. Howells: Officials have not held any meetings with FEFC officers on this issue, but there has been contact with FEFC, by telephone and correspondence, on this matter.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to ensure that further education services are available to patients detained under the Mental Health Act 1983; and if he will make a statement. [8503]

Dr. Howells: Section 60 of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992 debars the Further Education Funding Council from funding the education of patients detained under the Mental Health Act 1983. The Government has no plans for amending the legislation in this area.

Excluded Pupils

Mrs. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will ensure that pupils permanently excluded from particular schools have places at other schools. [8439]

Ms Estelle Morris: Local education authorities have a statutory duty to arrange suitable education for children of compulsory school age who are out of school by reason of exclusion or otherwise.

Departmental Publications

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the cost of producing the White Paper "Excellence in Schools"; and how many copies have been printed. [8639]

Mr. Byers: The cost of printing the White Paper was met by the publishers, The Stationery Office. The Department met the cost of design, photography and typesetting which amounted to some £78,700 including VAT. Sixty thousand copies have been printed but I understand that a reprint of a further 1,500 copies has now been put in hand by The Stationery Office.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the cost of producing the video accompanying the White Paper, "Excellence in Schools"; and how many copies have been produced. [8646]

Mr. Byers: The cost of producing the video and reproducing 30,000 copies, 28,000 of which will be distributed in September to all schools in England, is expected to cost £131,300 including VAT.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many organisations have been sent a copy of the White Paper, "Excellence in Schools". [8637]

Mr. Byers: The White Paper has been sent to all schools, with separate copies to headteachers and chairs of governing bodies, all Further Education institutions, all local education authorities, all MPs and a wide range of other interested organisations and individuals.

School Premises Regulations

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to re-introduce the School Premises Regulations; and when the Regulations will be introduced to cover three to five-year-olds within the new proposals for early years education. [8649]

Mr. Byers: There are already school premises regulations in place: currently these are the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1996, which replaced the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981 last September.

The Regulations set minimum standards for school premises and facilities, and apply to all state sector schools, including those with pupils aged from three to five years.

Workskill Pilot Schemes

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the current workskill pilot schemes in respect of their contribution towards education and training opportunities for unemployed adults. [8640]

Mr. Alan Howarth: It is too early to make an assessment of the existing Workskill pilots at this stage. They have been operating in four areas since April this year. The pilots will be fully evaluated to provide us with valuable information on the extent to which allowing people to study on benefits affects their chances of gaining and remaining in employment. The first evaluation findings are expected to be available in early 1998.

Low Pay

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the lowest hourly rate paid for full-time employment that has been advertised in a jobcentre over the last 12 months. [8641]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 17 July 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to write to you direct in reply to your question about the lowest hourly rate paid for full time employment that has been advertised in a Jobcentre over the last 12 months. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

I regret that I am unable to provide the information you have requested. The Employment Service does not collect statistical information on the wage rates on offer for vacancies advertised in Jobcentres.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the number of (a) headteachers, (b) deputy headteachers and (c) other teachers taking (i) premature retirement and (ii) normal age retirement in the academic years 1996–96 and 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [8734]

Mr. Byers: The information requested is available for financial rather than academic years and, before 1996–97, such information on Heads and Deputy Heads is readily available only in relation to premature retirements. The following table shows the available information.

	Heads	Deputy heads	Others	Total
Age (1996–97)	283	162	4,005	4,450
Premature (1996–97)	1,283	1,089	13,627	15,999
Premature (1995–96)	992	944	11,119	13,055

1. The total number of normal age retirements in 1995–96 was 4,497.

2. The figures for others include all other members of the Teachers' Superannuation Scheme.

Foundation Schools

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in what circumstances it is his policy in cases where a majority of parents wish an existing county school to become a foundation school, to support their wishes. [8647]

Mr. Byers: The White Paper "Excellence in Schools" set out our plans for introducing a new framework of community, aided and foundation schools to replace the existing categories of schools. Chapter 7 proposes that, in order to minimise disruption for schools, the necessary legislation should be framed in terms of a set of assumptions that schools in an existing category will generally move to a specified new category. But the governing body will be able to choose a different legal category if they wish, and parental ballots will be available as a mechanism for parents to express their views.

Private Schools

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to paragraph 10, of page 10 of the White Paper, "Excellence in Schools", what is the statistical basis for the statement in respect of the Government's reliance on private schools to provide elite entry to universities and the professions. [8773]

Mr. Byers: Unlike today, there was no systemic national collection of statistics on the entry to universities in the 19th century. However the view that most historians of education take of the position of higher education in England at the turn of the century would support the statement in the White Paper. For example, V. H. H. Green in The Universities (Penguin, 1969) on page 125 states that, "Oxford and Cambridge still remained in 1900 the principal finishing schools of the upper and middle classes, recruiting most of their undergraduates from the independent public schools".

Project Work

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many contracts for Project Work have been awarded to date in the Dudley and Sandwell Employment Service area; and if he will make a statement; [8793]

(2) who is responsible for awarding Project Work contracts in the Dudley and Sandwell area; [8794]

(3) what outputs have been achieved to date by the Project Work pilot in Dudley and Sandwell. [8795]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 16 July 1997]: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Ian Pearson, dated 17 July 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to respond to your questions about the current status of Project Work contracts in the Dudley and Sandwell Employment Service area, who is responsible for awarding the contracts, and what outputs have been achieved to date by the pilot.

It may be helpful if I first give some background to the Project Work pilots. Project Work provides jobsearch help and practical work experience for very long-term unemployed people (2 years + and aged between 18 and 50), with the aim of helping them into work.

The pilots have two phases. Following their Restart interview, participants enter a period of structured jobsearch help, during which they are offered a series of interviews with Employment Service advisers, and are made aware of a wide range of programmes designed to help people get work. If participants remain unemployed for 3 months they are required to attend a 13-week period of work experience of benefit to the local community. The 13-week period normally involves 18 hours of work experience and 3 hours of jobsearch each week.

In answer to the specific questions you asked about the pilots in Dudley and Sandwell, four contracts have been awarded to operate the work experience element; two have been awarded to the British Trust for Conservation Volunteers (BTCV), one to the Black Country Employment Training Association, and one to Dudley Chamber Training. The contracts were awarded during week commencing 14 July 1997 by the Regional Resources Manager for the Employment Service West Midlands Region.

Outputs to date relating to the Dudley and Sandwell Project Work pilot cover only the period of intensive jobsearch help, which began on 24 February 1997. Outputs up to and including 10 July 1997 are as follows:

Clients interviewed:

2,396

Clients leaving the register:

781

of whom:

179 left to go into employment

79 left to go into Training for Work

271 left as a direct result of adviser action

134 left for other reasons

118 transferred to other benefits.

In addition, 61 participants have started on Work Trials, 57 have started on Jobclub, and 62 applications have been received for the Workstart subsidy.

I hope this is helpful.

Higher Education

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many part-time students in higher education have to contribute to all or part of their tuition fees. [8720]

Dr. Howells: Data from the Higher Education Statistics Agency for the academic year 1996–97 showed that 234,300, that is some 60 per cent., of the 384,600 part-time student enrolments for which the source of fees were known received no financial backing, and so fees were met by the students concerned. Over 30 per cent. of the remaining enrolments were paid by employers or other organisations and in just over 5 per cent. of cases no fee was paid.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals he has to encourage students from poorer homes to enter higher education. [8717]

Dr. Howells: The Government recognises that participation in higher education by students from poorer homes is closely related to educational achievement up to 18 years of age. The policies set out in our White Paper "Excellence in Schools" should greatly improve the educational opportunities for all children. In developing our policy to widen participation among students from poorer backgrounds, we shall consider carefully the recommendations of the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education, which is expected to report shortly.

Press Releases

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much his Department spends on biking press releases to (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals or groups, each time his Department issues a press release; how many such press releases were issued by his Department (i) in the period 1 May to 1 July and (ii) in the period 1 January to 1 March; and if he will review his Department's use of couriers to deliver press releases and investigate the possibility of using fax or e-mail. [8823]

Dr. Howells: The Department's press releases are made available to hon. Members and to the media via the Central Office of Information's News Distribution Service (NDS).

NDS's delivery mechanisms include a newswire service which, among others, supplies press releases to the Parliamentary Online Information Service (POLIS) which can be accessed by all MPs and Lords. Other methods include a van service to all national media, fax retrieval system and a widely accessed Web site on the internet.

These mechanisms are used either singly or in combination to ensure the most cost-effective methods are used to reach the media and to suit the nature of the documents e.g. whether press releases are despatched on their own, or accompanied by reports, consultation documents etc; no separate costing is available for the van delivery service alone.

My Department issued 57 press releases between 1 January and 1 March and 86 press releases between 1 May and 1 July.

My Media Relations Division and COI keep a watching brief on new developments to ensure the most cost-effective delivery mechanisms are used at all times.

Access Funds

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what resources will be available for access funds for students in further and higher education institutions in England in 1997–98; and when he proposes to issue new guidance on the use of the funds. [9801]

Dr. Howells: The Department is making available £27.733 million for Access Funds for students in further and higher education in England for the academic year 1997–98. The total sum is being allocated between the two Funding Councils for England as follows:

	£ million
(i) Higher Education Funding Council for England to be allocated as follows:	21.693
Undergraduate Fund	15.953
Postgraduate Fund	5.40
Further Education Fund	0.34
(ii) Further Education Funding Council	6.04
Total	27.733

The Department will shortly be writing to the two Funding Councils with guidance to be given to institutions about allocation and use of the Funds for 1997–98.

Education (Student Loans) Act 1990

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will place in the Library a copy of the Education (Student Loans) Act 1990, showing the proposed amendments contained in the new Education (Student Loans) Bill 1997. [9802]

Mr. Byers: For the assistance of Members, I have today placed in the Library a copy of a consolidation of the 1990 Act, showing the proposed amendments.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what occasions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have refused to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings with hon. Members to discuss matters relating to interests registered by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8073]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The First Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) made it clear that, when Members are meeting Ministers or others on topics in which they have an interest, the onus is on the Member to declare that interest, not the Minister to know (paragraph 63 of Cm 2850). It is not practicable for Ministers and officials, amongst their other duties, to vet requests for meetings against the Register of Members' Interests. Should evidence of non-declaration emerge, or contravention of the Resolution of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, the matter would be brought to the attention of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department refuse requests from hon. Members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those Member under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8070]

Mr. Murphy: The First Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) recognised the value of enabling Members to retain interests outside the House, provided these were properly declared, both in the Register of Members' Interests and on other occasions. Subject to these requirements, and to the rules of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, Members are free to seek meetings with Ministers and officials, who will consider such requests alongside the many other approaches from individuals and organisations concerned to press their own interest or those of others.

Commercial Lobbyists

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department have met commercial lobbyists to discuss matters relating to the business of her Department; and if she will introduce a register of such meetings; [8071]

(2) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department have attended meetings with organisations representing (i) commercial and (ii) non-commercial interests organised by commercial lobbying firms; and if she will introduce a register of such meetings. [8072]

Mr. Paul Murphy: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained in response to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn), Official Report, 2 June 1997, column 99, Ministers and officials receive deputations from many groups who are concerned to press their own interests or those of their clients, which Ministers and officials take due care to consider within the wider public interest and Government policy. As it is not practicable to distinguish particular groups as lobbyists, the Departments cannot keep a register of such meetings.

Voluntary Sports Clubs

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated cost of granting mandatory rate relief to voluntary sports clubs in Northern Ireland; and if she will make a statement. [8008]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The estimated cost of granting mandatory rate relief to sports and recreation facilities in Northern Ireland in terms of rate revenue forgone is approximately £1.3 million in the year 1997–98.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what Government proposals exist to harmonise rate relief for voluntary sports clubs in Northern Ireland; and if she will make a statement. [8007]

Mr. Murphy: Rate relief for voluntary sports clubs is harmonised throughout Northern Ireland by virtue of the provisions set out in Article 31 of the 1977 Rates (NI) Order as amended by the Article 3 of the 1979 Rates (NI) Amendment Order.

Judicial Reviews

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) on how many occasions since 1994–95 legislation has been introduced by the department (a) to remove effects of judicial review decisions and (b) to implement them; [7840]

(2) how many decisions by her Department were challenged by way of judicial review in each Parliamentary session since 1994–95; and if she will list in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld, (b) the court found for the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgment and (d) the Department appealed successfully against the judicial review decision. [7868]

Mr. Paul Murphy: This information is not readily available in the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments as no central record is kept of applications for judicial reviews.

Sean Quinn Glass Factory

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to her oral answer to the hon. Member for Barnsley, Central (Mr. Illsley) of 9 July, Official Report, column 927, on what date the decision was taken to agree to award industrial development grant to the Sean Quinn Group; and which Minister took the decision. [8466]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The decision was taken on 17 April 1997 by the then Minister for Economy and Agriculture.

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what date the contract to give industrial development grant to the Sean Quinn Group was signed. [8467]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 July 1997]: On 1 May 1997.

Ordnance Survey

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland in 1997–98. [9804]

Marjorie Mowlam: For 1997–98, the following performance targets have been set for OSNI:

Output

To complete the digital conversion programme by 1999–2000 financial year by converting 1,700 large scale map sheets to digital format.

To survey 50,000 survey units.

To update the digital topographic database with 24,000 survey units of change.

Quality of Service

To complete 95 per cent. of specific customer requests for up to 10 surveyed units of change within three working days of customer request.

To dispatch within seven working days 96 per cent. of customers' orders for small and large scale basic format maps.

Efficiency

To reduce unit costs so that the weighted mean percentage reduction of selected representative activities is 2 per cent.

Financial

To recover from the sale of goods and services 28 per cent. of the total costs incurred by the Agency.

Tradeable Services Projects

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the adequacy of the controls on the levels of selective financial assistance that can be made available to tradeable services projects in Northern Ireland. [9805]

Mr. Ingram: The controls are the same as for manufacturing projects, except that the ceiling on percentage contribution does not apply. This change allows for the different financial profile of tradable services projects which normally do not involve the substantial expenditure on capital items that is typical of manufacturing projects.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Desmond Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to publish details of the targets for the Child Support Agency; and if she will make a statement. [9837]

Mr. Worthington: The Child Support Agency will publish its 1997–98 Business Plan and Strategic Plan 1997–2000 today. Copies will be placed in the Library.

The targets that I have set for the Child Support Agency for 1997–98 are set out below.

£11.2 million of maintenance to be collected, or arranged for direct payment from absent parents with care.[1]

98 per cent. of payments made to parents with care to be made within 10 working days of receipt from the absent parent.

The cash value of all assessments checked in the year to be correct in at least 85 per cent. of cases.

Where a client is dissatisfied with a child support officer's decision and requests a review, 60 per cent. to be cleared within 13 weeks and 95 per cent. to be cleared in 26 weeks.

70 per cent. of new maintenance applications to be cleared within 26 weeks and as at 31 March 1998 no more than 1 per cent. of maintenance applications received by the Agency to be over 12 months old.[2]

To manage the Agency's resource so as to deliver its Business Plan within the gross allocation as adjusted during the course of the year; this includes the administration of the Belfast CSAC.

The targets in the Business Plan represent a sizeable challenge to the Agency and provide a firm basis for taking the business forward. The targets include measures of accuracy and of the time taken to provide services. This underlines the Agency's continuing focus on quality and client services in 1997–98.

[1] This target includes cases where maintenance is paid direct by the absent parent to the parent with care.

[2] For this target, applications include all cases received via the Social Security Agency or from private clients.

Health and Social Services Estates Agency

Mr. Desmond Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Northern Ireland Health and Social Services Estates Agency. [9838]

Marjorie Mowlam: The targets below have been set for the Northern Ireland Health and Social Services Estates Agency for 1997–98. The targets are in line with the Government's policy of seeking to improve the service provided to clients in terms of both quality and value for money. I am satisfied that the targets present a demanding challenge for the Agency. They are as follows:-

Delivery of services

Provide the Agency's services in accordance with the requirements of the Service Level Agreements agreed with clients.

Develop the management process for the Retained Estate in support of the HSS–E by March 1998.

Provide HSS–E with a Defects Centre in relation to the HPSS Estate.

Investigate and clear 60 per cent. of all adverse incidents within six months of notification of Health Estates.

Provide support and advice to the HSS–E on environmental and energy issues and establish an annual environmental award for best environmental practice within the HPSS estate.

Review Firecode in the light of the impending Places of Work Regulations and deliver to the HSS–E the annual Fire Report on the HPSS estate by March 1998.

Complete for HSS Trust clients nine Outline Business Cases of total estimated capital value £29.15 million.

Complete planning and design team briefing for one scheme, estimated capital value £1.3 million.

Complete tender process and move to construction stage five schemes of estimated capital value £99.44 million.

Project Manage to completion on site 13 schemes of estimated total capital value £12.57 million.

Complete design and/or achieve Practical Completion in respect of 15 schemes (value £4 million), these to include feasibility studies and Planning Supervision in compliance with CDM Regulations.

Arrange for the Completion of Defects Certificates to be issued for 85 per cent. of all schemes completed in the previous year. Issue Final Certificates after the agreement on Final Account of 60 per cent. of outstanding contracts.

Provide lead Clerks of Works Inspection Services on Craigavon Hospital, Causeway Hospital, Altnagelvin Hospital and the Royal Group of Hospitals on projects valued at £98 million.

Complete 85 per cent. of periodic specialist equipment tests by their programmed date and remainder within six weeks of that date. Complete 75 per cent. of specialist and diagnostic equipment acceptance tests, equipment evaluations and other tests within six weeks of receipt of request and the remainder within 10 weeks.

Complete Electricity At Work Regulation compliance surveys and issue recommendations for one Trust and two Hospital Sites.

Provide High Voltage, Low Voltage and Medical Gas Pressure Systems Authorising Engineer services to 23 locations.

Efficiency of service

Achieve an in-house 5 per cent. efficiency saving.

Complete the implementation of an enhanced management information and project costing system which will permit greater control of resources against client service needs.

Financial management and performance

Manage the Agency's resources so as to deliver its Business Plan within the gross budget allocation ad adjusted during the course of the year.

Ensure that the Agency's management accounting and information systems are adequate to support the preparation of auditable accounts for 1997–98, thereby ensuring the issue of an Accounts Direction by the Department of Finance and Personnel.

A copy of the targets is being placed in the Library of the House.

DEFENCE

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what occasions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have refused to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings with hon. Members to discuss matters relating to interests registered by those hon. Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8109]

Dr. Reid: The First Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) made it clear that, when Members are meeting Ministers or others on topics in which they have an interest, the onus is on the Member to declare that interest not the Minister to know (paragraph 63 of Cm 2850). It is not practicable for Ministers and officials, amongst their other duties, to vet requests for meetings against the Register of Members' Interests.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department refuse requests from hon. Members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those hon. Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8106]

Dr. Reid: The First Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) recognised the value of enabling Members to retain interests outside the House, provided these were properly declared, both in the Register of Members' Interests and on other occasions. Subject to these requirements, and to the rules of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, Members are free to seek meetings with Ministers and officials, who will consider such requests alongside the many other approaches from individuals and organisations concerned to press their own interests or those of others.

Procurement Executive

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the administrative costs of his Department's Procurement Executive at Abbey Wood are (a) in cash terms and (b) as a percentage of the defence budget in the current financial year. [8215]

Mr. Spellar: The internal operating cost budget (i.e. excluding extramural research, non-Abbey Wood capital works and equipment procurement expenditure) of the Procurement Executive at Abbey Wood and elsewhere is some £325 million or 1.5 per cent. of the Defence budget in the current financial year.

Administrative Costs

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the administrative costs of his Department (a) in cash terms and (b) as a percentage of the defence budget. [8130]

Dr. Reid: The defence budget for 1997–98 is £21.822 billion, which reflects a reduction of over 25 per cent. in real terms over the past 10 years. Within this, the Ministry of Defence does not distinguish between costs incurred in delivering its objectives and costs incurred in administering the delivery of those objectives. Responsibility for expenditure on all elements of defence operating costs, which include the costs of administration as well as those of delivering most aspects of military capability, is delegated to thirteen Top Level Budget holders. Planned expenditure by them for 1997–98 is £16,382 million, or 75.1 per cent. of the defence budget.

Operational Effectiveness

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's definition of operational effectiveness. [7827]

Dr. Reid: Operational effectiveness is defined differently according to the context. At the highest level it is the ability of the UK's forces successfully to carry out their missions. At the operational level, it is evaluated by measuring operational capabilities against those of potential adversaries in particular sets of circumstances.

Casual Employees

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to eliminate the category of casual employee. [7925]

Mr. Spellar: No. Recruitment to posts in the Civil Service is governed by the Civil Service Recruitment Code which permits the recruitment of staff on permanent, short term or casual contracts. This depends on the nature of the employment offered. Where a job is clearly temporary, or there is genuine uncertainty about work requirements, casual appointments for periods of up to 12 months are permitted.

Commercial Lobbyists

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have attended meetings with organisations representing (i) commercial and (ii) non-commercial interests organised by commercial lobbying firms; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings. [8108]

(2) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have met commercial lobbyists to discuss matters relating to the business of his Department; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings. [8107]

Dr. Reid: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained on 2 June 1997 in response to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn), Official Report, column 99, Ministers and officials in the Department receive deputations from many groups who are concerned to press their own interests or those of their clients, which Ministers and officials take due care to consider within the wider public interest and Government policy. As it is not practicable to distinguish particular groups as lobbyists, the Department cannot keep a register of such meetings.

Offset Obligations

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what offset obligations have been made over the last 10 years by (a) year and (b) company; how compliance with them has been monitored; and what proportion of the obligations have been fulfilled to date. [8665]

Mr. Spellar: Over the past ten years, 42 industrial participation agreements have been recorded as follows:

Year	Company
1987	CAE Electronics
	Evans and Sutherland
1988	Westinghouse
	Boeing Helicopters
	Cummins
1989	Sperry-Marine
1990	McDonnell Douglas
1991	—
	E-Systems
	Hughes Aircraft
	Raytheon
	SAAB
1992	Westinghouse
1993	—
	CAE Electronics
	Lockheed Martin
1994	Texas Instruments
	Alliant Tech Systems
	Boeing Helicopters
	CAE Electronics
	Computing Devices (Canada)
	Hughes Danbury
	ITT Avionics
	Loral
	McDonnell Douglas (2)
	Parker Bertea
1995	TAAS
	BMW Rolls-Royce
	Boeing Defence and Space Group
	Boeing NA Inc.
	Bristol Aerospace
	ETC
	Lockheed Martin (2)
	Lockheed Martin Federal Systems
	Longbow Int.
	Rockwell Int.
	Sextant Avionique
	Smiths Ind.Aerospace
1996	Telephonics Corp.
	Bell Textron
	Eurocopter
1997	BAe-Matra

Companies with industrial participation obligations are required every six months to reports detailing the work placed in the UK. A 100 per cent. audit of these reports is carried out to ensure that obligations are fully met.

To date, 11 of the agreements have been concluded successfully. Those remaining are the more recent ones and they are on course for successful completion.

Foreign Military Personnel (Training)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 June, Official Report, columns 87–88, in which years students from Libya attended military training courses in the United Kingdom; how many students were involved; and what were their ranks and the subject matter of their courses. [8767]

Dr Reid: Further examination of Departmental records indicates that no training has been provided to Libya in the past ten years. Both Libya and Iran were regrettably included in error in my previous answer of 16 June, Official Report, columns 87–88, as both countries had requested training which was not in fact provided. I am grateful to the hon. Member for providing this opportunity to set the record straight.

Press Releases

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spends on biking press releases to (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals or groups, each time his Department issues a press release; how many such press releases were issued by his Department (i) in the period 1 May to 1 July and (ii) in the period 1 January to 1 March; and if he will review his Department's use of couriers to deliver press releases and investigate the possibility of using fax or e-mail. [8822]

Mr. Spellar: Delivery of Press Notices to hon. Members and to the media is undertaken on our behalf via the Central Office of Information's News Distribution Service (NDS). My Department issued 27 press releases during the period 1 May to 1 July 1997, and 13 during the period 1 January to 1 March 1997.

NDS's delivery mechanisms include a newswire service which, among others, supplies press releases to the Parliamentary Online Information Service (POLIS), hand deliveries, fax and postal deliveries, online databases, and a widely accessed Web site on the Internet.

The mechanisms employed are used either singly or in combination to reach target audiences in the most cost-effective way, and to suit the nature of the documents.

My Department and the COI keep a watching brief on new developments to ensure the most cost-effective delivery mechanisms are used.

Harrier Jet Crash, Kirkcudbrightshire

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of the recovery and clean-up operation following the recent crash of a Harrier jet near Gelston, Kirkcudbrightshire. [8716]

Mr. Spellar: The extra costs incurred by my Department in recovering the aircraft and during the environmental clean-up operation are estimated to be in the order of £53,000. This figure does not include the cost of any claims received as a result of the accident.

Low Flying

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the avoidance sites for operational low flying in Low Flying Area 20T which lie within the Galloway and Upper Nithsdale constituency; [8718]

(2) if he will list the avoidance sites for low flying in Low Flying Area 16 which lie within the Galloway and Upper Nithsdale constituency. [8719]

Mr. Spellar: No. The Government has to strike a balance between providing information on how the UK Low Flying System operates and retaining the freedom to manage an essentially dynamic system efficiently. I am therefore withholding the information requested under exemption 7b of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

RAF Menwith Hill

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he proposes to give a further 21-year assurance to United States forces at Royal Air Force Menwith Hill in respect of site availability. [9130]

Dr. Reid: The US authorities have not sought any renewal of the previous assurances. Their use of the site continues under general arrangements between the two Governments concerning the stationing of forces.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date in 1997 the assurance given in 1976 to United States forces in respect of the making available of Royal Air Force Menwith Hill to United States forces expires. [9131]

Dr. Reid: The assurance, which was given in order to facilitate US funding commitments, covered the period up to 30 May 1997. It was not, nor was it ever envisaged to be, any form of renewable lease.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 30 June, Official Report, column 63, relating to the Atomic Weapons Establishment site at Llanishen, how long he estimates it will take to decontaminate the site. [9111]

Mr. Spellar: It is never possible at the outset of such a process to give a reliable estimate of how long it will take, because the extent of decontamination work must depend upon precisely what is encountered. During the process of decommissioning and decontaminating the Llanishen site, Land Quality Statements will be produced which will determine what measures are required to render the site fit for subsequent use. Given these circumstances we would not expect the process to be completed in less than five years.

CABINET OFFICE

Millennium Experience

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what representations he has received about the commission to be paid to Mr. Mark McCormack in connection with the Millennium Experience. [6464]

Mr. Mandelson: I have received a number of representations following reports in the press that International Management Group's commission for raising sponsorship of £150 million would be in the order of £27 to £30 million. In fact, if IMG reach the target set by the New Millennium Experience Company, they will receive in the order of £9 million, a substantial discount on their normal commission.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what estimate he has made of the cost of tickets for the Millennium Experience. [6467]

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how much visitors will be charged to attend the Greenwich Exhibition. [8022]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company have advised that it is too early to produce a detailed ticketing structure for an event taking place in the year 2000. However, they have clearly stated that the price will be competitive in relation to other comparable attractions.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will set out the remit and the salary and bonuses package of the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) with regard to the promotion of the Millennium Dome project. [6128]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 3 July 1997]: The right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) is a member of the Millennium Commission. None of the Commissioners received remuneration for their position, other than out-of-pocket expenses.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how many staff are involved in the Millennium Dome project; and what are the (i) designation and (ii) salary and bonuses of the principal staff involved in the project. [6131]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 3 July 1997]: The New Millennium Experience Company—the operating company for the Millennium Experience at Greenwich—currently has 40 staff, ranging from the Chief Executive through to IT and administrative staff. The details of senior staff remuneration packages will be published in the accounts of the New Millennium Experience Company in the usual way.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio (1) what is the total budget for the Greenwich Exhibition; [8023]

(2) how much of the Greenwich Exhibition's budget will be financed through national lottery money; how much will be raised through corporate sponsorship; and how much will be generated through ticket sales. [8024]

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what estimate he has made of the commission to be paid to Mr. Mark McCormack in connection with the Millennium Experience. [6465]

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what estimate he has made of the total cost of Millennium Experience; and if he will indicate the sources from which the money is to be raised. [6475]

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if payments to Mark McCormack in respect of the Millennium Experience will be in ratio to the amount of sponsorship raised if this sum fails to reach £150 million. [6904]

Mr. Mandelson: I refer my hon. Friend, the right hon. Member and hon. Members to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Perth (Ms Cunningham) today.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what is the maximum amount of public money not including that from national lottery sources that will be deployed on the Millennium Experience. [6899]

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how much public money the Government intends to spend on the Millennium Exhibition at Greenwich. [8031]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 7 July 1997]: The only taxpayers' money to be spent on the Millennium Experience is that which is already committed to English Partnerships to prepare the site. The total budget to prepare the site is £130 million. All other public support will come from the Lottery.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what advice he has sought from the London Fire Brigade in respect of the materials identified for construction of the Millennium Dome; and if he will make a statement. [6905]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 7 July 1997]: The New Millennium Experience Company Ltd. have worked closely with the London Fire Brigade to ensure that the design and construction of the Dome is safe and they will continue to do so. The first priority of all those involved in the Millennium Experience must be to ensure public safety.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how much money Lord Rogers is being paid for his work on the dome at Greenwich. [8033]

Mr. Mandelson: This is commercially confidential information. The New Millennium Experience Company will publish full accounts in due course.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what companies are planning to stage displays in the dome at Greenwich. [8025]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience at Greenwich will not be a trade show. Sponsorship arrangements will be announced in due course.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how many jobs will be created in the course of building the dome at Greenwich. [8029]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience is expected to create 2,000 new jobs during the construction, and a further 5,000 during the life of the project.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how much money the Millennium Commission needs to raise from the private sector to help stage the exhibition at Greenwich. [8030]

Mr. Mandelson: This is the responsibility of the New Millennium Experience Company. NMEC aims to raise £175 million from the private sector in sponsorship.

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how much public money to date has been spent on the Millennium exhibition at Greenwich. [8044]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The only taxpayers' money to be spent on the project is that which is already committed to English Partnerships to prepare the site for regeneration. To date £44 million has been spent on the site.

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will make a statement on the demonstrations and displays that will be held inside the dome at Greenwich. [8045]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 14 July 1997]: It is our aim to make the contents of the Dome a truly exciting experience, appealing to all sections of the UK population as well as to visitors from overseas. The New Millennium Experience Company—the operating company for the Greenwich project—is putting together a first class creative team. Their ideas will crystallise over the coming months.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister without Portfolio when he expects to reply to the question from the hon. Member for Hertsmere of 2 July, relating to the Millennium Experience. [9017]

Mr. Mandelson: I have replied to three of the hon. Member's questions today. The one question still outstanding will be answered as soon as possible.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister without Portfolio who the shareholders are in the company established in respect of the Millennium Experience. [9311]

Mr. Mandelson: I am sole shareholder in the New Millennium Experience Company.

Mark McCormack

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio (1) what fee Mark McCormack of International Management Group will receive from the Millennium Commission; [8026]

(2) if he will make a statement on the provisions of the contract which he recently signed with Mr. McCormack of International Management Group to raise money for the Millennium Exhibition at Greenwich. [8027]

Mr. Mandelson: None. His contract is with the New Millennium Experience Company. The fees paid to Mark McCormack's International Management Group (IMG) will be on a sliding scale of 4 per cent. to 15 per cent. of the sponsorship raised, reflecting the fact that their task will become more difficult as the sponsorship total rises. All IMG's fees will be success related and they will bear all their own costs: i.e. no sponsorship, no fee.

Jenny Page

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what salary Jenny Page is being paid as chief executive of Millennium Central. [8032]

Mr. Mandelson: Miss Page's remuneration package includes a salary of £150,000 p.a., a pension of 15 per cent. and a bonus of up to 30 per cent. dependent on completing the term of the contract and subject to meeting performance targets set by the Board of the operating company, which is now called the New Millennium Experience Company.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Corruption

Mr. Forth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list for the review of the Law Commission proposal for reform of the law on corruption (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8257]

Mr. Hoon: The Law Commission issued consultation paper No. 145 "Legislating the Criminal Code—Corruption" on 18 March 1997. The closing date for responses was 30 June 1997. Work began on the project in May 1996 and the Law Commission expects to produce a report by June 1998. The cost of the project to date is not available.

Legal Aid (Transaction Audit)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what are the 10 transaction criteria questions in audits of legal aid firms which most often result in non-compliance; and what proportion of firms fail to comply with each. [8118]

Mr. Hoon: This information is not available and could be derived only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many auditors the Legal Aid Board currently employs to carry out transaction criteria audits on legal aid firms; what was the estimated cost of employing (a) these auditors and (b) all Board staff concerned with franchising, including auditors and liaison managers in 1996–97; and what are the projected costs for 1997–98. [7908]

Mr. Hoon: The Legal Aid Board currently employs the full-time equivalent of 39.38 quality Auditors to carry out franchise related duties, including transaction criteria audits, with a current annual budget of approximately £600,000. In 1996–97, the cost of all aspects of franchising to the Legal Aid Board was approximately £4,000,000.

Planned expenditure for the maintenance and expansion of franchising in 1997–98 is £5,000,000.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department in how many instances the results of transaction criteria audits on legal aid firms have led to quality concerns being registered against the firm. [8119]

Mr. Hoon: The Legal Aid Board uses transaction criteria as the process measure of service delivery in a specific case or proceeding type, and would use evidence of systematic omissions of information recorded, advice given, or steps taken, to raise quality concerns with the organisation, with a view to improving service provision. Since 1 April 1995 (when a new system was installed to provide details of all non-compliancies) 86 major (d) non-compliancies (this is where the organisation is not able to comply with one of number of mandatory franchise requirements) have been recorded as a result of transaction criteria audits.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many transaction audits have been conducted for each of the Legal Aid Board's franchise categories; what is (a) the average number of files read and (b) the average number of person hours spent in respect of each audit; in how many instances the raw data have revealed a compliance rate below the minimum compliance rate established by the Legal Aid Board; and in how many instances the compliance rate has fallen below the established minima once the appropriate statistical significance test has been applied. [7905]

Mr. Hoon: (a) The Legal Aid Board has informed me that during the financial year 1996–97, the relevant information was as follows:

Franchise category	Audits conducted	Average number of files audited
Consumer and general conduct	300	2.3
Crime	958	5.2
Debt	266	2.8
Employment	235	2.7
Housing	382	3.2
Immigration	55	3.0
Matrimonial and family	1,498	5.1
Personal injury	1,279	4.5
Welfare benefits	95	2.7

(b) The average length of time spent auditing case files against the transaction criteria was 9.6 hours per audit. This was the time taken to conduct the actual transaction criteria audit only, and did not include selection of files, recording results, producing reports, providing feedback to the organisation, or any other time which is associated with the audit.

In 691 audits, the average compliance rate of the sample of case files was found to fall below the standard compliance for that franchise category.

Following the application of the statistical technique used during the transaction criteria audit, 70 audits were found to have a compliance range which the upper confidence interval fell below the standard compliance rate for that franchise category.

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on what occasions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have refused to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings with hon. Members to discuss matters relating to interests registered by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4*(b)*, 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8081]

Mr. Hoon: The first report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) made it clear that when Members are meeting Ministers or others on topics on which they have an interest, the onus is on the Member to declare that interest not the Minister to know (paragraph 63 of Cm 2850). It is not practicable for Ministers and officials, amongst their other duties, to vet requests for meetings against the Register of Members' Interests. Should evidence of non-declaration, or contravention of the Resolution of the House relating to delegations to Ministers emerge the matter would be brought to the attention of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department refuse requests from hon. Members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4*(b)*, 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8078]

Mr. Hoon: The first report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) recognised the value of enabling members to retain interests outside the House, provided that these were properly declared, both in the Register of Members' Interests and on other occasions. Subject to these requirements, and to the rules of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, Members are free to seek meetings with Ministers and officials, who will consider such requests alongside the many other approaches from individuals and organisations concerned to press their own interests and those of others.

Civil Justice and Legal Aid (Review)

Mr. Forth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will give for the Review of Civil Justice and Legal Aid Reforms (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the Review. [8232]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor has asked Sir Peter Middleton to produce a preliminary report by the end of September. Any further work will depend on the terms of that preliminary report. The Review is expected to cost around £75,000 to the end of September.

Gazumping

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to outlaw the practice known as gazumping; and if he will make a statement. [7996]

Mr. Hoon: Work has now begun across a number of Government Departments co-operating together which will, amongst other things, look closely at the problem of gazumping and will lead to detailed proposals which will be in the interests of everybody involved in the sale and purchase of homes. A ministerial task group will steer the work to ensure that it is carried through efficiently and effectively.

Commercial Lobbyists

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have met commercial lobbyists to discuss matters relating to the business of his Department; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings; [8079]

(2) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have attended meetings with organisations representing (i) commercial and (ii) non-commercial interests organised by commercial lobbying firms; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings. [8080]

Mr. Hoon: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained in response to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) Official Report, 2 June 1997 column 99, Ministers and officials in the Department receive deputations from many groups who are concerned to press their own interests of those of their clients, which Ministers and officials take due care to consider within the wider public interest and Government policy. As it is not practicable to distinguish particular groups as lobbyists, the Department can not keep a register of such meetings.

Keighley Magistrates Court

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when building work will begin on the new magistrates court house in Keighley. [7851]

Mr. Hoon: The provision of a new magistrates court in Keighley is in our Private Finance Initiative (Public/Private Partnership) building programme but I cannot say, at this time, when building work will commence.

Wills

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to introduce regulations to govern the qualifications and registration of those persons practising the writing of wills. [7873]

Mr. Hoon: The Government has no current intention to regulate the practice of will-writing. We are aware that there have been complaints about some firms providing will-writing services and are keeping the matter under review.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if it is his policy that the Crown Prosecution Service shall have rights of audience in Court. [7304]

Mr. Hoon: Barristers and solicitors in the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) have full rights of audience in the magistrates' courts where the vast majority of criminal cases are dealt with. The Government is addressing the issue of whether it would be in the interests of justice to extend rights of audience to include CPS lawyers. The Government is considering the existing statutory procedures in this area.

Court Fees

Mr. Lock: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to extend automatic exemption from the requirements to pay fees (a) in (i) county court and (ii) High Court proceedings to litigants in receipt of (1) income-based jobseeker's allowance, (2) family credit and (3) disability working allowance and (b) in family proceedings to litigants in receipt of (x) family credit and (y) disability working allowance; and if he will make a statement. [9154]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor has announced his intention to review the structure of civil court fees. As part of that review, he intends to examine the basis on which remissions are granted and to consider whether it would be appropriate for other categories of benefit to give rise to an automatic exemption from the liability to pay court fees. In Family Proceedings exemption from fees is already granted automatically to those in receipt of family credit as well as those in receipt of income support or of advice and assistance under the Green Form scheme. Other forms of benefit are in practice taken into account by court staff, to whom the day-to-day exercise of the Lord Chancellor's power to reduce or remit fees is delegated.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on what occasions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have refused to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings with hon. Members to discuss matters relating to interests registered by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8069]

Dr. David Clark: The First Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) made it clear that, when Members are meeting Ministers or others on topics in which they have an interest, the onus is on the Member to declare that interest not the Minister to know [paragraph 63 of Cm 2850]. It is not practicable for Ministers and officials, amongst their other duties, to vet requests for meetings against the Register of Members' Interests.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department refuse requests from hon. Members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8066]

Dr. Clark: The First Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) recognised the value of enabling Ministers to retain interests outside the House, provided these were properly declared, both in the Register of Members' Interests and on other occasions. Subject to these requirements, and to the rules of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, Members are free to seek meetings with Ministers and officials, who will consider such requests alongside the many other approaches from individuals and organisations concerned to press their own interests or those of others.

Commercial Lobbyists

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have met commercial lobbyists to discuss matters relating to the business of his Department; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings; [8067]

(2) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have attended meetings with organisations representing (i) commercial and (ii) non-commercial interests organised by commercial lobbying firms; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings. [8068]

Dr. David Clark: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained in response to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) 2 June, column 99, Ministers and officials in the Department receive deputations from many groups who are concerned to press their own interests or those of their clients, which Ministers and officials take due care to consider within the wider public interest and Government policy. As it is not practicable to distinguish particular groups as lobbyists, the Department cannot keep a register of such meetings.

Freedom of Information

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he intends to publish the White Paper on Freedom of Information; and if he will make a statement. [8908]

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to publish his White Paper on Freedom of Information. [9088]

Dr. David Clark: I hope to publish the White Paper on Freedom of Information later this year.

Yorkshire

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which areas of Yorkshire are in the ownership of the Duchy. [6981]

Dr. David Clark [holding answer 16 July 1997]: The Duchy of Lancaster has approximately 18,125 acres of land in Yorkshire in its possession. These include areas of Pontefract, Pickering, Goathland, Cloughton, Scalby and Tickhill which are ancient inheritances and mainly consist of farmland and woodland. The Duchy also owns property in Harrogate and Knaresborough.

Press Releases

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much his Department spends on biking press releases to (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals or groups, each time his Department issues a press release; how many such press releases were issued by his Department (i) in the period 1 May to 1 July and (ii) in the period 1 January to 1 March; and if he will review his Department's use of couriers to deliver press releases and investigate the possibility of using fax or e-mail. [8825]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Cabinet Office does not use couriers to bike press notices to hon. Members or to individuals or groups.

The Department issued 40 press releases in the period from 1 May to 1 July 1997 and 16 press releases from 1 January to 1 March.

My Department distributes press notices electronically, by fax and by post to ensure that they reach the media on time while ensuring value for money for the taxpayer.

HEALTH

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what occasions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have refused to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings with hon. Members to discuss matters relating to interests registered by those hon. Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8093]

Ms Jowell: The First Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) made it clear that, when Members are meeting Ministers or others on topics in which they have an interest, the onus is on the Member to declare that interest not the Minister to know (paragraph 63 of Cm 2850). It is not practicable for Ministers and officials, amongst their other duties, to vet requests for meetings against the Register of Members' Interests. It is for the Member, and not the Minister, to ensure that the rules of the House are complied with.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department refuse requests from hon. members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those hon. Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8090]

Ms Jowell: The First Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) recognised the value of enabling members to retain interests outside the House, provided these were properly declared, both in the Register of Members' Interests and on other occasions. Subject to these requirements, and to the rules of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, Members are free to seek meetings with Ministers and officials, who will consider such requests alongside the many other approaches from individuals and organisations concerned to press their own interests or those of others. It is for the Member, and not the Minister, to ensure that the rules of the House are complied with.

Private Health Treatment

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to establish patient-GP contracts to ensure that all patients have agreed to private health treatment before undergoing that treatment. [8345]

Mr. Milburn: The General Practitioner's Terms of Service, as set out in Schedule 2 of the National Health Service (General Medical Services) Regulations 1992, makes clear that GPs must not charge or accept a fee for any treatment given to patients who are registered with them for NHS treatment except where the Terms of Service specifically allow them to do so. It is open to Fundholding GPs to refer patients, free of charge, for treatment in private hospitals but this needs the agreement of the patient. Where a private fee can be charged or the patient can be referred for private treatment, the patient has to be informed and his or her consent secured.

Waiting Times

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he will take to reduce waiting lists for elective surgery at the Taunton and Somerset NHS Trust. [8730]

Mr. Milburn: The extra £1.2 billion for the National Health Service that my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced on 2 July proves our commitment to the NHS. The extra money will enable us to treat more patients from waiting lists and will help us to end waits for cancer treatment. The legacy we have inherited from the previous Government is record numbers waiting for treatment and longer waiting times. We look to health authorities to maintain downward pressure on waiting times. In Somerset the health authority and hospitals are working to treat all patients within twelve months of a decision to admit.

Child Care

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average cost of providing (a) local authority accommodation and (b) a foster care place for one child per year. [8752]

Mr. Boateng: The latest available information on gross expenditure on residential accommodation and foster care for children, by local authorities in 1994–95, was published via the "Key Indicators 1997 Graphical System", copies of which are available in the Library. The figures for England were £1,151 and £157 per week, or about £60,000 and £8,200 per year for residential and foster placements respectively.

Health Authority Deficits

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the deficit of each English health authority which has overspent as a per capita figure against the population of the area. [9084]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Patient Lists

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been removed from patient lists in the last year by (a) general practitioner fundholding practices and (b) general practitioner non-fundholding practices. [9467]

Mr. Milburn: The number of patients removed from general practitioners lists in 94–95 is shown in the table. It is not possible to distinguish between those removals which relate to fundholding and non-fundholding general practitioners.

England	[1]1994–95
Patients removed from GP list because of act or threat of violence	692
Patients removed from GP list at request of GP	82,139
Patients transferred at the request of the patient	875
Bulk transfers on resignation or death of GP	2,518,124
Patients transferred for all other reasons	2,284,010
Total	4,885,840

Pay and Conditions

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to restore the system of national negotiations on pay and conditions in the national health service. [9767]

Mr. Milburn: We wish to see a national system of pay determination, for those on national terms, supported by appropriate local flexibility. We have made a commitment to consult widely on possible changes to the National Health Service national pay system and our intention is to engage with all key stakeholders shortly.

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the policy of his Department on the timely payment of debts; and what is his Department's record on the payment of debts in the current financial year. [9530]

Ms Jowell: All departments are required to pay all their bills within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of the goods or service or a valid invoice, whichever is later, where no such terms exist. Information on payment performance for the current financial year could only be provided at disproportionate cost. The Government will publish a league table of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the autumn.

Care (Legal Description)

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the present legal description of care came into force. [9593]

Mr. Boateng: The present system for provision of residential accommodation by local authorities derives from the National Assistance Act 1948. This provides for residential accommodation for certain persons in need of care and attention but the word "care" is not defined in the legislation. The term "residential care home" is defined in the Registered Homes Act 1984.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many and what percentage of employees in his private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [8940]

Dr. David Clark: There are no employees in my private offices that are of Asian origin and three employees who are of Afro-Caribbean origin representing 16 per cent. of the total staff complement.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many and what percentage of employees, in each payband, in the quangos for which his Department is responsible, are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [8941]

Dr. Clark: The quangos for which my Department is responsible are purely advisory and do not directly employ any staff.

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the policy of his Department on the timely payment of debts; and what is his Department's record on the payment of debts in the current financial year. [9521]

Mr. Kilfoyle: All Departments are required to pay all their bills within the agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of goods or service or a valid invoice, whichever is the later, where no such terms exist. Information on payment performance for the current financial year could only be provided at disproportionate cost. The Government will publish a league table of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the Autumn.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Parades and Marches

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the decision was made to allow the Portadown Orangemen to march down the Garvaghy Road; and what were the criteria used for that decision. [7480]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 10 July 1997]: The Chief Constable concluded on the night of Saturday 5 July that the parade should be permitted to proceed along its notified route on Sunday 6 July was made.

He based his decision on the criteria set out in the public order legislation, in order to preserve public safety, only after all efforts to find an accommodation agreeable to both the Garvaghy Road Residents Coalition and the Orange Order had failed.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what decision her Department has taken with regard to the routing of Orange marches pending at (a) Bellaghy, (b) the Lower Ormeau Road and (c) Derry City. [7481]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 10 July 1997]: As my hon. Friend will be aware the Orange Order decided not to parade along the lower part of the Ormeau Road on the 12 July, and to switch their planned march from Derry to Limavady. The Orange Order in Bellaghy decided to shorten their morning parade and not to parade, as provisionally planned, through the village in the evening. Because of these most welcome and significant decisions by the Orange Order my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State was not required to make any decisions on the parades in question.

Plastic Bullets

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many plastic bullets were fired in Northern Ireland on (a) 6 and (b) 7 July. [7482]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 10 July 1997]: Between 6 am on 6 July 1997 and 6 am on 7 July 1997, a total of 1,608 plastic baton rounds were fired by the security forces; and between 6 am on 7 July 1997 and 6 am on 8 July 1997, a total of 820 were fired.

Valuation and Lands Agency

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Valuation and lands Agency for 1997–98. [10166]

Mr. Murphy: For 1997–98 the following key performance targets have been set for the Agency:

1. To complete 54,000 rating cases—equivalent to 33,600 work units.
2. To complete 30,000 client service cases—equivalent to 15,000 work units.
3. To have completed by 31 March 1998 an overview database of the public sector property estate in Northern Ireland.
4. To achieve a productivity for caseworking valuers of 342 work units.
5. TO achieve at least a 2.5 per cent. efficiency saving on the 1996–97 allocation in real terms.
6. To achieve a unit cost of casework no greater than the 1996–97 unit cost in real terms.
7. To achieve a standard in domestic rating valuations such that 88 per cent. of those determined on appeal are within plus or minus 10 per cent. of the initial assessment.
8. To achieve a standard in non-domestic rating valuations such that 80 per cent. of those determined on appeal are within plus or minus 10 per cent. of the initial assessment.
9. To complete 85 per cent. of domestic rating appeals within 6 months of receipt.
10. To complete 80 per cent. of non-domestic rating appeals within 6 months of receipt.
11. To complete 93 per cent. of a representative sample of client services casework within agreed time limits.

Full details are set out in the Agency's Corporate and Business Plans, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Tapestries

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will encourage public bodies to commission tapestries for their buildings. [7922]

Mr. Fisher: British crafts makers and artists are among the best in the world and their works can illuminate and enhance our built environment and public spaces. Tapestry is just one form of craftsmaking but can add obvious and immediate value to the experience of public buildings. I know that a splendid tapestry hangs in the office of my hon. Friend the Scottish Office Minister for Health and the Arts. A tapestry will enhance the entrance hall of the new British Library.

Tapestry is not the only medium for public art works: all of us can think of works that have impressed us, whether sculpture, ceramics, ironwork or electronic images. I consider them an excellent investment, in terms of quality of life, for those who commission and build with public money.

Chess

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received urging him to make chess an olympic sport; and if he will make a statement. [8551]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 July 1997]: I am not aware we have received any, but I do know how popular chess is and am pleased that my Department is able to provide support to the game in England through the British Chess Federation. I have received a number of representations from hon. Members and members of the public who are concerned that chess is not an activity recognised by the English Sports Council and the Lottery Sports Fund. I am sympathetic to the difficulties this creates, particularly in respect of providing access to additional sources of funding. The English Sports Council's recognition rules are kept under review and revised from time to time. The question of chess becoming an olympic sport is, however, a matter for the International Olympic Committee.

Employment Advertisements

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, media and Sport how often since 1992 his Department has been responsible for employment advertisements which contained age restrictions upon those who could apply. [9505]

Mr. Tom Clarke: Age restrictions are not specified in employment advertisements for this department.

National Endowment for Science and the Arts

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, media and Sport what proportion of the planned National Endowment for Science and the Arts will be funded by national lottery money; and from which other sources funding will be sought. [9170]

Mr. Fisher: The Government has announced its intention to establish a National Endowment for Science and the Arts (NESTA) to be funded initially from the National Lottery. Our proposals for NESTA, including possible sources of funding in addition to the Lottery, will be set out in a white paper which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be publishing on 21 July.

PRIME MINISTER

Minister without Portfolio

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the persons who were not established civil servants on 2 May whose salaries are currently being paid by Government Departments, identifying those who previously assisted the campaigning activity of the Labour Party under the present Minister without Portfolio; and if he will list the current salaries and positions held by each of these persons. [5421]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 June 1997]: It would be impracticable to list all persons who were not established civil servants on 2 May, whose salaries are currently being paid by Government Departments, since this would include all civil servants recruited since this date. In respect of Special Advisers, I refer the hon. Member to the replies that I gave to the hon. Members for Chichester (Mr. Tyrie) and for Worthing, West (Mr. Bottomley) on 2 June, Official Report, columns 97–99. In addition, my right hon. Friend, the Chief Whip, has now appointed two Special Advisers, Mr. Tom Greatrex and Mr. Kieran Simpson and my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, has appointed Mr. Hilary Benn. All paid Special Advisers have at some stage in their careers been employed either by the Labour Party or by individual members of a Labour Shadow Cabinet except:

Huw Roberts

Norman Warner

Damian Welfare.

As regards the current salaries of Special Advisers, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan) on 10 June, Official Report, column 390.

Devolution

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Prime Minister when the Devolution White Paper will be published. [8465]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The White Paper relating to Welsh Devolution will be published on 22 July, and the White Paper on Scottish Devolution will be published on 24 July.

Pension Schemes (Corporate Dividends)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 14 July, Official Report, column 44, if he will make a statement on (a) the recommendations relating to pension fund income contained in the documents cited and (b) the advice taken in respect of the review of corporation tax; and what statements his Department has made relating to the measures. [9116]

The Prime Minister: Our manifesto and business manifesto made clear our intention to review the corporate tax system. The changes announced in the Budget are consistent with our manifesto objective to promote greater long-term investment. The Budget promotes greater economic stability and provides a boost to quality and long-term investment which should benefit pension funds and other investors.

In the run up to the Budget advice was provided to the Chancellor by his civil servants. He also received a large number of representations from individuals, businesses and representative bodies. The Budget measures on corporation tax were set out in the Budget statement on 2 July. The details were published in the Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 11 July, Official Report, column 626, what was the policy of the South African Government towards Libyan sanctions and Lockerbie, as set out at his meeting with President Mandela. [9018]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 17 July 1997]: I have nothing further to add to the reply that I gave my hon. Friend on 16 July, Official Report, column 388.

Official Histories

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Prime Minister what further official histories have been commissioned. [10008]

Mr. Prime Minister: I have appointed Professor Lawrence Freedman, Head of War Studies at Kings College, London as an official historian with effect from 1 July 1997 to write the official history of the Falklands Campaign.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Domestic Workers

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many overseas domestic workers have been admitted to the United Kingdom in each year since the 1979 Immigration Rules concession came into force; and if he will make a statement. [8525]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Comprehensive information on domestic workers admitted to the United Kingdom is not available. Information is available on domestic workers granted entry clearance in 1995 by the 21 posts in the Middle East and Far East which are likely to have dealt with the vast majority of applications by domestic workers. Some 14,000 entry clearances were issued by those posts to domestic workers, the great majority to servants accompanying their employers on a visit to the United Kingdom. I regret that corresponding information for other years is not available.

Departmental Budgets

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new plans he has to introduce cuts and savings in his Department as a result of the effect on his Department's budgets for 1997–98 and 1998–99 of the upward revisions to the GDP deflators in the Budget on 2 July; and if he will make a statement. [8292]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 14 July 1997]: All Departments are reallocating spending within their Departmental ceilings as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, following the recent Budget, he will give his estimate of the total real level of his Department's budget, in 1995–96 prices, in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99; if he will estimate what such figures were for (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1998–99 following the November 1996 Budget on the basis of the estimates of the GDP deflator contained in that Budget; and if he will make a statement. [8291]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 14 July 1997]: Following the recent Budget, my Department's spending plans within the Control Total in real terms using 1995–96 prices are (a) £6,517 million in 1997–98 and (b) £6,269 million in 1998–99.

The corresponding figures following the November 1996 Budget, based on the GDP deflator contained in that Budget, were (1) £6,484 million in 1997–98 and (2) £6,385 million in 1998–99.

In comparing these figures the following points should be noted. The Home Office Annual Report 1997 (Cm 3608), published in March this year, announced a cash increase of £110 million in Home Office spending plans for 1997–98 compared with those set out in the November 1996 Budget. That increase reflected the inclusion of new provision for firearms compensation and related costs. Since then, a change in the way that certain receipts are handled has resulted in a cash decrease, incorporated in the recent Budget, of around £8 million on previous Home Office spending plans for each of the years 1997–98 and 1998–99. Because of these changes, the real terms figures shown at (a) and (b) are based on different underlying cash totals to those at (1) and (2).

Animal Experiments

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria govern the choice of the veterinary surgeon and the person responsible for day-to-day care of laboratory animals, in connection with premises registered to perform animal experiments under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. [8678]

Mr. George Howarth: The named persons responsible for day-to-day care of animals and the named veterinary surgeons are extremely important to the operation of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. The criteria for their selection are derived from their roles and responsibilities which are detailed in sections 2.9 to 2.15 of the "Guidance on the Operation of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986".

Named veterinary surgeons must also be members of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons. The College has published a Code of Practice for named veterinary surgeons and, in 1995, the Home Office introduced mandatory training to ensure that new named veterinary surgeons are made fully aware of their duties under the Act.

The Institute of Animal Technology has published guidance notes for named persons responsible for the day-to-day care of animals.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reports have been published by the Animal Procedures Committee since 1986; and when it plans to publish its next report. [8685]

Mr. Howarth: Section 20(5) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 requires the Animal Procedures Committee to publish a report on its activities each year. Reports for every year between 1987 and 1995 have been published and the report for 1996 will be published in September. It will include a section on the Committee's review of the operation of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986.

In addition to its annual reports, the Committee published a report on regulatory toxicity in 1994.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account is taken of the therapeutic necessity of new products in the procedure for issuing licences for experiments on animals under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. [8667]

Mr. Howarth: Section 5(4) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 requires that, when determining whether and on what terms to grant a licence, the likely adverse effects on the animals concerned must be weighed against the benefits likely to accrue. The need to find better medical and veterinary treatments constitutes one of the potential benefits which can be considered when this assessment is made.

Work would be licensed only if there was no alternative means of meeting the objective; if the programme of work is likely to be successful; and the protocols have been refined as far as is practical to minimise the number of animals used and the suffering caused.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many laboratories the Animal Procedures Committee has visited since 1986; and on what dates. [8683]

Mr. Howarth: Historical information is not available but in the last year Members representing the Committee have visited three laboratories. These visits were made on 20 November 1996, 5 March 1997 and 5 June 1997 and will be discussed in the Committee's annual reports for the relevant years.

Two more visits are planned for this year, one to an establishment designated as a breeder and supplier of laboratory animals and one to another laboratory.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inspectors are currently employed under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. [8666]

Mr. Howarth: There are 17 inspectors and one vacancy which is expected to be filled in September. We are currently considering ways of strengthening the Inspectorate without adding to the demands on the public purse.

Information on the complement of the Inspectorate at 31 December each year is published in the "Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals, Great Britain".

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress the Animal Procedures Committee has made in assessing the use of animals in painful psychological and behavioural experiments. [8682]

Mr. Howarth: The Committee and its predecessor, the Advisory Committee on Animal Experiments, considered psychological and behavioural research in the 1980s. The outcome of these considerations was published in the 1989 annual report of the Animal Procedures Committee. No further consideration has been given specifically to this area since then.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what organisations the Animal Procedures Committee has consulted since 1986; and on what dates. [8684]

Mr. Howarth: A part of its review of the operation of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, the Animal Procedures Committee wrote in March 1996 to all designated establishments[1], to a number of animal welfare groups and to other organisations with an interest in the operation of the Act. One hundred and fifty-seven responses were received.

The Committee holds bi-annual meetings with the Farm Animal Welfare Council.

Less recent information about organisations the Committee has consulted can be acquired only at disproportionate cost.

[1]Establishments certified under section 6 of the 1986 Act as places where scientific procedures may be carried out, or as breeders or suppliers of laboratory animals.

Perjury

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 2 July, Official Report, column 470, on perjury convictions, what was the average length of time between commitment of the offence and the charge being brought in the last year for which figures are available. [8689]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is not available centrally. Information on time intervals for proceedings completed in magistrates' courts is collected by the Lord Chancellor's Department in selected sample weeks in February, June and October of each year. This includes the period from offence to charge or summons. Information for specific offences is not collected, as the sample size is not sufficiently large. In 1996, the average period from offence to charge or summons was 45 days for indictable offences (including triable either way offences).

Probation Service

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the serious incident reports procedure was set up for the Probation Service in England and Wales. [8900]

Joyce Quin: May 1995.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many serious incident reports from each probation service in England and Wales have involved assaults against staff since May 1995. [8902]

Joyce Quin: One.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason no press notice accompanied Probation Circular 00/97. [8903]

Joyce Quin: Formal press notices are not issued on each occasion that circulars are issued but on this occasion, as on others, guidance was given to the press to put the circular in context.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Ministers assessed the contents of the Probation Service circular on serious incidents reports issued on 30 June. [8905]

Joyce Quin: The material in the circular was submitted to us shortly before issue.

Murders

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the murders reported as serious incidents by each probation service in England and Wales during 1996 were classed as (a) domestic, (b) in the furtherance of theft or gain, (c) suspect described as mentally disordered and (d) against a child under the age of one. [8904]

Joyce Quin: In the period 16 November 1995 to 17 December 1996, at least 27 of the offences reported involved a victim who was a relative or a partner; and 27 of those charged with serious offences were described as mentally disordered to some extent. The other information sought is not available from the reports submitted by probation services. More detailed reporting requirements now apply.

Firearms

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many murders and acts of manslaughter have involved the use of illegal and unlicensed firearms in each of the last five years. [8809]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 16 July 1997]: In the past, information on whether firearms used in the crime are legally held or not has not been collected centrally in England and Wales as a matter of routine. However, a special exercise was conducted last year to obtain further information on homicides involving firearms. This covered the three years 1992 to 1994, and out of a total of 196 homicides involving the use of a firearm, information was available in 129 cases to show the weapon was illegally held.

These figures refer to offences initially recorded as homicide. Information was not collected on whether the final classification was murder or manslaughter, which is not available until a court decision is reached. Nor do all offenders come to court, or the offence remains undetected.

In 1995, the last year for which figures are available, 398 burglaries and thefts of handguns were reported, and 3,517 of other firearms. This demonstrates that legally held firearms can become a source for illegal weapons and used in serious crime.

Task Force on Youth Justice

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many members of the Task Force on Youth Justice have previous experience of youth and community work; and if he will make a statement. [9136]

Mr. Michael: A number of the members of the Task Force on Youth Justice have direct experience of working with young people within the youth justice system as distinct from within the youth service. There are no youth workers among them. The role of the Task Force, and the names and professions of those appointed to it, were set out in reply to a Question from my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Goole (Mr. Cawsey) on 17 June, Official Report, columns 99–100.

Homosexuality

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which European Union countries have higher age limits for mutual consent for homosexual acts in situations where the older person is in a position of authority, influence or trust. [9161]

Mr. Michael: No European Union country makes specific provision for a higher age of consent for homosexual acts involving persons in positions of authority, influence or trust. Although it is difficult to make direct comparisons between countries with different legal systems, the following countries have special provision to deal with circumstances where one of the participants is older than the other:

Austria

The age of consent for sexual acts is 14. However, it is illegal for a male over 19 to commit homosexual acts with a male between 14 and 18.

Belgium

The age of consent for sexual acts is 16. Heavier penalties are available for those who abuse a position of authority.

Italy

The age of consent for sexual acts is 14. However, if one of the participants is an older family member or guardian, the age of consent is raised to 16.

Netherlands

The age of consent for sexual acts is 16, but a person between the ages of 12 and 16 who commits a sexual act with another person between those ages, cannot be prosecuted unless there is a complaint from the other participant, a parent or guardian. A person over 16 who commits a sexual act with a person under 16 is liable to prosecution regardless of whether a complaint has been made.

Portugal

The age of consent for sexual acts is 16. However, it is illegal for a person of 18 or over to commit sexual acts with a person under 18.

Spain

There is no statutory age of consent. In general, consensual sexual relations are not penalised from the age of 12, although a person aged over 16 who has sex with a person between 12 and 16 may be liable to prosecution.

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he proposes to introduce changes in the age of mutual consent for homosexual acts in the next Criminal Justice Bill. [9160]

Mr. Michael: The Crime and Disorder Bill is intended to deliver our manifesto commitments on tackling youth crime, disorder and sentencing. The Government have long held the view that setting the age of consent for consensual homosexual acts is a matter for Parliament to decide, and that it should be the subject of a free vote at a suitable opportunity. It seems unlikely that the scope of the Crime and Disorder Bill will be wide enough to provide that opportunity.

Age of Consent

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the dates of legislation currently in force relating to the age of mutual consent in respect of sexual acts between (a) males and females and (b) males and males. [9157]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Males and Females

Sexual Offences Act 1956 section 6. This makes it an offence for a man to have unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under the age of 16. A statutory age of consent at 16 was first enacted in 1885.

(b) Males and Males

Before 1967, all homosexual acts were illegal. The current controls are set out in the Sexual Offences Act 1956: section 12 and the Sexual Offences Act 1967, section 1 (both as amended by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 section 143). The age of consent for consensual homosexual acts in private was set at 21 in 1967 and reduced to 18 in 1994.

Sexual Offences

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been instigated for sexual offences against males under the age of 18 years in each of the last 20 years; and how many of these offences were committed by older men in positions of authority, influence or trust. [9159]

Mr. Michael: Limited information, for the years 1979 to 1995, on the number of males aged 21 and over prosecuted for sexual offences involving younger men is given in the table below.

Information regarding the status of a defendant is not collected centrally. Also, offence information is not available to the detail required for the years prior to 1979.

Proportional Voting

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce a proportional voting system for the 1999 European election. [10066]

Mr. Straw: Legislation will be brought forward this session to enable the 1999 European elections to be conducted by a regional list electoral system.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his Department's outturn expenditure was in 1996–97 under the headings Health, Other Central Government Services, Local Government Capital, Local Government Current, Total for Local Government, Miscellaneous and Overall Total; and what the planned overall change in expenditure is in (a) money and (b) percentage terms under each of these headings between 1996–97 and 1999–2000. [8129]

Mr. Dewar: The information is not available in the form requested. However, The Public Expenditure Outturn White Paper (Cm 3696) published on 3 July gives the provisional 1996–97 outturn figures on the Control Total and includes information on individual Votes, cash limits, running costs limits and EFLs for nationalised industries, other public corporations and trading funds.

The Appropriation Accounts, to be published later this year, will contain a further analysis of voted expenditure.

Rat Infestations

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) in total and (b) by local authority the number of rat infestations recorded in each year since 1990. [8446]

Mr. Chisholm: The available information, drawn from reports prepared annually by the Royal Environmental Health Institute of Scotland on a variety of environmental health matters, is set out below.

The total number of rat infestations dealt with by local authorities in Scotland is reported as follows:

	Number of infestations
1990–91[1]	12,714
1991–92	11,312
1992–93	10,997
1993–94[2]	Not collected
1994–95[2]	Not collected
1995–96[2]	Not collected
1996–97	Available December 1997

A breakdown by individual authority is not available.

[1] Change from calendar year (January to December) to financial year (April to March). The figure relates to the period January 1990 to March 1991.

[2] Information not collected due to local government reorganisation.

A1 (Lorries)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the average and maximum number of weekly lorry movements on the A1 road in East Lothian expected to be generated by the use of the new landfill facility at Oxwell Mains for rubbish from Edinburgh. [7698]

Mr. Chisholm [pursuant to his reply, 14 July 1997, c. 65]: No lorry movements to transport land waste by road from Edinburgh will be permitted until such time as road improvements being carried out as part of the A1 Oswald Dean to Innerwick dualling scheme are completed later this year. Thereafter an average of 400 lorry movements per week are expected.

Stabbing Offences

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people have been sentenced to (a) community service orders and (b) custody in Scotland after having been convicted of stabbing offences involving (i) severe injury, (ii) permanent disfigurement and (iii) disfigurement and danger to life in the current year and in each of the previous four years. [8778]

Mr. McLeish: Information collected centrally on assaults resulting in conviction does not indicate whether these involved stabbing. The following table sets out the available information for 1995 (the most recent year) and each of the previous four years.

Persons convicted of selected serious assaults receiving (a) a community service order or (b) custody, Scotland 1991–1995

Main offence	1991		1992		1993		1994		1995
	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)
Assault to:
(i) severe injury	66	191	92	218	85	249	93	209	84	203
(ii) permanent disfigurement	33	91	32	115	34	123	29	128	32	132
(iii) disfigurement and danger of life	1	14	1	15	3	22	1	24	1	14

Offences are categorised under the most serious offence; for example a person convicted of "Assault to severe injury and permanent disfigurement" will be included in category (ii) but not in category (i).

Devolution

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the proposals for devolving some social security matters to a Scottish Assembly. [9156]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 17 July 1997]: The Government's proposals, including those for social security, will be set out in the White Paper to be published on 24 July.

Marine Cage Fish Farming

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current financial budget of the Scottish Environment Protection Agency for the regulation of marine cage fish farming; and what is the expected budget for the following financial year. [8214]

Mr. Chisholm: The Scottish Environment Protection Agency does not have specific budgets for individual regulatory functions.

DEFENCE

Baton Rounds

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many baton rounds were issued in 1994; how long they would have lasted at 1993 rates of usage; and what were the reasons for issuing this number. [8531]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 14 July 1997]: Our records show that, in 1994, 33,000 baton rounds were issued to the Army in Northern Ireland and 51,000 were issued to the RUC.

The numbers of baton rounds held by the Army must be sufficient to cover both training and operational requirements, as well as the maintenance of an adequate reserve. It is not, however, possible to say how the rounds issued in 1994 would have lasted at 1993 rates of usage because records of training usage for that year are no longer available.

Details of RUC usage and operational requirements are matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what percentage of civil servants in each of grades 1 to 5 in his Department are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [9570]

Mr. Spellar: The number and percentage of permanent civilian staff in my Department and its Agencies in each of the grades 1 to 5 who have indicated that they are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin in the MOD's ethnic origin survey are shown below:

Grade level	Asian origin	Afro-Caribbean origin	Percentage of staff in grade
Grades 1–4	Nil	Nil	Nil
Grade 5	6	Nil	3.2

Reserve Forces

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what expenditure was on the reserve forces in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) is projected for 1998–99 in the categories (i) man training days, (ii) ammunition, fuel and other training expenditure,

(iii) equipment, purchase and spares, (iv) full-time military personnel costs, (v) NRPS/PSAO personnel costs, (vi) civilian personnel costs and (vii) buildings and building maintenance; and what was the expenditure in man training days by district command in the case of the TA. [8827]

Dr. Reid: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what mechanism exists for checking whether money allocated to the reserve forces by Ministers is spent on the reserves by districts and their formation councils. [8826]

Dr. Reid: Responsibility for expenditure on all defence operating costs, including those related to the Reserve Forces, is delegated to top level budget holders to enable them to achieve the objectives required of them. They in turn delegate funds and responsibility to levels at which the priorities for expenditure can best be assessed. A fundamental principle is that operational and financial responsibility should be linked, which means that commanders must have flexibility over how they spend money. They are best placed to judge where priority should be given, so that they meet the objectives they have been set. Whether they have achieved their objectives is assessed regularly by means of formal performance reviews.

Manpower

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the present manpower strength of Her Majesty's (a) Royal Air Force, (b) Navy and (c) Army; and what percentage of full manning these figures represent. [9202]

Dr. Reid: The trained strengths of the regular Armed Forces as at 1 June 1997, the latest figures available, were as follows;

	Number
(a) Royal Air Force	53,769
(b) Naval Service (RN and RM)[1]	41,368
(c) Army[1,2]	101,372

[1] Excludes Locally Entered Personnel.
[2] Includes trained Gurkha strength but excludes Royal Irish Regiment (Home Service).

These figures represent (a) 95 per cent.; (b) 97 per cent.; and (c) 95 per cent. of the trained requirement.

Military Services (Loan and Hire)

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidelines apply to the loaning or the hiring of military personnel or equipment to the private sector; and if he will make a statement. [9203]

Dr. Reid: The use of military personnel or equipment in aid of the private sector is not, as a general rule, encouraged as Defence funds are not granted for such a purpose. Where the Ministry of Defence makes goods or services available to commercial organisations, they are normally charged for at a rate which covers the full costs. This reflects Government Accounting principles. One example of assistance which might be provided is the provision of military resources in a civil emergency to help return a community to normality, which might include the restoration of commercial viability.

My Department also recognises that there may be value and benefits to the country from military participation in commercial projects from time to time. Any request would be considered on its merits and would not be accepted at the expense of a unit's operational or training duties.

Infantry Battalions

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the manning levels for infantry battalions; and how many battalions are at full strength disregarding personnel posted away from their unit but included in the strength figures. [9201]

Dr. Reid: The strength of the Army's Infantry Battalions at 1 June 1997 is shown at Table 1. The figures include only those personnel serving with their parent units. There are at present eight Battalions either at or above full strength as shown at Table 2.

Royal Hospital, Haslar

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to change the laundry arrangements at the Royal Hospital, Haslar; and if he will make a statement. [3534]

Dr. Reid: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Secondary Care Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ron Smith to Mr. Peter Viggers, dated 18 July 1997:

Royal Hospital Haslar: Laundry Arrangements

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the laundry arrangements at the Royal Hospital Haslar as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Secondary Care Agency. I apologise for the delay in responding.

As you will recall from my letter of 20 March 1997 we have been conducting a very thorough appraisal to identify and evaluate the options for providing both laundry and sterile supplies services into the next millennium. The options considered included contractorisation, PFI, and rebuilding one or both facilities and continuing to run them as integral parts of the Hospital. The conclusion reached was that, in the case of the laundry, switching to a commercial laundry service would allow quality levels to be maintained whilst saving an estimated £60,000 a year in running costs alone, with further substantial economies accruing from avoiding the need to invest in capital infrastructure and equipment. The position on the sterile supplies department, the expansion fo which is critical to the wider development of the Hospital itself, is rather different. The capacity of the local NHS market to absorb extra contract work from Haslar is extremely limited and, given the need for a responsive service that can deal with fluctuating demand from the operating theatres, the balance of advantage lies in providing a new in-house sterile supplies department, although we are not yet finally committed to that course of action.

Some 60 civilian staff work in the two departments and, in accordance with Ministry of Defence policy, their views have been sought through the Trades Unions. Whilst the proposal to rebuild the sterile supplies department has been welcomed, considerable concern has been expressed about the contractorisation of the laundry service and a counter proposal has been made to retain the current in-house facility. I have considered the arguments very carefully, and have met with representatives of the Transport and General Workers Union (T&GWU) to discuss their concerns. The union response centres on two main areas: quality and cost. On the subject of quality, the unions have suggested that a commercial laundry service could not provide the standard of service that the Hospital requires. However, this does not accord with experience in the National Health Service where a significant proportion of hospital laundry is now done by private companies and no compelling reasons have been put forward to explain why such an arrangement would not work at Haslar. On the financial front, I have to say that accepting the union line would prevent me from delivering substantial savings that are on offer and, thereby, providing the taxpayer with the best possible value for money.

At present the T&GWU and I have agreed to differ on these points and, since the unions have registered formally their disagreement with Agency plans, the issues must now be the subject of further discussion between management and unions through the Department's Whitley machinery. Until this has been done and the disagreement resolved one way or the other, MOD policy obliges me to put into abeyance all action to implement the proposals.

I realise how much of a disappointment our plans might be for laundry staff who have served the Royal Hospital loyally over the years. I do hope, however, that they will understand that my Agency must recognise and respond to economic pressures if we are to maintain the high standard of clinical service to which we are committed whilst meeting our fiscal duty to the taxpayer.

I hope this is helpful.

Historic Buildings, Greenwich

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the current state of the historic buildings at Greenwich in the ownership of the Ministry of Defence. [7818]

Dr. Reid: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence holds the freehold of the historic buildings of the Royal Naval College at Greenwich, together with the Dreadnought Seamen's Hospital and the Devonport Nurses' Home, on behalf of the Crown for the benefit of Greenwich Hospital. Of these, the Royal Naval College, which is occupied by the Ministry of Defence is, with the exception of King William Building and the external areas, in a fair state of repair. The Dreadnought Seamen's Hospital and the Devonport Nurses' Home (neither of which is leased to my Department) are unoccupied and are in a less satisfactory condition. I understand that Greenwich Hospital has been encouraging the tenants, which have full responsibility for repairs and maintenance, to take measures to prevent further deterioration.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Organic Farming

Ms Corston: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of organic farmland on farmland bird populations. [7478]

Mr. Morley: A MAFF funded research project on this subject, undertaken by the British Trust for Ornithology and the Institute of Arable Crops Research, was completed in March 1995. The report provided some evidence that organic farming can lead to an increase in the number and diversity of bird species compared to conventional farms. We are aware that organisations such as the British Trust for Ornithology consider that more research into this issue is justified. We will consider any proposals for future research from such organisations alongside other research priorities.

The Department also funds a wider-ranging programme on the effects of agriculture on the environment including research on the impact of agricultural intensification on farmland birds. These projects are contributing to a better understanding of the possible causes of difference found in bird populations on organic and conventional farm-land.

Ms Corston: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the research into organic farming methods conducted at his Ministry's plant breeding stations; and what proportion of his Department's research budget for organic farming is constituted by funding allocated to these establishments. [7474]

Mr. Morley: The Ministry has no plant breeding stations. However, we are currently funding some research on plant varieties suitable for organic farming. This is being undertaken by the National Institute of Agricultural Botany (NIAB). This work will cost approximately £29,000 IN 1997–98, and it represents about 3 per cent. of the total annual budget available for organic research and development.

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has made to EU partners to persuade them that long distance live animal transport should end. [8655]

Mr. Morley: We shall take every opportunity in contacts with our EU partners to press our view that a trade in meat is preferable to the long distance transport of food animals. In support of this we shall now be pressing our partners to implement and enforce the new EU rules on journey times which we ourselves have introduced as a priority, and are seeking improvements in these rules in ongoing EU discussions.

Cattle Slaughtering

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what assessment he has made of the provision of slaughter facilities for OTMS cattle in the county of Shropshire; [9457]

(2) if he will list the abattoirs available for the slaughter of OTMS cattle emanating from Shropshire farms. [9453]

Mr. Rooker: Contracts for the slaughter of OTMS cattle have been awarded to 26 abattoirs in Great Britain. None are in Shropshire, but seven are in counties neighbouring Shropshire and are available to producers in Shropshire. These include:

North West Meats

F. Redfern

Bradeley Meats

R. B. Elliot

Nottingham Processing Co.

ABP Nuneaton

The Baker Group.

This does not preclude cattle from the county going further afield if appropriate. As such, I am satisfied the producers in Shropshire are well served under the new arrangements.

Vitamin B6

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his proposals to limit the availability of vitamin B6 to 10mg per tablet or capsule. [9425]

Mr. Rooker: I have received advice recently from the Food Advisory Committee that the level of vitamin B6 in dietary supplements should not exceed 10 milligrams per daily dose, and that such supplements should carry a warning label about the harmful effects of high intakes. I have accepted this advice and have instructed officials to draw up legislation under the Food Safety Act 1990 to control dietary supplements containing vitamin B6.

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what his Department's policy is on the timely payment of debt; and what its record has been on debt payment in the current financial year. [9323]

Mr. Morley: All Departments are required to pay all their bills within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of the goods or service or a valid invoice, whichever is later, where no such terms exist. Information on payment performance for the current financial year could only be provided at disproportionate cost. The Government will publish a league table of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the Autumn.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Departmental Budgets

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, following the recent Budget, he will give his estimate of the total real level of his Department's budget, in 1995–96 prices, in (a) 1997 (b) 1998–99; if he will estimate what such figures were for (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1998–99 following the November 1996 Budget on the basis of the estimates of the GDP deflator contained in that Budget; and if he will make a statement. [8316]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The figures requested for this Department's spending plans within the Control Total in £000,000 and expressed at 1995–96 prices are as follows:

(a) 1,021, (b) 990, (1) 1,036, (2) 1,013.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new plans he has to introduce cuts and savings in his Department as a result of the effect on his Department's budgets for 1997–98 and 1998–99 of the upward revisions to the GDP deflators in the Budget on 2 July; and if he will make a statement. [8317]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 14 July 1997]: All Departments are reallocating spending within their departmental ceilings as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Danny Woodier

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the statement of 9 July, Official Report, columns 1044–52, what was the purpose of the visit of Mr. Danny Woodier to Caracas in January 1997. [8897]

Mr. Fatchett: Mr Woodier, Consular Protection Desk Officer for South America, visited the Caracus area in March 1997 as part of a familiarisation visit to South America. The purpose of his visit was to gain first hand knowledge and experience of his area of responsibility.

Quota Hopping

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) for what reasons the agreement reached on quota-hopping was not included in the Amsterdam treaty; [9080]

(2) if the recent agreement reached on quota-hopping is legally binding. [9079]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Minster for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to the House on 18 June, Official Report, column 331.

Amsterdam Treaty

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Human Rights article contained in the Amsterdam treaty. [9117]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We welcome the reference to fundamental rights in Article F of the Treaty on European Union. The new article re-states the principle that acts of the Union and of the Community must respect the existing fundamental rights of EU citizens, which are an essential feature of the responsibility which states bear towards their citizens. We also welcome the new Article 6a to the Treaty of Rome permitting (but not obliging) the Council, acting unanimously, to take action at Community level to combat discrimination.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those areas where the European Court of Justice has gained jurisdiction as a result of the Amsterdam treaty. [9077]

Mr. Henderson: Because the Court has a full role in the European Community pillar, extensions of the EC Treaty provisions at Amsterdam also involve an extension in the jurisdiction of the Court. Article K.7 of the Amsterdam Treaty will also give the Court a limited role in relation to the Justice and Home Affairs pillar of the Treaty on European Union: the Court will have a preliminary rulings jurisdiction for those Member States which choose to accept it; jurisdiction to review the legality of framework decisions and decisions adopted by the Council; and jurisdiction over certain disputes between Member States and between Member States and the Commission. Under Article K.12 the Court will have jurisdiction to review the operation of the Justice and Home Affairs pillar flexibility procedure. The Court will also have jurisdiction, through Article L, over the fundamental rights implications of action of the institutions within the Justice and Home Affairs pillar insofar as it has wider jurisdiction in that pillar.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the impact of the Amsterdam treaty on the work of the European Court of Justice. [9076]

Mr. Henderson: There is likely to be some increased workload for the Court of Justice deriving from the extension of its jurisdiction under the Treaty of Amsterdam. However, the impact of the new Treaty on the Court's workload will not become clear until sometime after the Treaty comes into force.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the terms of the flexibility clause agreed at Amsterdam; and if it will be enacted by qualified majority procedure. [9092]

Mr. Henderson: The draft Treaty of Amsterdam (CONF 4001/97) has been placed in the Libraries of the House. The decision to use the flexibility provisions will be taken by Qualified Majority Voting, but with an "emergency brake" clause, which states that a Member State may "for important and stated reasons of national policy" prevent a vote being taken by QMV; the decision may then be referred to the European Council, for decision by unanimity.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what additional powers will be granted to the European Parliament by the Amsterdam treaty. [9124]

Mr. Henderson: A full list of the powers of assent and co-decision granted to the European Parliament can be found on pages 115 to 117 of the draft Treaty of Amsterdam (CONF 4001/97), copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House. I also refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Sir J. Stanley) on 30 June, Official Report, column 38. New powers for the European Parliament in the Third Pillar are dealt with in Article K.11 of the draft Treaty; those in the new free movement title of the European Communities Treaty (TEC) in Article G. In addition, the European Parliament will exercise certain powers in the application.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what areas the Amsterdam treaty extends co-decision making; and if he will make a sttaement. [9091]

Mr. Henderson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Sir J. Stanley) on 30 June, Official Report, column 38.

Botswana

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Government of Botswana to express concern at the forced expulsion of the Khwe Bushmen from the Central Kalahari Game Reserve. [9125]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We have made representations to the Botswana Government, who have assured us that the Khwe Bushmen would not be evicted from the Central Kalahari Game Reserve. Our High Commissioner visited the central Kalahari area earlier this month and found no evidence that Bushmen had been forced away from the reserve. He is, however, pursuing with the Minister of local Government the need for better planning for managing the move of those bushmen who elected to leave the reserve.

Social Chapter

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government will implement measures brought under the qualified majority voting section of the social chapter, in circumstances where these are contrary to Government policy. [9081]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We will negotiate constructively with the aim of ensuring that any EC legislation adopted by QMV takes into account UK policy.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the social chapter on the competitiveness of British companies. [9075]

Mr. Henderson: Only two directives have so far been adopted under the Agreement on Social Policy. These simply introduce minimum standards which reflect good business practice and we do not believe that they will damage competitiveness.

We will use our influence in the EU to promote employability and competitiveness.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth affairs what percentage of social chapter legislation is subject to qualified majority voting. [9123]

Mr. Henderson: Both the two directives so far adopted under the Agreement on Social Policy were subject to QMV. The voting procedure for the draft directive currently under discussion (Burden of Proof) would also be QMV.

It is not possible to predict what percentage of future legislation under the Agreement will be subject to QMV.

European Parliament

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what circumstances the European Parliament acting through co-decision making procedures is able to veto measures from the Council of Ministers. [9078]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The European Parliament is able to veto any legislative measure made through co-decision where agreement cannot be reached with the Council of Ministers.

Common Foreign and Security Policy

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those areas under common foreign and security policy which will operate under qualified majority voting. [9082]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Under the common foreign and security policy provisions of the Amsterdam Treaty, the Council will act by qualified majority when taking decisions on the basis of common strategies adopted unanimously by the European Council; and when adopting decisions implementing joint actions or common positions. Any Member State may, however, prevent such a vote being taken for important and stated reasons of national policy. In these circumstances the matter may be referred to the European Council for decision by unanimity. Qualified majority voting will not apply to decisions having military or defence implications.

Iraq (Sanctions)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will investigate details provided by the Iraqi National Congress, a copy of which has been sent to him, of sanctions breaches in contravention of United Nations resolution 986. [9590]

Mr. Fatchett: Yes. We take seriously all reports of violations of sanctions against Iraq. We remain committed to maintaining these sanctions, while alleviating the suffering of the Iraqi people through the mechanisms established under SCRs 986 and 1111.

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of his Department on the timely payment of debts; and what is his Department's record on the payment of debts in the current financial year. [9532]

Mr. Fatchett: All Departments are required to pay their bills within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of the goods or service of a valid invoice, whichever is later, where no such terms exist. Information on payment performance for the current financial year could only be provided at disproportionate cost. We will publish a league table of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the Autumn.

Westminster Foundation for Democracy

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the audited accounts and Annual Report of the Westminster Foundation for Democracy will be available; and what subject matter they will cover. [9995]

Mr. Robin Cook: Copies of the Foundation's Annual Report for 1996–97 have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

The Foundation received £2.5 million from this Department for its activities in 1996–97. With this grant it supported 278 projects in 58 countries. It directed most of its funds to supporting democratic institutions in Central and Eastern Europe, the former Soviet Union and Anglophone Africa, and also supported worthwhile projects in other parts of the world. It makes a valuable contribution to the promotion of democracy overseas. Projects have included work with political parties, parliaments, the independent media, trades unions, human rights groups, women's groups and other non-governmental organisations involved in political development.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what his Department's policy is on the timely payment of debt; and what its record has been on debt payment in the current financial year. [9321]

Dr. Howells: All departments are required to pay all their bills within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of the goods or service or a valid invoice, whichever is later, where no such terms exist. Information on payment performance for the current financial year could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Government will publish a league table of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the Autumn.

School Inspections

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate the average cost of an OFSTED inspection for a primary school with a roll of 200 pupils. [8343]

Mr. Byers: The cost of school inspections is a matter for HMCI. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member, placing a copy of his letter in the Library.

Assisted Places

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the schools in the constituency of Torbay with pupils on the assisted places scheme, indicating in each case the number of pupils and the income which the school receives under the scheme in 1997–98. [8757]

Mr. Byers: There are no schools participating in the assisted places scheme in the Torbay constituency.

Youth Service

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what the expenditure on the Youth Service was (a) in total and (b) per area in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; what is the planned expenditure for the next two years; and if he will make a statement; [9132]

(2) what was the percentage change in Youth Service funding in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms, in each of the last 10 years; what is the planned percentage change in (i) cash terms and (ii) real terms in the next two years; and if he will make a statement. [9479]

Dr. Howells: The following table sets out net current expenditure for the Youth Service from 1989–90 to 1995–96, the latest year for which figures are available, and the percentage changes in cash and real terms from 1986–87 and 1995–96 for the all-England totals. Information for each Local Education Authority prior to 1989–90 is not readily available. There are no planning figures for the next two years; LEAs' Standard Spending Assessments are not hypothecated and expenditure will depend upon decisions made at the local level.

Mr Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to make provision of the Youth Service a statutory responsibility; and if he will make a statement. [9137]

Dr. Howells: Local authorities already have a duty under the existing Education Acts to secure provision in their areas of adequate facilities for further education, of which the youth service is a part. However, the Government is committed to raising the profile of the youth service which it values as an important provider of personal and social education for young people. Further details about my right hon. Friend's proposals for legislation to place the youth service on a clearer and more specific statutory footing will be included in the White Paper on Lifelong Learning in the autumn.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Skipton Benefits Agency

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what plans exist to reduce the staffing levels and ranges of services at Skipton Benefits Agency; [9104]

(2) which existing occupiers of Cavendish House in Skipton intend to vacate the premises; and what new occupiers she expects will move in; [9106]

(3) what is the catchment area of the Benefits Agency at Cavendish House, Skipton; [9105]

(4) if the present level of service and staff presence will be maintained at Skipton Benefits Agency during the current review. [9107]

Mr. Field: One of our key aims is that delivery of service should be simpler and more efficient. In order to maintain and improve the level of service whilst keeping within announced spending totals, managers have decided to move the processing of benefits from the Benefits Agency office at Skipton to the Keighley office. Queries on operational matters are for the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, Peter Mathison. I have asked him to reply to the hon. Member directly and for his reply to be published with the answer.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Curry, dated 17 July 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions concerning the Benefits Agency (BA) office at Cavendish House in Skipton.

The BA is currently undertaking a radical reappraisal of its services and the way they are delivered, in order to maintain and improve the level of service provided whilst keeping within the spending targets that have been set for the next two years.

The Agency is committed to ensuring that people will get the help they need to claim the benefits they are entitled to. The Yorkshire Area Directorate remains committed to providing a high level of service to its customers and equal access to the benefit system for all members of the public.

It is expected that all benefit processing work will be transferred from the BA office at Skipton to the Keighley office by 15 September 1997. There are currently 27 staff based in Skipton of which 6 or 7 will remain. The range of services offered to the public will be unaltered and customers should not notice any difference in the level of service.

As far as the BA is aware the other occupants, currently Inland Revenue and Employment Services, intend to remain in Cavendish House.

The Skipton catchment area incorporates Bolton Abbey, Buckden, Cowling, Cray, Crosshills, Gargrave, Grassington, Hellifield, Kettlewell, Long Preston, Malham, Ribblehead, Settle and Skipton.

I can confirm that the present levels of service of staff presence have remained unaltered during the review.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the policy of her Department on the timely payment of debts; and what is her Department's record on the payment of debts in the current financial year. [9524]

Mr. Field: All departments are required to pay all their bills within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of the goods or service or a valid invoice, whichever is the later, where no such terms exist. Information on this Department's record in the current financial year is not yet available. The Government will publish a league of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the Autumn.

Benefits Offices

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to visit the Uxbridge Benefits Agency; and if she will make a statement. [9335]

Mr. Field: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, intends visiting the Uxbridge office in the near future.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to review the previous Government's rationalisation of benefits offices; and if she will make a statement. [9331]

Mr. Field: We are working to deliver our aim of modernising social security delivery so that we offer a better, simpler and more efficient service. As a key part of this, we will be looking at all proposals affecting national and local delivery to ensure that they meet these criteria.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Indonesia (Exports)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the (a) number and (b) categories of export licences granted to Greys Defence Systems Ltd. since 1988 for the export of military, security, police equipment and services to Indonesia; and if she will make a statement on the equipment and services provided. [3688]

Mrs. Roche: Companies House records show that Greys Defence Systems Ltd. was incorporated on 20 September 1994. Readily available records show that no export licences have been granted to this company for Indonesia.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the export licences granted to (a) Procurement Services International and (b) Greys Defence Systems Ltd. for (i) the export of police and security vehicles to the Indonesian Road Police and (ii) the transfer of 8x8 armoured vehicles to Indonesia. [3635]

Mrs. Roche: Four export licences have been granted to Procurement Services International for the export of police and security vehicles to the Indonesian police. None of the applications has referred to Road Police, all exports have been destined for Sabhara—the traffic police, Dalmas—local police or Brimob—police mobile brigade. The Department does not maintain records of the actual transfers made under the export licences it issues.

No export licences have been granted to Greys Defence Systems Ltd., for Indonesia.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment her Department made of applications from GKN Defence for the export of MOWAG armoured or internal security vehicles to Indonesia. [3640]

Mrs. Roche: Release of the information requested is being considered under the Code of Practice for access to Government Information and a substantive reply will be made as soon as possible.

Armoured Vehicle Exports

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if she will make a statement on the export licences granted to Transac International for the export of armoured or internal security vehicles since 1988, indicating the amounts involved, export licence category, countries and security forces units of destination in each case; [3641]

(2) if she will list (a) the export licences granted to Gulf Transac for the export of armoured or internal security vehicles since 1988 and (b) the amounts, export licence category, countries and security forces units of destination in each case. [3524]

Mrs. Roche: Release of the information requested is being considered under the Code of Practice for access to Government Information and a substantive reply will be made as soon as possible.

Petrol Prices

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Competition and Consumer Affairs will meet the Highland and Islands Action Group to discuss the effect of the increase in petrol prices resulting from the Budget. [8350]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 14 July 1997]: My hon. Friend the Member for Inverness East, Nairn and Lochaber (Mr. Stewart) has already arranged for me to meet the Highlands and Islands Action Group. If the hon. Member has any interest I would be delighted if she could join us.

BT (School Internet Services)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he has reviewed the competition policy consequences of the Government agreement with BT to provide free Internet services to each school; and if he will make a statement; [8916]

(2) when every school will have access to the free Internet service for all schools which the Government are planning; [8918]

(3) when Oftel will announce its findings concerning the Government's agreement with BT to provide free Internet services to each school in return for permitting BT earlier access to the broadcast market. [8919]

Mrs. Roche: The Government welcomes BT's proposal of a special deal for schools, and the offers which the Cable companies have brought forward. These initiatives, which aim to offer schools access to advanced on-line services at affordable and predictable rates, will be of key importance in fulfilling the Government's commitment to wire up schools to the Information Superhighway free of charge, and to make access charges as low as possible.

There are issues relating to BT's proposal which require Oftel to consult others in the industry, in line with its regulatory duties. We are pleased that Oftel has now published its consultation document, proposing options specifically designed to encourage participation by all telecommunication companies, and competition between different telecommunications companies and Internet service providers. This illustrates the way forward, with all operators working in partnership. Oftel will work towards a final conclusion in September.

It is of course up to individual schools to decide whether or not to take up the cable industry's offer, or BT's proposal when it is available, and it is therefore not possible to indicate when every school will connect to the Internet. The Government will publish in the Autumn a consultation paper on the National Grid for Learning which will address key issues including network links, ICT infrastructure, software, services, teacher training and technical support.

The Government is, in line with its manifesto commitments, separately considering the way forward on questions relating to the regulatory restrictions on BT and other Public Telecoms operators. Oftel is involved in that process. The issues involved are complicated—relating not just to competition in telecoms but also to wider broadcasting issues—and must be considered carefully. The Government would expect to publish proposals on the way forward in the Autumn.

Bank of Credit and Commerce International

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what are the costs of the English BCCI liquidation to date; [9145]

(2) what are the fees and expenses of Deloitte and Touche in the English liquidation of BCCI to date. [9144]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Total expenses brought to account in the UK liquidation of BCCI up to 15 January 1997 (the date to which the last Annual Report of the joint liquidators was made up) were US$567 million and the realisations totalled US$2,445 million. Further details of the expenses and receipts can be found in the joint liquidators' report to the Secretary of State pursuant to Regulations 14 of the Insolvency Regulations 1994 for the period 16 January 1996 to 15 January 1997, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House and a copy of which I sent to the hon. Member on 30 May 1997.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many and what percentage of civil servants in each of grades 1 to 7 in her Department are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [9565]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The figures for the DTI, on a headcount basis and excluding Executive Agencies, on 17 July 1997 are as follows:

	Asian origin		Afro-Caribbean origin
Grade level	Number of respondents	Percentage	Number of respondents	Percentage
Grades 6 and 7	8	1.2	1	0.15

The figures for grade levels include all equivalent grades. About 8 per cent. of staff have chosen not to respond to the Department's ethnic origin survey.

Employment Advertisements

Ms Perham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how often since 1992 her Department has been responsible for employment advertisements which contained age restrictions upon those who could apply. [9506]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Consistent with a long standing Departmental policy, since 1992 there have been no age restrictions in advertisements for any posts in the DTI.

Secured Loans Market (Unfair Practices)

Mr. Miller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to prevent unfair lending practices in the secured loans market. [10067]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I am concerned over some of the allegations I have seen about practices adopted by some lenders and brokers.

I warmly welcome, and support, the guidelines which the Director General of Fair Trading published today to lenders and brokers in this market. I urge all businesses in the sector to follow these guidelines on good business practice which the Director General advocates. Now that the industry has these guidelines I hope this will put an end to concerns about its business practices.

Space Programme

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to maintain the ESA science programme as the basis for United Kingdom space science activities; and what plans she has for bilateral co-operation and missions. [9435]

Mr. Battle: The ESA science programme is the main plank of UK space science. UK space scientists also participate in bilateral or multilateral missions which supplement collaboration through ESA. These include

Spectrum-X with the Russian Space Agency and opportunities are being sought to participate in missions led by Japan, NASA, Eire and France.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what preparation she is making for the ESA ministerial meeting in 1998; what plans she has for consultations with the space industry, commerce and academic similar to those which were undertaken before the last ESA ministerial meeting; and when she plans to start those consultations. [9456]

Mr. Battle: The European Space Agency will establish a working group in the autumn, on which the UK will be represented, to prepare for the planned Ministerial. I intend to keep in touch with this work and arrange timely consultation with the space sector on proposals as they take shape. Depending on progress, this could be in early 1998.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she plans to update the British Space Plan and publish it before the ESA Ministerial meeting next year. [9426]

Mr. Battle: The British National Space Centre is committed to an open planning process and will be preparing an updated Plan in consultation with the space sector. I would expect this to be completed before the planned ESA Ministerial.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what role the United Kingdom will play in the proposed ESA Mars Express mission; and what assessment she has made of the contribution of United Kingdom scientists to Mars science. [9436]

Mr. Battle: The precise nature of the Mars Express mission and the roles of ESA members states within it are still under discussion. UK space science generally is world-class, as shown by the success of British scientists in international competition. No specific assessment has been made of their contribution to Mars science but UK scientists have built instruments for the NASA Mars Global Surveyor, due to reach Mars in September, and have collaborated with NASA in the study of Martian materials transported to Earth in meteorites.

Observatory (Edinburgh)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representatives the Minister for Science, Energy and Industry received from the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths) on the Royal Greenwich Observatory in Edinburgh. [9431]

Mr. Battle: I met my hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, South, together with representatives from the ROE, to listen to their view on the future of the Royal Observatories on 10 June. I held a similar meeting with my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridge (Mrs. Campbell) on 12 June.

Aluminium Industry

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what response her Department has made to the proposals from the European Commission on energy taxation in relation to the United Kingdom aluminium industry. [9438]

Mr. Battle: I have received a letter and a position paper from the Aluminium Federation (ALFED) concerning the implications of energy taxation for the UK aluminium industry. I intend to reply to this correspondence shortly. My officials are aware of the aluminium industry's concerns and are keeping in close touch with them on developments at EU level through ALFED.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Attorney-General what is the policy of his Department on the timely payment of debts; and what is his Department's record on the payment of debts in the current financial year. [9528]

The Attorney-General: All departments are required to pay all their bills within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of the goods or service or a valid invoice, whichever is later, where no such terms exist. Information on payment performance for the current financial year could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Government will publish a league table of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the autumn.

WALES

Off-road Cycleways

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of Stae for Wales (1) how many miles of off-road cycleways there are in each county in Wales; [7907]

(2) what is the projected increase in off-road cycleways over the next (a) five, (b) [redacted] and (c) 15 years for each county in Wales. [7906]

Mr. Hain: Although information requested is not held centrally, I welcome the expansion in provision of off-road cycleways.

Rat Infestations

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many rat infestations were recorded (a) in total and (b) by local authority for each year since 1990. [8444]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I have received no such notifications since 1990.

Local authorities are responsible for taking steps to secure, as far as practicable, that their districts are kept free of rats.

Subsidised Meals (Children)

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment his Department has made of means by which subsidised meals for children may be provided outside school terms; and if he will make a statement. [9134]

Mr. Hain: None. Entitlement to free school meals and milk operates only in the context of the provision of education.

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the policy of his Department on the timely payment of debts; and what is his Department's record on the payment of debts in the current financial year. [9522]

Mr. Ron Davies: All departments are required to pay all their bills within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of the goods or service or a valid invoice, whichever is later, where no such terms exist. Information on payment performance for the current financial year could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Government will publish a league table of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the autumn.

TREASURY

Public Expenditure

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what account is taken in calculating the percentage of public expenditure and its control within the deficit limits of the Maastricht Treaty convergence criteria of that part of public investment projects co-funded by national or local government and funds of the European Community; and if he will place in the Library documents showing the relevant methodology and the outturn calculations for the last available three financial years. [5565]

Mr. Darling: The Maastricht Treaty convergence criteria set a reference level for the general government financial deficit of 3 per cent. of gross domestic product. All general government investment expenditure is included in the calculation of the deficit, irrespective of source of funding, as are net contributions to the European Union.

Local Government Finance (EU)

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which countries in the EU include local authority self-financed expenditure or an equivalent category in their national control total or its equivalent. [8195]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury does not hold comprehensive information about the budgetary control totals of other member states. All countries in the EU measure the General Government Financial Deficit, which takes account of local authorities' current and capital expenditure on sectors outside general government.

Pensioners (Tax Credits)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of (a) how many pensioners with no tax liability reclaimed a tax credit on dividends paid in 1996–97 and (b) the average amount re-claimed. [7555]

Dawn Primarolo: The latest available information is derived from 1995–96 Survey of Personal Incomes. It is estimated that some 300,000 non-taxpayers aged 65 or over made claims, averaging £75, for payment of the tax credit on dividends paid in 1995–96.

Budget (Environmental Impact)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish his assessment of the environmental impact of tax and spending charges outlined in his Budget. [8347]

Dawn Primarolo: It is estimated that the net effect of the increase in the road fuel duty escalator from 5 to 6 per cent. (assuming this is applied for the life of this Parliament), the reduction in VAT on domestic fuel and power, and abolition of the gas levy will be to reduce carbon emissions by 2010 by around 2 million tonnes annually. A number of other tax changes—including the reduction in VED for low emission buses, and the freeze in road fuel gas duty—will also reduce emissions, but effects will be dependent on take up. The Environmental Task Force, set up as part of the New Deal for the unemployed, will help in meeting the Government's target for heat conservation and efficiency, and thus will also help in reducing emissions.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to publish the Green Book on the environmental implications of the Budget. [8674]

Dawn Primarolo: There are no plans to publish such a "Green Book" for the recent Budget which was not a full Budget. Information on the environmental implications of the Budget is contained in the Financial Statement and Budget Report—the "Red Book"—and in further press notices issued on Budget day.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those proposals in the Budget which may lead to (a) a reduction and (b) an increase in carbon dioxide emissions in the United Kingdom; if he will estimate by how much carbon dioxide emissions will change in each case; and if he will make a statement. [8636]

Dawn Primarolo: It is estimated that the increase in the commitment to increase road fuel duties from an average of at least 5 per cent. a year in real terms to 6 per cent., will—if maintained for the life of this Parliament—produce additional savings, by the year 2010, of around 2½ million tonnes carbon annually; the reduction in VAT on domestic fuel and power will increase emissions in 2010 by around 0.24 million tonnes carbon; the cut in the gas levy will have a minimal effect.

Strip Searches

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria are used by Customs and Excise officers to determine reasonable grounds for suspicion prior to strip searching; and if there is a code of practice by which officers can be held accountable. [8524]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs and Excise follow the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Code of Practice on intimate and strip searches.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of people strip searched in the custody of Customs and Excise officers (a) were not charged with any offence and (b) were not subsequently convicted of any offence, in each of the last three years. [8522]

Dawn Primarolo: Information in the form requested is not readily available.

Environmental Taxation

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set up a green tax commission to advise him on the subject of environmental taxation. [8346]

Dawn Primarolo: The statement of intent on environmental taxation, issued at the time of the Budget, said that "the Government will explore the scope for using the tax system to deliver environmental objectives". In taking this forward the Government will consult on potential environmental taxes on a case by case basis, for example as it is now proposing to do on measures to reduce water pollution. The Government has no present plans to establish a Green Tax Commission.

Advance Corporation Tax

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations took place between his Department and the pensions industry prior to changes to advance corporation tax in the Budget. [7648]

Dawn Primarolo: None, as it would not have been appropriate to do so at that stage as indications to this possibility would have been market sensitive.

Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the meetings involving discussion of the Budget attended by the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe; and what (a) papers and (b) correspondence were circulated to him on the Budget prior to the Budget statement. [7426]

Mr. Gordon Brown: Lord Simon took no formal part in the pre-Budget decision process and attended no formal Budget meetings. No Budget correspondence was circulated to him.

Local Authority Pension Funds

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representatations he has received from local authorities about the removal of dividend tax credits from their pension funds. [8137]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 11 July 1997]: We have received some representations from local authorities on this point.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect of local authority-funded pension schemes of the removal of dividend tax credits. [8136]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 11 July 1997]: The extent to which the abolition of payable tax credits will affect contributions to the local government pension schemes will depend on the overall judgment made by schemes' actuaries when undertaking the next actuarial valuation.

Gas Levy

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the estimated savings per week resulting from the abolition of the gas levy for (a) the average household, (b) those in the lowest decile of income distribution, (c) those in the highest decile of income distribution and (d) old age pensioners. [8652]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated average savings from the proposed reduction of the gas levy to zero from April 1998 are given in the following table.

Household type	Saving (£ per week)	As a percentage of net income
Average household	0.10	0.03
Households in the lowest income decile	0.10	0.09
Households in the highest income decile	0.15	0.02
Pensioners	0.10	0.05

Figures for pounds per week gain are rounded to the nearest 5p. Household incomes are adjusted for differences in composition before allocating households to deciles of net income.

Tax Evasion (Construction Industry)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the annual loss of revenue caused by tax and national insurance evasion in the construction industry; what plans he has to reduce that evasion; and what additional resources he will deploy for that purpose. [8686]

Dawn Primarolo: There is no official estimate of the loss of revenue caused by evasion in the construction industry, or any means of arriving at a reliable estimate. Legislation contained in the 1995 and 1996 Finance Acts will greatly reduce the opportunities for evasion by bringing considerably more subcontractors within the scheme for deductions on account and tax and national insurance contributions and by requiring them to carry registration cards. A new computer system is being developed to support the scheme. Additional resources have also recently been made available to help to enforce compliance within the construction industry.

Trusts

Mr. Faber: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to review the tax treatment of income arising out of discretionary and accumulation trusts. [8733]

Dawn Primarolo: The tax treatment of all income is kept under review.

Charities

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration is being given to the interests of small high street businesses in relation to the current review of the tax status of charities. [8478]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The review of charity taxation invites representations on all aspects of the taxation of charities.

Pensions

Mr. Gillan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the financial impact of the Budget measures on pensions in the self-employed sector. [8471]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The Budget promotes economic stability and encourages long-term and high quality investment. This is good for the UK economy including the self-employed and the pension funds through which they invest for their retirement.

Medical Insurance (Tax Relief)

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people receiving tax relief for private medical insurance who will terminate their current policies as a result of the Budget measures to terminate such tax relief. [8701]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 July 1997]: There is no reason for anyone to terminate a policy which was current at the time of the Budget, because tax relief continues to be given on eligible policies until they fall due for renewal.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what percentage of employees, in each payband, in the quangos for which his Department is responsible, are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [8935]

Mrs. Liddell: The advisory bodies and tribunals for which the Chancellor of the Exchequer is responsible do not employ any staff of their own.

Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz : To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil servants there are on each payband in his Department. [8936]

Mrs. Liddell: The number of civil servants working the Treasury by payband is:

Pay band	Number
£7,400–£14,121	87
£11,000–£17,973	224
£14,000–£23,046	142
£19,000–£33,655	225
£28,000–£50,000	164
£32,054–£50,430	18
£38,000–£67,200	48
£55,900–£90,000	19
£67,000–£106,900	2
Total	929

Parliamentary Groups

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria his Department applies in awarding grants to all-party Parliamentary groups. [8798]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 16 July 1997]: The level of grants to Parliamentary bodies is assessed annually in accordance with their Financial Memoranda, in the light of submissions from them as to the level of funding which they require. Their expenditure in previous years and the level of any reserves available to them are also taken into account.

The current level of grants is as follows:

Grant in aid 1997–98

Inter Parliamentary Union	834,899
British Irish Inter Parliamentary Union	149,601
Commonwealth Parliamentary Association	88,750
British American Parliamentary Association	70,170

The level of future grants will be set in the light of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reason his Department makes an annual grant to the British-American Parliamentary group. [8797]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 16 July 1997]: Grant in aid is issued to the British-American Parliamentary group so that it can foster better relations between Members of Parliament and parliamentarians in the United States. As with all Government spending, this grant will be examined as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review which I announced to the House on 11 June.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what arrangements his Department has for monitoring the use of the annual grant it makes to the British-American Parliamentary group; and if he will make a statement. [8796]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 16 July 1997]: Expenditure by the British American Parliamentary group is governed by its financial memorandum. Its level of grant is monitored in accordance with the Treasury's usual arrangements for the in year control of expenditure. As with all Government spending, the grant will be examined as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review which I announced to the House on 11 June.

Press Releases

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department spends on biking press releases to (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals or groups, each time his Department issues a press release; how many such press releases were issued by his Department (i) in the period 1 May to 1 July and (ii) in the period 1 January to 1 March; and if he will review his Department's use of couriers to deliver press releases and investigate the possibility of using fax or e-mail. [8812]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 17 July 1997]: The Treasury uses various distribution methods for its press releases including fax, postal deliveries, and online databases. The Treasury does not bike press releases to Members of Parliament or individual groups. Press releases are distributed by post to hon. Members and other individual groups on request. Press releases are also issued to the Parliamentary Online Information Service which can be accessed by Members. Treasury news releases are widely accessed via our World Wide Web site on the Internet.

The Treasury issued 34 press releases in the period from 1 May to 1 July 1997 and 22 press releases from 1 January to 1 July. As part of our distribution mechanism, the Central Office of Information send press releases to media organisations on our behalf to ensure that they receive releases promptly. The cost of biking releases to COI is £5.95 (excluding VAT). It is not possible for our service suppliers to provide a separate breakdown of the cost of delivering releases to the media. However, the Treasury reviews these services regularly to ensure that the most cost effective delivery mechanisms are used at all times.

CABINET OFFICE

Millennium Experience

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will list the cost overruns to date in the contracts for site clearance and preparation for the Millennium Experience. [6441]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

There have been no cost overruns to date on the contracts placed by English Partnerships for site clearance and infrastructure works for the Millennium Experience.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Judicial Reviews

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many decisions by his Department were challenged by way of judicial review in each Parliamentary session since 1994–95; and if he will list in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld, (b) the court found for the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgment and (d) the Department appealed successfully against the judicial review decision. [7834]

Angela Eagle: Figures are available for the former Department of Transport for the calendar years 1995 and 1996, and for 1997 so far, as follows:

Year	Total	Department's decision upheld by the court	Court found for the applicant	Department submitted to the judgment	Department appealed against the decision	Withdrawn	Pending
1995	9	6	0	0	0	2	1
1997	5	0	0	1	0	1	3

In the past, it was not considered necessary for this sort of information to be held by the Department of the Environment and the information is not held in a form which would enable this Question to be answered except at disproportionate cost. I have asked officials to ensure that, in future, information of this sort will be kept for the whole of the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Soundproofing

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the building regulations in order to improve soundproofing; and if he will make a statement. [8344]

Mr. Raynsford: Each part of the Building Regulations is kept under review and revised when the need is identified and adequate technical solutions are available. The Building Regulations Advisory Committee has advised the Department that there is a need to revise and strengthen Part E—Resistance to the passage of sound, and my officials have begun a review of the options available. Any changes made will draw on the results of research when this is completed.

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the policy of his Department on the timely payment of debts; and what is his Department's record on the payment of debts in the current financial year. [9531]

Angela Eagle: All departments are required to pay all their bills within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of the goods or service or a valid invoice, whichever is later, where no such terms exist. Information on payment performance for the current financial year could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Government will publish a league table of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the autumn.

Offham Marshes

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the protection afforded to the site of special scientific interest at Offham Marshes, near Lewes. [9519]

Angela Eagle: Under the provisions of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 SSSIs are protected from damaging operations by requiring owners and occupiers to notify English Nature if they wish to carry out any listed operation that might damage the special interest of the site. Notification allows for a period of negotiations. In respect of Offham Marshes there is a management agreement in place which protects the special interest for which the site was notified.

Rochfort Healthcare

Mr. Cawsey: To ask Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he will take on the planning application in Roxby from Rochfort Healthcare approved by North Lincolnshire Council (96/2067). [9594]

Mr. Raynsford: The local planning authority, North Lincolnshire UA, granted planning permission for this development on 30 May 1997. Once planning permission has been granted, the Secretary of State has no power to call in the associated application.

Cyclists

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the relevant responsibilities, in respect of the interests of cyclists, of (a) the Rail Regulator and (b) the Franchising Director. [9099]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Franchising Director's Objectives, Instructions and Guidance require him to take into account all relevant Government policies, including the Government's support for the aims of the National Cycling Strategy. The Franchising Director has included in all franchise agreements a provision requiring facilities to be made available, as far as practicable, for the carriage of cycles on trains.

The Rail Regulator has no specific responsibilities in relation to the interests of cyclist. However, he has a general duty to protect the interests of railway users and to promote the use of the railway network.

Oil Tanker Traffic

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures the Government are undertaking to protect the Atlantic Frontier region from the effects of increased oil tanker traffic following Lord Donaldson's recommendations of 1993. [8987]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government is committed to protecting all of the UK coastline and all UK waters from the harmful effects of shipping. We have introduced several measures which go beyond the recommendations of Lord Donaldson's Inquiry. We are pressing for the designation of all waters around the UK as a special area for discharges of oil from ships. This will prohibit all discharges from oil tankers. We will shortly increase the maximum fine which magistrates may impose for illegal discharges of oil five-fold to £250,000. Several internationally agreed routeing and reporting measures have been introduced to enhance the safety of navigation around the UK coast. The effectiveness and scope of these measures are kept under review.

Salisbury Bypass

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what conclusions he has reached following his accelerated review of the proposed Salisbury bypass and associated roadworks in the Wessex Link design, build, finance and operate project; and if he will make a statement. [9309]

Ms Glenda Jackson: An announcement on the accelerated review will be made shortly.

A40

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends that work will commence on lane separation projects on the London section of the A40. [9326]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Schemes to separate the main and side roads at the junctions on the London section of the A40 are included in the A40 Western Approach DBFO project. This is one of the projects in the Accelerated Roads Review. An announcement on this will be made shortly.

Written Answers to Questions

HOME DEPARTMENT

Young Offenders

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his Department's plans to introduce a fast-track approach to bringing young offenders to court. [7526]

Mr. Michael: The Government are committed to halving the time from arrest to sentence for persistent young offenders and tackling delays throughout the youth justice system. We are taking immediate action to speed up proceedings against young offenders. My right hon. and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor has already written to the chairman of every youth panel in magistrates courts throughout England and Wales encouraging them to deal swiftly and effectively with persistent young offenders and to minimise the granting of adjournments. We intend to follow this up with good practice guidance to all relevant agencies. The Crime and Disorder Bill will also include reforms to the youth justice system designed to ensure that young offenders are dealt with more speedily.

European Convention on Human Rights

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms he plans to establish for consultation on the incorporation of the European convention on human rights into (a) English and Welsh law, (b) Scots law and (c) Northern Irish law. [7527]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We published a consultation document on incorporation—"Bringing Rights Home"—in December 1996. We are now developing proposals for legislation in the light of the responses to that document and further discussions we have had since then. We will announce our conclusions in a White Paper later this year and are happy to consider any representations made in response to it.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what date he intends to have the European convention on human rights introduced into United Kingdom law. [7529]

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Government's proposals to incorporate the European convention on human rights into domestic law. [7537]

Mr. O'Brien: We will introduce a Bill for this purpose in this Session of Parliament.

Coroners' Decisions

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the mechanisms for appeals against coroners' decisions; and if he will make a statement. [7535]

Mr. George Howarth: Concerns have been expressed at the need to resort to the High Court for any review of a coroner's decision. This is one of a number of matters that we keep under review, but we have no present plans to change the legislation.

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the policy of his Department on the timely payment of debts; and what is his Department's record on the payment of debts in the current financial year. [9529]

Mr. Straw: All Departments are required to pay their bills within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of goods or service or a valid invoice where no such terms exist, whichever is the later. Information on payment performance for the current financial year is not immediately available, but I shall write to the hon. Member with the information as soon as possible. The Government will publish a league table of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the autumn.

Alcohol

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to restrict the advertising and promotion of alcohol; [9216]

(2) what plans he has to prevent alcohol abuse among young people. [9217]

Mr. George Howarth: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Selby (Mr. Grogan) on 16 July, Official Report, column 173, and to the letter I sent to all hon. Members on 17 July.

Firearms

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons section 7 of form A for use when surrendering items covered by the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997 requires the person surrendering an item to agree to accept any payment rather than the sum specified in the compensation terms. [9670]

Mr. Michael: Payments will be made only in accordance with the terms of the compensation scheme as approved by Parliament. Valid claims under options A or B will result in the payments agreed in the scheme. The claim form asks claimants to declare that they will

"accept any payment made in relation to any items claimed for under Options A or B as a settlement of" their

"claim in relation to those items".

With a claim under these options, the claimant knows exactly the payment on offer. Signature of the declaration enables the firearms compensation section to pay claims immediately—at the time of acknowledgement—rather than having to send a further letter before payment can be agreed.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what will be done with items surrendered under the terms of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997 prior to the completion of the action being taken by owners in the European Court of Justice. [9668]

Mr. Michael: With the exception of the items that are retained for police training purposes or acquired for public display in museums, all surrendered items will be destroyed. We are satisfied that the compensation scheme is in line with our obligations under European law and the disposal of surrendered items will proceed as described.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if late payment of compensation under the terms of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997 will attract interest. [9669]

Mr. Michael: Payments will be made under the published terms of the scheme. There is no provision to include interest as part of these payments, but payments will be made as swiftly as possible.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what paperwork a handgun owner is required to complete when handing in to the police any item required to be surrendered under the terms of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997. [9671]

Mr. Michael: When making a claim for a handgun or accessories, applicants must complete and submit a claim form provided by their police force. Those submitting a claim under option C must attach documentary evidence as to the value of their items. Claimants must also produce their firearm certificate, temporary permit or certificate of registration as a firearms dealer and dealer's record of transactions, as appropriate. It will also be necessary to produce evidence of lawful ownership of the items as at 16 October 1996, as specified in the compensation scheme itself.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who will be the legal owner of handguns handed in to the police under the terms of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997. [9667]

Mr. Michael: Items surrendered under the terms of the compensation and ex gratia schemes will become the property of the Secretary of State.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will be tabling the draft compensation order for .22 calibre pistols and equipment. [9100]

Mr. Michael: Under the terms of clause 2 of the Firearms (Amendment) Bill there is no requirement for details of the compensation arrangements for small-calibre pistols and ancillary equipment to be tabled. Small-calibre pistol owners have already received details of the ex gratia scheme. As I informed the House during the debates on 9 June, copies of the scheme had been placed in the Library a few days beforehand. The scheme sets out the terms of payment for pistols and equipment that are surrendered voluntarily. It is intended that this ex gratia scheme will become the formal compensation scheme following the passing of the Bill. This, too, was explained fully to the House on 9 June.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of employees, in each pay band, in the quangos for which his Department is responsible, are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [8950]

Mr. Straw: From the available information, the breakdown of employees of Asian and Afro-Caribbean origin employed in the Home Office non-departmental public bodies is as follows:

Senior grades: 20 per cent.—Asian[1];—15 per cent.—Afro-Caribbean[2]

Executive grades: 29—11 per cent.—Asian; 46—18 per cent.—Afro-Caribbean

Administration and Support grades: 34—12 per cent.—Asian; 58—21 per cent.—Afro-Caribbean

[1]Figure five or fewer.

[2]These figures refer only to the Commission for Racial Equality as this is the only NDPB that currently employs ethnic minorities in senior grades.

Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many civil servants there are on each pay band in his Department. [8951]

Mr. Straw: The Home Office has not yet adopted a pay band system. The number of serving civil servants[1] managed by the Home Office by grade equivalents is set out in the table. Although there is not as yet an agreed equivalency structure for all Prison Service grades, the following table is based on the current understanding.

Grade equivalency	Home Office excluding Prison Service)	Prison Service	Total
None	[2]28	[3]88	116
Administrative Assistants	1,949	6,085	8,034
Administrative Officers	2,573	24,511	27,084
Executive Officers	3,783	3,658	7,441
Higher Executive Officers	1,522	1,121	2,643
Senior Executive Officers	608	896	1,504
Grade 7s	442	381	823
Grade 6s	85	254	339
Non-Senior Civil Service Grades 2 to 5	[4]17	[5]56	73
Senior Civil Service	86	43	129
Total	11,109	37,093	48,202

[1] For the Home Office (non-Prison-Service), "serving civil servants" refers to permanent non-industrial staff currently paid by the Home Office. It does not include staff on loan or secondment to other Government Departments or external bodies where those bodies pay. For the Prison Service, the figures include casuals. The Home Office (non-Prison Service) figures are those for 6 July 1997. The Prison Service figures are those for 30 June 1997.

[2] Students on attachment to the Home Office and some other grades have no agreed grade equivalency.

[3] Currently no grade has been provided.

[4] Grades which were held to be equivalent to the old grades 2 to 4 but which have not been included in the senior civil service. These grades include HM inspectors.

[5] Mainly comprising senior health care staff.

Asylum Seekers

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 30 June, Official Report, column 11, how many in-country asylum applicants were detained under Immigration Act powers for one night or longer in (a) 1995 and (b) 1996. [8926]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that reliable information on the number of in-country asylum applicants placed in detention for one night or longer could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Crime (Sentences) Act 1997

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to implement section 20 of the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997. [9310]

Mr. Michael: We will make an announcement shortly about the implementation of provisions of the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997 as well as a wider package of measures reflecting our approach to sentencing.

Fox Deaths

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of foxes killed per year (a) in total, (b) by shooting, (c) by hunting with hounds, (d) by road accidents and (e) other causes. [8577]

Mr. George Howarth: We have made no such estimate and the information requested could not be determined except at disproportionate cost. Various estimates have been provided by organisations that support or oppose fox hunting.

It will be for Parliament to decide how any further detailed work—such as an estimate of this kind—should be taken forward.

Stationery

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spent on stationery provision in respect of paper items in each of the last five years. [8867]

Mr. Straw: This information is not separately recorded in the Home Office accounting system, but details provided by our two main suppliers of general stationery indicate that approximately £600,000, excluding value added tax, was spent on paper items in the calendar year 1996.

Additional, but smaller, orders would have been placed with various other suppliers, but details of these and information about previous years are not available except at disproportionate cost.

Rape

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review (a) the law of consent regarding rape and (b) the use of the victim's sexual history in rape trials. [8801]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 16 July 1997]: We are very concerned to ensure that the law on rape is effective in punishing and deterring crime and fair to victims. We have in the past laid down amendments aimed at reforming the law in this area and this remains our commitment. We have a number of competing priorities in this parliamentary Session and will need to look carefully as to when we could deal with this issue.

The law on consent in respect of rape, or the use of the sexual history of victims, is provided for in the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1976. Under that Act, no question may be asked about, or evidence adduced of, the complainant's previous sexual history with anybody except the defendant without the leave of the trial judge. A judge should grant leave only if he is satisfied that it would be unfair to the defendant to refuse to do so.

We will continue to examine how the law is applied. A Home Office research study into the process of rape cases is seeking to identify what factors influence whether a recorded rape leads to a conviction. Among the factors under examination are the use of the victim's sexual history in court and the importance of corroborative evidence where consent is disputed.

Hunting with Hounds

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 10 July, Official Report, column 523, for what reasons his Department is unable to calculate the employment generated by hunting with hounds. [8702]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 15 July 1997]: Such information is not currently held centrally and could not be obtained except at disproportionate cost. Various estimates have been provided by organisations supporting or arguing against hunting with hounds. However, it will be for Parliament to determine how to take forward any further detailed work on the likely effects of a decision to ban hunting with hounds.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Devolution Referendums

Ms Hodge: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what will be the role of civil servants in the referendum campaigns on devolution. [10247]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Government have today issued guidance to civil servants on their role and conduct during the devolution referendum campaigns. The guidance provides a generic set of principles which individual Departments can incorporate into guidance tailored to their particular needs and situations. It stresses that civil servants should conduct themselves in accordance with the civil service code, and is based on the need to maintain the political impartiality of the civil service and to ensure that public resources are not used for party political purposes. Copies of the guidance have been placed in the Libraries of the House, and are also available from the Vote Office.

Civil Service Report

Ms Hodge: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to publish the second annual "Civil Service Fast Stream Recruitment" report. [10246]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The annual "Civil Service Fast Stream Recruitment" report was placed in the Libraries of the House earlier today. It covers the year to 31 March 1997, reporting the results of fast stream competitions completed during that period and action undertaken for future competitions.

The report shows that the civil service continues to attract a strong field of applicants for both generalist and specialist schemes. The diversity of sources from which recruits are drawn continues to grow, with successful candidates from more than 60 different higher educational institutions. Good progress has also been made towards the goal of increasing the proportion of recruits to the generalist scheme who have scientific degree backgrounds.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many and what percentage of employees in the Government Car and Despatch Agency are (i) of Asian origin and (ii) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [8930]

Dr. David Clark: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated under the terms of the framework document to the Government Car and Despatch Agency. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. Nick Matheson, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Nick Matheson to Mr. Keith Vaz, dated July 1997:

I have been asked by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to reply to your Parliamentary Question on the number and percentage of employees in the Government Car and Despatch Agency who are of Asian or Afro-Caribbean origin.

Our records show that the Agency currently employs 2 people of Asian origin (0.78 per cent. of the work force) and 3 people of Afro-Caribbean origin (1.18 per cent. of the work force).

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many and what percentage of civil servants in each of grades one to five in his Department are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [9569]

Dr. Clark: No employee in these grades in my Department has registered his or her origin as being Asian or Afro-Caribbean.

Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many civil servants there are on each pay band in his Department. [8942]

Dr. David Clark: This answer covers the Cabinet Office—Office of Public Service—and its executive agencies. Staff below the senior civil service are employed by grade and are shown as such. The figures at 1 July are as follows:

	Number
Office of Public Service (OPS)
SCS	39
Grades 6 and 7	79
Senior Executive Officer (SEO) and equivalent	23
Higher Executive Officer (HEO) and equivalent	77
Executive Officer (EO) and equivalent	94
Administrative Officer (AO) and equivalent	88
Administrative Assistant (AA) and equivalent	34
Executive Agencies (Total)
SCS	11
Grades 6 and 7	168
SEO and equivalent	135
HEO and equivalent	136
EO and equivalent	212
AO and equivalent	251
AA and equivalent	82
Industrial staff	601

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what guidelines exist to ensure that civil servants cannot work on a party political basis. [9071]

Dr. Clark: Civil servants are under a duty, laid down in the civil service code, to conduct themselves with integrity, impartiality and honesty, and in such a way as to deserve and retain the confidence of Ministers and to be able to establish the same relationship with those whom they may be required to serve in some future Administration. Ministers are also under a duty not to use public resources for party political purposes, to uphold the political impartiality of the civil service, and not to ask civil servants to act in a way that would conflict with the civil service code. In their private lives, civil servants must comply with restrictions on their political activities as set out in the civil service code and the civil service management code.

CABINET OFFICE

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what research has been carried out into the number of visitors likely to attend the millennium experience. [6466]

Mr. Mandelson: Consultants to the Millennium Commission and the New Millennium Experience Company Ltd. have produced a broad range of estimates of visitor attendance. The limit on capacity is 17.7 million visits, a National Opinion Polls survey in December 1996 predicted 14 million visits by United Kingdom residents and the target in the current business plan is 12 million.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how much money from private sector sponsorship has been raised for the millennium exhibition at Greenwich. [8028]

Mr. Mandelson: This information is currently commercially confidential. The New Millennium Experience Company Ltd. will publish a full account in due course.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what contingency plans exist for the millennium experience budget in the event that ticket sales fail to reach £135 million. [6906]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 7 July 1997]: As already announced, we are extending the life of the Millennium Commission to enable it to meet its existing commitments to the millennium experience. Should these commitments unavoidably increase in the future, we will take further steps to ensure—through the lottery—that the commission is able to meet them. But it is our firm resolve that such action should not prove necessary; the Millennium Commission shares this resolve.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Class Sizes

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of (a) the average class size in schools in Warrington, North and (b) the number of primary school children in Warrington, North being taught in classes of more than 30 pupils. [9211]

Mr. Byers: For maintained primary schools in the Warrington, North parliamentary constituency in January 1997, the provisional estimates of the average class size and the number of pupils in classes of 31 or more pupils taught by one teacher were 27.9 and 3,822 respectively.

Jobcentres

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the Government's response to the second report of the Education and Employment Committee "Security of Staff in Jobcentres", HC 149, Session 1996–97. [10248]

Mr. Andrew Smith: A Command Paper outlining the Government's response has been published today and copies have been placed in the Library.

Welfare to Work

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects to announce the pilot areas for welfare to work. [9877]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Secretary of State will announce the pathfinder areas for the new deal for 18 to 24-year-olds shortly.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if public sector bodies will be eligible for the wages subsidy element of his Department's welfare-to-work proposals. [9817]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The success of the new deal will depend on effective partnerships in which all sections of local communities, including the private, public and voluntary sectors, play a full and relevant part. The precise role of the public sector in the employment option of the new deal is one of a number of issues we are currently considering. We will announce the outcome shortly.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will examine the potential role of horticultural training within the welfare-to-work programme; and if he will make a statement. [8486]

Mr. Howarth: In our new deal for young and long-term unemployed people, we intend to offer the widest possible range of opportunities for people to gain skills and improve their employability. Education and training will be guaranteed for all those participating in any of our four options of help. We want organisations from all sectors to join in our crusade to get people off benefits and into jobs, and I hope that the horticultural sector, like all others, will respond to this challenge. It is also possible under current arrangements to train to national vocational qualification level 2 and above in horticulture, under training for work.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people in the boroughs of Newham and Tower Hamlets will benefit from the welfare-to-work initiative. [9006]

Mr. Smith: It is not possible to give an accurate estimate of the number who will benefit from the new deal over the period of its implementation. All young people who are eligible, or who become so, will be offered opportunities to participate in a job, training or useful work experience.

School Exclusions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children with statements of special educational needs were permanently excluded from schools in England in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and what each figure was as a proportion of the total number of children permanently excluded from schools. [8725]

Ms Estelle Morris: Returns to the Department recorded a total of 1,287 pupils with statements of special educational needs as having been permanently excluded from mainstream schools during the 1994–95 school year; a further 477 pupils with statements were excluded from special schools. These figures represent 12.6 per cent. of the exclusions from mainstream schools and 96.8 per cent. of the exclusions from special schools.

Information on how many pupils with a statement of special educational needs were permanently excluded in 1993–94 is not available.

University for Industry

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the time scale for the establishment of the university for industry; what is the process for evaluation of bids; if it will be a single or multi-site operation; and which officials in his Department are charged with bringing it into effect. [9912]

Dr. Howells: I hope to make an announcement shortly about our plans for developing the university for industry. The process for taking forward the development work, including any possible bidding procedures, has yet to be determined. The university for industry is a virtual institution and will not have a headquarters in the conventional sense. It is likely to have a core administrative centre, but it is too early to say where this might be located. Responsibility for work on the university for industry rests with my individual learning division.

Education Standard Spending Assessment

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each of the last five years the standard spending assessment per pupil for education for each local education authority. [7366]

Mr. Byers: The information requested is contained in a number of tables, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

University Entrants

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils were accepted into each university from (a) private schools and (b) state schools for each year since 1970. [8772]

Dr. Howells: The information requested is not compiled centrally. Available information at the sector level is published in the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service annual report, the latest of which shows the following:

Previous educational establishment of home applicants accepted for 1996 entry in the UK

	HND/dipHE courses	Degree courses
Maintained (incl sixth form colleges)	6,791	112,440
Independent	742	29,264
Other[1]	9,286	69,658

Total	21,786	246,503

[1] Includes further education institutions, higher education institutions and other establishments.

Benefits (Postal Claimants)

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many claimants were postal claimants and what percentage this was of the whole in each standard region in each quarter since April 1995. [7764]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 10 July 1997]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 21 July 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about postal claimants. This is something that falls within the responsibility delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

The figures that you have requested are only available up to the second quarter of 1996. This information is provided in table 1. Subsequently, a one off account was made on 24 February 1997 and these results are shown below in table 2.

I hope this is helpful.

Mandatory Maintenance Grants

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals he has to end mandatory maintenance grants for students. [8648]

Dr. Howells: The national committee of inquiry into higher education has been considering possible future arrangements for student support and is due to report shortly. The Government will set out their detailed proposals in the light of the committee's recommendations.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Turkey

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Turkey on their policy on human rights. [9189]

Mr. Doug Henderson: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary met the new Turkish Foreign Minister at the NATO Madrid summit, on 8 July. They discussed a broad range of issues, including a long exchange on human rights. He was encouraged by Mr. Cem's recognition of the need for progress on this issue.

Law of the Sea Convention

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the United Kingdom will accede to the 1982 United Nations Convention on the law of the sea; and if he will make a statement. [10101]

Mr. Robin Cook: We have decided to accede to the convention later this month. The convention has many advantages for the United Kingdom as a maritime nation with worldwide trading and other interests. The convention includes important environmental provisions. Accession will enable the United Kingdom to play a leading role in the institutions established under the convention.

The United Kingdom's fishery limits will need to be redefined based on St. Kilda, since Rockall is not a valid base point for such limits under article 121(3) of the convention. An Order in Council will be made at the first opportunity. Thereafter we shall seek to agree a fisheries boundary with the Republic of Ireland.

Further legislation may be needed in due course if British industry wishes to mine the deep sea bed under the terms of the convention and the agreement on the implementation of part XI of the convention. We shall also ratify the latter agreement, which fully meets the objections to the original terms of part XI.

PRIME MINISTER

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 16 July, Official Report, columns 387–88, for what reasons the letter from the Governments of the United Kingdom, France and the United States of America in reply to that from the Secretary-General of the Arab League, the Organisation of African Unity and the UN Security Council was not in the Library at 4 pm on 16 July; when he requested the letter be forwarded to the House; and when the letter was dispatched. [9797]

The Prime Minister: A copy of the letter is available in the Library. The Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), has written to my hon. Friend.

Horse Racing

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will transfer overall governmental responsibility for issues connected with horse racing to the Department for Culture, Media and Sport; and if he will make a statement. [9842]

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so.

Political Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Prime Minister when he plans to reply to the question of 10 June from the hon. Member for Chichester on the appointment of political advisers not paid from public funds. [9601]

The Prime Minister: I will be in a position to reply to the hon. Member's previous question shortly.

DEFENCE

Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civil servants there are on each pay band in his Department. [8966]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Pay and Personnel Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. A. Rowe to Mr. Keith Vaz, dated 21 July 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence regarding an analysis of the number of MOD civil servants by paybands. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Pay & Personnel Agency.

The information requested is contained in the table attached to this letter which I hope you find helpful.

Pay band analysis of MOD industrial and non-industrial civil servants as at 1 April 1997[1]

Annual basic pay and allowances[2]	Number of civil servants
	Full Time	Part Time	Total
Pay bands
£0 to £10,000	27,541	3,908	31,449
£10,001 to £20,000	47,263	527	47,790
£20,001 to £30,000	16,449	39	16,488
£30,001 to £40,000	2,719	4	2,723
£40,001 to £50,000	650	0	650
£50,001 to £60,000	180	0	180
£60,001 to £70,000	33	0	33
£70,001 to £80,000	13	0	13
£80,001 to £90,000	9	0	9
£90,001 to £100,000	1	0	1
£100,000 upwards	1	0	1
Totals	94,859	4,478	99,337

[1] The figures exclude staff employed by the MOD trading fund organisations i.e. the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, the Meteorological Office and the Hydrographer.

[2] Pay has been banded on basic annual salaries and allowances (or their weekly equivalents) but excluding non-pensionable emoluments such as overtime earnings.

Navy Surface Vessels

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those surface vessels of the Royal Navy which will need replacing in the next five years; and what the estimated replacement costs are. [8182]

Mr. Spellar: Over the next five years, we plan to bring into service three type 23 frigates to replace two type 22 frigates, HMS Boxer and HMS Beaver, and one type 42 destroyer, HMS Birmingham. The value of the contract for these vessels is estimated at around £450 million. We will also bring into service two auxiliary oilers at the turn of the century. These vessels, for which the contract is worth around £200 million, will replace the aging O class fuel replenishment ships, RFA Olna and RFA Olwen. The two amphibious ships, HMS Fearless and HMS Intrepid, will be replaced early next century by HMS Albion and HMS Bulwark; the value of the contract for these vessels is estimated at £450 million.

We are considering how to replace the capabilities currently provided by the survey vessels HMS Herald, HMS Roebuck, HMS Bulldog and HMS Beagle and by two of our landing ships logistic, RFA Sir Geraint and RFA Sir Percivale.

HMY Britannia will be decommissioned at the end of this year. The Government are currently considering the requirement for a replacement royal yacht and will announce their decision in due course.

Defence Export Services Organisation

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Defence Export Services Organisation will be included in the strategic defence review. [6840]

Mr. Spellar: Consideration of the support to defence exports will form part of the strategic defence review.

Rapid Reaction Corps

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the British contribution to NATO's Allied Command Europe Rapid Reaction Corps is in cash terms in the current financial year; and what it is as a proportion of the defence budget. [8185]

Dr. Reid: The estimated cost of UK forces assigned to the ARRC, and the headquarters costs, is some £2 billion in the current financial year, or some one tenth of the defence budget. These forces include 1 and 3 Divisions, 24 Airmobile Brigade and support troops, which could contribute to a number of missions, under both NATO and non-NATO command, in support of the Government's security and defence policies.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the ethnic minorities have been appointed to the ranks of one, two, three or four-star officers in the (a) Royal Navy, (b) Royal Marines, (c) Army and (d) Royal Air Force since 1967. [7829]

Mr. Spellar: There is currently one one-star officer from the ethnic minorities in the RAF and none in the Royal Navy, Royal Marines or Army, although a one-star officer recently retired from the Army. This reflects the under-representation of the ethnic minorities in the armed forces, a position we are seeking to redress. A new management-led, self-classification survey of the ethnic origin of serving personnel was introduced in July 1996. Prior to this date records cannot be relied on.

Vacant Dwellings

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many dwellings owned by the Ministry of Defence in the Rosyth and Pitreavie area are currently vacant; of these how many have been vacant for (a) less than six months, (b) six to 12 months, (c) up to two years and (d) over two years; and what are his Department's plans for the disposal of these properties, and over what period. [8990]

Mr. Spellar: All but one of the 81 houses of the service families accommodation site at Pitreavie are empty, due to the closure in July 1996 of RAF Pitreavie Castle and RAF Turnhouse. Forty-three houses have been empty for 12 months and 37 for 18 months.

The Ministry of Defence originally planned to market the houses with the RAF station as a package. More recently, and because no prospective purchaser has been found, it has been decided to market the houses individually and sales will proceed as quickly as possible.

The Rosyth estate comprises 269 houses of which 147 are empty. One hundred and four have been empty for between one and two years and 43 have been empty for over two years. A total of 108 of the 147 are currently being advertised for sale in blocks or on an individual basis. These sales will take place as market demand permits.

Reserve Forces

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many payments he has made to employers following call-out or recall of reserves in the last year for which figures are available. [9417]

Mr. Spellar: Provisions for making payments to the employers of reservists were introduced under regulations which came into force on 1 April this year. Since then, 10 payments have been made to employers, and a further 12 are being processed. Up to 16 July, claims had been agreed for some £7,000. Further claims amounting to some £14,000 are being considered.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current strength of the reserve forces by type. [9418]

Mr. Spellar: The most recent complete figures are for 1 April 1997. These are as follows:

Strength of reserve forces at 1 April 1997

	Number
Royal Fleet Reserve	8,900
Royal Naval Reserve	2,700
Royal Marines Reserve	900
Army Reserve	190,100
Territorial Army	57,600
Air Force Reserve	45,300
Royal Auxiliary Air Force	1,400

Employment Advertisements

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how often since 1992 his Department has been responsible for employment advertisements which contained age restrictions on those who could apply. [9507]

Mr. Spellar: It is my Department's policy that age limits must not appear in external recruitment advertisements for civilian personnel. Exceptions to this rule are references to retirement ages or where a minimum recruitment age can be fully justified in terms of allowing the Department time to benefit from the expected training investment. The Department does not hold a central database of employment advertisements for civilians and it is therefore not possible, except at disproportionate cost and effort, to check whether any of these may have contained an age restriction other than the permitted exceptions.

As a general principle, the armed forces require recruits aged between 16 and 26 years, although in some trades older applicants are acceptable. Approximately 90 per cent. of advertising for recruiting individuals into the services make references to these age restrictions.

Land Mines

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the location of each of the 12 British anti-personnel land mines known still to be in Iraq following the Gulf conflict; what is their type and specification; what steps he is taking to ensure they are cleared; and what estimate he has made of the total number unaccounted for in Iraq. [9665]

Dr. Reid: According to currently available information, 12 C3A1 anti-personnel land mines, commonly known as Elsies, were used in Iraq and not subsequently recovered. Consistent with the provisions of international law current at the time, details of their precise locations were not recorded in view of the nature of the operations. Given the current circumstances in Iraq, it would not be practical to attempt now to clear them. My Department is trying urgently to establish whether any further anti-personnel land mines used by British forces in the Gulf conflict remain unaccounted for.

Bosnia (Road Traffic Accidents)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service men and women have been (a) killed and (b) seriously injured in road traffic accidents while serving in Bosnia since the end of hostilities following the Dayton accord. [9315]

Dr. Reid: Since the deployment of the implementation force on 20 December 1995, three British soldiers have died and six have been listed as seriously ill or very seriously ill as a result of road traffic accidents in Bosnia. With treacherous weather and poor roads, conditions are very challenging, demanding a high degree of skill from drivers. Those military personnel required to drive vehicles in Bosnia undertake pre-deployment driving training to prepare them for the conditions there. The dangers are taken very seriously and an active information campaign ensures that all personnel are reminded of the need to drive with great care.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Court Delays

30. Mr. Stunell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what measures he proposes to reduce delays in the criminal justice system; and if he will make a statement. [7530]

Mr. Hoon: The introduction of plea and directions hearings in the Crown court continues to reduce delays. In the magistrates courts, the Magistrates' Courts (Procedure) Bill introduced recently by the Lord Chancellor will speed up the progress of half a million minor motoring cases per year. Generally, the Government are considering the scope for reductions in delays in the criminal courts suggested by the review of delay in the criminal justice system, and there will be a further announcement in due course.

Magistrates Courts

35. Mr. Soames: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has for the reorganisation of magistrates courts in West Sussex. [7536]

Mr. Hoon: I have no such plans.

38. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on his Department's criteria relating to the merger of magistrates courts. [7540]

Mr. Hoon: Magistrates courts are locally managed by magistrates courts committees under the provisions of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997. Decisions concerning the future and number of magistrates courts in their area for the relevant MCCs to determine. A local authority that contributes financially may appeal to the Lord Chancellor against a proposed closure. The procedure for such appeals is set out in section 56 of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997. Accordingly, as with any appellate authority, each case is dealt with on its merits.

In the absence of an appeal, however, the Lord Chancellor plays no part in the process.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the number of magistrates courts in the county of Essex. [7533]

Mr. Hoon: There are 13 court houses and 13 petty sessional divisions in Essex. Decisions concerning the future and number of magistrates courts in the area are for the relevant magistrates courts committees to determine. Essex MCC has issued a consultation document to magistrates and to the paying authority to review the arrangement of petty sessional divisions in the county.

Private Finance Initiative (Magistrates Courts)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if the Essex magistrates courts committee will be permitted to specify when embarking on a PFI initiative the broad geographical location and number of court houses it requires from those providing the PFI initiative. [9876]

Mr. Hoon: It is an important principle of the PFI process that potential providers are given as much freedom as is possible to develop their ideas on how best to meet the operational requirements of the magistrates courts committee. The MCC will be able to indicate the broad geographical areas in which court houses should be located, but as far as is possible should refrain from specifying the number of court houses to be provided.

Consumer Protection

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 10 July, Official Report, column 535, on consumer protection rights, if he will list the members of the working group on rights and duties in respect of representative actions. [9703]

Mr. Hoon: Invitations to join the working group have been sent out. Copies of the list of members of the working group will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses as soon as acceptances to invitations have been received and the membership of the group finalised.

Civil Procedure Rules Committee

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what are the names, qualifications and relevant experience of the members of the Civil Procedure Rules Committee. [8579]

Mr. Hoon: The members of the Civil Procedure Rules Committee are:

Lord Woolf, Master of the Rolls, chairman.
Sir Richard Scott, Vice-Chancellor
Mr. Justice Anthony May Judge Richard Holman
District Judge Godfrey Gypps
Master Harman John Leslie
Henrietta Manners
David Foskett QC
Nicholas Chambers QC
Peter Howarth
Peter Watson
David Greene
Harriet Kimbell
Olivia Morrison-Lyons

Their relevant experience and professional qualifications are as follows:

Mr. Justice May

Appointed as a Judge of the Supreme Court, Queen's Bench Division in 1991. Presently judge in charge of the Queen's Bench list.

Judge Holman

Circuit judge. Appointed as an Assistant Recorder in 1998 and to the Circuit bench in 1994.

District Judge Gypps

Appointed as a District Judge in 1991.

Master Leslie

Master of the Supreme Court, Queen's Bench Division since 1996.

Nicholas Chambers QC

Barrister, called 1966. Mr. Chambers took silk in 1985. He sits as a Recorder and as a deputy High Court judge. He has a general common law practice with a commercial emphasis.

David Foskett QC

Barrister, called in 1972. Mr. Foskett took silk in 1991. His professional experience lies in the common law and commercial field, primarily in the Supreme Court. He sits as a Recorder.

Henrietta Manners

Barrister with particular experience of practice in county courts. Called in 1981. She has been a member of the County Court Rule Committee since 1991.

David Greene

Solicitor, admitted in 1980. Mr. Greene is the senior litigation partner at Messrs Edwin Coe, Solicitors, Lincoln's Inn.

Peter Watson

Solicitor, admitted in 1981. Mr. Watson is a partner with Messrs. Allen and Overy, specialising in High Court commercial and administrative law litigation.

Peter Haworth

Solicitor with particular experience of practice in county courts. Admitted 1975. Mr. Haworth is a litigation partner with Messrs Southern Cooper, Solicitors, of Burnley Lancashire. He was a part-time chairman of the Social Security Appeals Tribunal from 1986 to 1992. He sits as a deputy district judge.

Olivia Morrison-Lyons

Ms Morrison-Lyons was a manager of Camden CAB from 1982–93. She was a member of the Citizens Advice Bureaux Management Committee for 10 years.

Harriet Kimbell MBE

Mrs. Kimbell is a non-practising solicitor. She has been a member of the Council of the Consumers Association since 1988 and is now Deputy Chairman. She was a non-executive director of Which? Ltd. from 1990 to 1993 and in 1994–95. She is a principal lecturer at the College of Law where she teaches consumer law.

Family Law Act 1996

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list those organisations which are funded by his Department to (a) promote marriage, (b) carry out marriage counselling, (c) provide mediation services and (d) carry out research into the causes of marital breakdown, giving the total funding in each case and indicating which projects are pilot projects under the Family Law Act 1996. [8786]

Mr. Hoon: The tables show my Department's provision of core funding, pilot funding and research funding by way of grant in aid in the current financial year to marriage support and research organisations.

All projects for the provision of publicly funded mediation services under the Act are the responsibility of the Legal Aid Board. The overall funding commitment is not yet settled as schedules of payment are currently being negotiated with 37 mediation services and solicitors' practices.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the proposed commencement dates of each section of the Family Law Act 1996; and if he will make a statement. [8787]

Mr. Hoon: Sections 65 and 67 came into force on the passing of the Act.

On 21 March 1997, the following provisions came into force:

(a) part I (principles of Part II and III);

(b) section 22 (marriage support services);

(c) part III (legal aid for mediation in family matters);

(d) section 66(1) (minor and consequential amendments) so far as it relates to part II of schedule 8; and

(e) section 66(3) (repeals) so far as it relates to the entry in schedule 10 in respect of the Legal Aid Act 1988(b).

With the exception of section 60, part IV will commence on 1 October 1997.

There is not yet a proposed commencement date for the remainder of parts II, IV and V.

Medical Negligence

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many medical negligence cases have been (a) commenced and (b) finalised under the Birmingham county court medical negligence cases pilot scheme; and if he will make a statement. [8586]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Andrew Dismore, dated 21 July 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the medical negligence cases pilot scheme at Birmingham County Court.

Since the scheme began on 1 October 1996 one case has commenced and none has been finalised.

Divorce Settlements, Scotland

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment the Lord Chancellor's Advisory Committee on Ancillary Relief has made of the applicability to England and Wales of the system of divorce settlements, which currently operates in Scotland. [8790]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor's Advisory Group on Ancillary Relief discussed the extension of the Scottish system of financial provision on divorce to England and Wales at a meeting at the end of May 1996. At that meeting, the group concluded that it was not in a position to undertake a more comprehensive review. The Lord Chancellor's Department is assessing how further consideration can now most effectively be given to this matter.

HEALTH

Primary Care Legislation

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement setting out the timetable he will now be following to introduce the pilot schemes under primary care legislation. [6748]

Mr. Milburn: We propose to establish a range of pilots concerned with improving the direct provision of personal medical services from 1 April 1998. In order to give everyone equal opportunity to consider how local initiatives can be best taken forward, we have extended the closing date by which formal applications have to be with health authorities by one month. We also propose to establish a number of personal dental services pilots in October 1998 to test new ways of delivering primary care dentistry and addressing local oral health priorities.

The revised timetable for the implementation of the personal medical services pilots is given in the table.

	Closing date
Formal applications for salaried service employment and practice based contracts, which have been consulted on, to be with health authorities by	1 November 1997
Notification of approval from the Secretary of State	December 1997
Negotiations of local contracts	December–March 1998
Pilots for salaried service employment and practice based contracts to begin	1 April 1998

GP Fundholding

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department collates on the sums of money held at the year end by each fundholding practice. [7725]

Mr. Milburn: Fundholding practices' saving balances are published in their fund accounts. The Department draws on this information as necessary, but does not routinely collate it at practice level.

Benzodiazepines

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will carry out an inquiry into the number of people in England and Wales involuntarily addicted to benzodiazepines; and if he will make a statement. [8498]

Mr. Milburn: There are currently no plans to carry out such an inquiry. The principal focus of the Department's action in this area has been to try to prevent addiction occurring by warning general practitioners and other prescribers of the dangers of involuntary addiction to benzodiazepines. The Department funds a number of publications that are available to general practitioners, pharmacists and other health professionals—for instance, the British National Formulary and a Medicines Resource Centre monthly bulletin, which give information on the treatment of various conditions and the drugs involved in such treatment.

In 1994, the Department agreed to fund a helpline run by the Council for Involuntary Tranquilliser Addiction, a voluntary organisation which aims to support those who wish to withdraw from tranquillisers and sleeping tablets. CITA was provided with funding of £10,000 in 1994–95, £10,000 in 1995–96 and £10,000 in 1996–97. In addition, the Department continues to fund the mental health charity MIND, which operates local self-help groups for people dependent on tranquillisers.

Family Planning

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list each health authority's expenditure plans in respect of family planning for the current financial year, indicating the percentage difference from expenditure in the previous financial year. [8848]

Ms Jowell: Information on the detail of health authority expenditure plans is not collected centrally. Information on expenditure by trusts and directly managed units is available and figures for 1994–95 and 1995–96, the latest years for which data are available, have been placed in the Library.

Public Health Initiatives

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the public health initiatives planned by his Department (a) in Stoke-on-Trent, North and (b) nationally. [8877]

Ms Jowell: In Stoke-on-Trent, North, the health authority has established a locality approach to developing healthy communities through involving a wide range of statutory and local community organisations. The report of the director of public health this year will focus on "determinants of health". A wide range of public health initiatives is already under way in North Staffordshire, and many more have been identified as priorities by the health authority for 1997–98.

Key priorities include:

- Implementation of the coronary heart disease strategy—a priority for 1997–98 as identified in the Health Authority's health strategy and investment plan;
- Continuation of the Aspirin project, to reduce stroke and heart attacks, in primary care—which has already achieved 60 per cent. coverage of eligible practice populations in 1996–97;
- Strategy for healthy eating—December 1997;
- Review of existing initiatives aimed at helping people to stop/not take up smoking, and identifying action to meet any "gaps";
- Development and implementation of a stroke action plan to be based on GRIP kits—getting research into practice—to provide cost-effective care and to maximise clinical effectiveness, planned for autumn 1997;
- Strategy for promotion of physical exercise;
- Action plan to develop drug and alcohol services—review and agree action to co-ordinate use of HIV and substance misuse funds;
- Multi-agency action plan to promote sexual health, especially for young people;
- Multi-agency accident prevention steering group which is developing a strategy—autumn 1997.

Additional points include:

- The appointment of a healthy cities co-ordinator—a joint appointment between the health and local authority through their "healthy alliances" links—who will look at public health initiatives across the board;
- Single regeneration bid-funded initiatives—for instance, in 1997–98: community development worker for Biddulph, citizens advice bureau youth advice worker for Bentilee and Berryhill, urban villages community partnership based at Newcastle under Lyme.

Nationally, the Government will be taking forward the public health agenda across a broad front. I outlined the scope of our new health strategy "Our Healthier Nation" on 7 July; copies of my speech are available in the Library. In the autumn, we shall publish a Green Paper setting out the strategy in detail. Many Government policies will contribute to improving public health, such as welfare to work, education policies and the integrated transport strategy. The Department of Health is working closely with the other Departments involved, as it is in partnership with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on developing the food standards agency. In the autumn, we shall publish a White Paper on measures to reduce smoking and draft Bill to ban tobacco advertising. Healthy living centres and health action zones will also address public health issues.

Microbiological Research

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of the submissions made to him under the quinquennial review from the Microbiological Research Authority Board and the management of the Centre for Applied Microbiology and Research; and if he will make a statement. [9096]

Ms Jowell: The management of the Centre for Applied Microbiology and Research will send a copy of the final submission to the hon. Member when it is ready. This may take another week or so.

My announcement of the review of the centre mentioned that the views of the key organisations and individuals would be sought. Letters of consultation have now been sent out. A scientific team including expert external members will visit the centre at the end of this month to assess the research work commissioned by the Department at the centre. The main research funding bodies have also been invited to comment. A number of management consultancy organisations have submitted tenders for the work of assessing options for the future of the centre. Those tenders are currently being evaluated and consultants will be commissioned to begin work by the end of this month.

I will make a further statement when there are substantial findings to report, and will place copies of the summary of the review report in the Library in due course.

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in England in each year since 1990; and how many multiple births in each category were conceived as a result of (i) in vitro fertilisation, (ii) gamete intra-fallopian transfer and (iii) other forms of assisted conception. [8175]

Ms Jowell: The information is not available in the form requested. The number of multiple maternities in England for the period 1990 to 1996 is shown in table 1.

Details of pregnancies achieved and births in the UK for the same period as the result of in vitro fertilisation or donor insemination, including gamete intra-fallopian transfer, are shown in tables 2 to 5.

Chief Medical Officer (Stockport)

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people work for the chief medical officer in Stockport health authority; and what is the average figure for similar-sized health authorities. [8694]

Mr. Milburn: The director of public health in Stockport is supported by a team of three consultants in public health medicine, two trainees on rotation and three and a half—whole-time equivalent—secretarial-support staff. This team has developed an extensive network of links with, for example, NHS trusts, the local authority, other government agencies and voluntary organisations, which contributes to health promotion and activities and public health issues. There are no comparable figures available for other authorities.

Eyesight Tests

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many free domiciliary sight test visits there were in (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1994–95 and (d) 1995–96, broken down by health authority. [8828]

Mr. Milburn: The information is given in the table. It reveals marked variations between years for some authorities for which no explanation was provided. This suggests that some returns may not have been audited and some data for individual authorities may be subject to error.

Basildon and Thurrock General Hospitals NHS Trust

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 9 July, Official Report, column 504, what was the nature of the work carried out by Drivers Jonas in respect of Orsett hospital. [8979]

Mr. Milburn: Information about the exact nature of the work carried out by the chartered surveyors Drivers Jonas in respect of Orsett hospital is not held centrally. However, the recent executive letter EL(97)35 "Making Available Information about PFI Projects" gave notice and guidance to trust and health and authority chief executives on requests for information on their private finance initiative schemes.

Provided the information is not commercially sensitive and its release is consistent with the EL, the information should be obtainable from the chief executive of the trust. Copies of the EL (97)35 have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 9 July, Official Report, column 505, from whom the remuneration committee of the Basildon and Thurrock General Hospitals NHS trust board receives advice as to the appropriate pay, conditions and bonuses to be paid to its directors. [8980]

Mr. Milburn: Guidance on the role of the remuneration committee was issued to trust chief executives in national health service executive letter EL(94)40 on the codes of conduct and accountability. The NHS executive has also issued guidance (TEL(94)2 and TEL(95)1) to all NHS trusts on the principles and procedures to apply when considering severance payments to general and senior managers on short-term rolling contracts. Copies of all the guidance have been placed in the Library. Subject to these provisions, it is a matter for the remuneration committee to decide who it should take advice from.

Alcohol Abuse

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost of alcohol abuse to the United Kingdom economy. [9218]

Ms Jowell: The most recent academic study of which we are aware estimated the cost of sickness absence to industry in England and Wales in 1992 as a result of alcohol misuse at £1,059.2 million.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library copies of each of the PFI bids for NHS facilities as produced by each of the health care providers involved. [9873]

Mr. Milburn: The recent NHS executive letter EL(97)35 "Making Available Information about PFI Projects" gave notice and guidance to trust and health authority chief executives on requests for information on their PFI schemes. Copies of the letter have been placed in the Library.

Provided the information is not commercially sensitive and its release is consistent with the EL, the information should be obtainable from the chief executives of the trusts.

Insulin Pen Needles

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 12 June, Official Report, column 530, when he expects to have completed consideration of whether general practitioners should be allowed to prescribe insulin injection pen needles on the national health service. [9546]

Mr. Milburn: It is not possible to give an estimate at this stage in our consideration.

HIV-AIDS

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new HIV infections there have been in England and Wales among (a) intravenous drug-users, (b) heterosexuals and (c) homosexuals in the age groups (1) 16 to 25, (2) 26 to 35, (3) 36 to 45, (4) 46 to 55 and (5) over 55s by health authority (i) each year since 1985 and (ii) in total; if he will list the year-on-year change in each group in percentage terms; and if he will make a statement about the Government's targeting of HIV-AIDS prevention materials. [9222]

Ms Jowell: Tables showing diagnosed HIV infections reported to the public health laboratory service communicable disease surveillance centre, based on data to the end of June 1997, have been placed in the Library. Individuals often do not seek testing unless they believe themselves to be at risk or develop symptoms; hence reported HIV infections underestimate the true number of cases. In addition, these figures are subject to under-reporting.

Data are given by region because presenting data by health authorities may enable deductive disclosure about individuals in low-prevalence areas and health authorities boundaries have changed over time. Tables showing year on year percentage changes by probable exposure category, age group and region have been prepared.

National health promotion campaigns for HIV-AIDS are targeted in line with the UK Health Department's strategy, "HIV and AIDS Health Promotion: An Evolving Strategy", November 1995. This emphasised the need for better targeting of vulnerable groups as well as the need to inform the general population about the continuing potential risks from HIV. The strategy identified vulnerable groups as gay men—in particular, young gay men—bisexuals and other men who have sex with men, injecting drug users, men and women who travel to or have links with high prevalence countries, currently those in sub-Saharan Africa, and women partners of men in these groups.

In line with the strategy, main Department of Health contracts for national HIV-AIDS health promotion work are with:

(a) the Terrence Higgins Trust: to undertake through community-based groups, targeted HIV-AIDS health promotion work for gay and bisexual men in England.

(b) the Health Education Authority: to undertake health promotion work for the general population.

In addition, the Department is currently developing a national programme of HIV-AIDS health promotion work for sub-Saharan African communities living in England.

Guidance issued by the Department to health authorities on the use of ring-fenced HIV prevention funds stresses the need for locally targeted HIV prevention and health promotion programmes aimed at the groups identified in the evolving strategy.

The Government have encouraged the development of needle and syringe exchange schemes in order to reduce the harm caused by injecting drugs, in particular the risk of transmitting blood-born viruses. Guidance issued to health and local authorities in March 1997 asked commissioners to address the needs of injecting drug misusers as a priority, by ensuring that they have access to needle and syringe exchanges and appropriate treatment services.

Hospital Trust Mergers (West Sussex)

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to merge hospital trusts in West Sussex. [9600]

Mr. Milburn: No proposals for merger have come forward from hospital trusts in West Sussex.

Asthma

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes have occurred in the incidence of asthma in children over the past 20 years; what regional variations apply; and what assessment his Department has made of the causes of increases in the incidence of asthma. [9875]

Ms Jowell: The table shows the mean weekly incidence of new general practitioner episodes of asthma in children per 100,000 of the population in England for each year since 1977. The data are collected from individual practices, and are not collated on a regional basis. It is therefore not possible to provide a regional breakdown. The figures show a clear increase over three decades up to the early 1990s. Although increasing awareness of asthma may have contributed to part of this rise, it does appear likely that part is due to an actual growth in the prevalence of the disease. However, it is still not known what causes asthma or what accounts for this rise.

Nevertheless, there has been a decline in general practitioner episodes of asthma since 1993, suggesting that the previously rising incidence of asthma has abated. This may reflect more effective treatment and higher-quality medical care. The Department of Health remains committed to tackling the burden of asthma on those who suffer from it, and continues to fund research into its causes.

Male Fertility

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the estimated reduction in the male sperm count in the United Kingdom over the last 10 years; what research his Department has (a) evaluated and (b) commissioned into the factors causing change; and what international comparisons his Department has made. [9874]

Ms Jowell: Some of the recent research from the United Kingdom and other countries has suggested a decline in sperm count, but overall the results are inconsistent and there is no scientific consensus.

Data on semen quality are not collected routinely and arise principally from sources such as tests in infertility clinics or prospective research studies from disparate laboratories whose methods of analysis and reporting may be of doubtful consistency or comparability. This reflects a continuing problem of standardisation in semen analysis, which has not yet been resolved. The same difficulty applies to reports of substantial differences in quality and trends between countries and between areas within countries.

The Department does not currently fund research in this area. The main agency through which the Government have supported research in this area is the Medical Research Council. Recently, two projects have been funded. These are:

1. "Has male fertility been declining—a population survey of Time to Pregnancy" (Imperial College School of Medicine at St. Mary's). This was completed on 31 March 1997.

2. "Environmental oestrogens and the central pulse generator controlling reproduction: a novel approach to critical issue" (King's College, London). This is due to be completed at the end of February 1999.

The Department is planning a joint three or four-year programme of research, with the Health and Safety Executive and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. The programme will look at trends in male reproductive health and the possible influences of occupational or environmental exposure to chemicals.

Respite Care

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to vary levels of funding for respite care. [8910]

Mr. Boateng: No sums are specifically earmarked for respite care within the total community care funding that local authorities receive. Support for carers is an integral part of community care and authorities are expected to provide an appropriate range of respite and other support services. However, the precise level and type of services locally are a matter for individual authorities to determine in the light of local needs and priorities.

SCOTLAND

Procurators Fiscal

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, for each sheriff court area in Scotland, the number of cases reported by the police to the procurator fiscal over the most recent 12-month period indicating the number of cases (a) where no action was taken, (b) where prosecution took place and (c) where a conviction was achieved. [9003]

Mr. McLeish: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate has provided the following table listing the number of cases reported, the number of cases marked "no proceedings", the number of cases marked for an alternative to prosecution and the number of cases proceeding to prosecution in respect of each procurator fiscal office for the 12-month period to 31 May 1997.

Statistics about reports received by procurators fiscal are collected by reference to individual procurator fiscal office and not by reference to sheriff court area. The statistics on the cases reported to the procurator fiscal do not distinguish between those reported by the police and those reported by the many other agencies that report offences for consideration of proceedings. The procurator fiscal service does not collect statistics on the number of convictions achieved.

Homosexuals (Age of Consent)

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Crown Office's policy on prosecution for consensual homosexual acts involving males between the ages of 16 and 18 years. [9219]

Mr. McLeish: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate is responsible for the prosecution of crime in Scotland. He informs me that he considers that the public interest is not served by routinely prosecuting all persons who participate in private consensual homosexual acts, which are unlawful by reason of the fact that one or both are under 18 years.

The Lord Advocter had directed procurators fiscal to report to the Crown Office for Crown counsel's consideration cases of consensual homosexual acts in private where both the participants are over 16 years but one or both are under 18 years.

This is consistent with the approach taken by the Lord Advocate's predecessors in office since February 1994 when an identical direction was issued to procurators fiscal by the then Lord Advocate.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Vehicle Excise Duty (Disabled Drivers)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what reasons underlie (a) the entitlement of recipients of the higher rate mobility component of disability living allowance to exemption from vehicle excise duty and (b) the non-entitlement of people with mobility difficulties in receipt of attendance allowance to such exemption. [8829]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The basis for entitlement to exemption from vehicle excise duty for those in receipt of the higher rate mobility component of disability living allowance is severe mobility need which may require some form of private transport. Provision is focused on those disabled before the age of 65. However, those in receipt of attendance allowance are entitled to VED exemption under transitional protection arrangements if their application for exemption was approved before 13 October 1993.

Radioactive Materials (Transportation)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 14 July, Official Report, column 16, how many movements of radioactive material (a) have occurred through the channel tunnel since its opening and (b) have passed through each south coast port in each year since 1990. [9209]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department does not hold information of the kind requested.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 14 July, Official Report, column 15, on the transportation of radioactive materials, what estimate he has made of the proportion of the flights on which the radioactive material carried was (a) high level and (b) intermediate level. [9210]

Ms Jackson: It is estimated that less than 5 per cent. of such flights carry packages of radioactive material containing in excess of the quantities previously referred to. For transport purposes, the terms high level and intermediate level radioactive material are undefined.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions how many crashes have occurred involving road vehicles carrying radioactive material in the United Kingdom in each year since 1985. [9205]

Ms Jackson: The number of such crashes notified to the Department are:

	Number
1985	4
1986	1
1987	2
1988	5
1989	2
1990	0
1991	2
1992	1
1993	1
1994	1
1995	3
1996	1
1997[1]	0
Total	23

[1] To date.

In none of these crashes was there any loss of radioactive material from any package.

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many flights carrying mixed oxide fuel will pass from Carlisle airport over the Lancaster and Wyre constituency (a) from 1 July 1997 to 31 December 1997, (b) in 1998 and (c) in 1999. [9654]

Ms Jackson: British Nuclear Fuels informs me that none will.

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on safety in respect of the proposed increase in the number of mixed oxide fuel flights from Carlisle airport in 1998. [9656]

Ms Jackson: I am informed by British Nuclear Fuels that no increases are planned.

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many flights carrying mixed oxide fuel from Carlisle airport passed over the Lancaster and Wyre constituency (a) in 1996 and (b) from 1 January to 30 June 1997. [9655]

Ms Jackson: British Nuclear Fuels informs me that there was none.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each year since 1985 the incidents where (a) chemicals and (b) radioactive material have been lost overboard (i) in UK waters and (ii) elsewhere from UK-registered ships, giving for each instance the location, the chemicals or materials involved and the amounts subsequently recovered. [9207]

Ms Jackson: The information is not available in the form requested. However, the table gives a summary of major incidents since 1985 involving the loss of packages containing dangerous or harmful goods from ships operating in UK waters. This information has been provided by the Advisory Committee on the Protection of the Sea.

Name of ship	Date	Nature or incident	Area affected
Filia Sea	March 1987	Packages lost from general cargo ship and washed ashore	East Anglia
Ardlough	September 1988	Containers lost from sunken general cargo ship and washed ashore	Cumbria and Lancashire
Wessertal	October 1990	Tank containers lost from deck of ro-ro ferry	Southern North sea
Perintis	March 1989	Package containing pesticide lost from sunken general cargo ship	English channel
Fathulkhair	February 1990	Canister of potassium cyanide lost from deck of freighter and washed ashore	Kent and Sussex
Nordic Pride	May 1991	Deck cargo lost from ro-ro ferry and washed ashore, resulting in the evacuation of the local population	Norfolk
Tokio Express	February 1997	Containers lost from container ship and washed ashore.	Cornwall

Channel Tunnel (Safety)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the classes of material banned from passage through the channel tunnel for reasons of public safety. [9206]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Channel Tunnel Intergovernmental Commission, on the advice of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority, has approved a carriage list of dangerous goods allowed through the channel tunnel. Three classes of dangerous goods are excluded from the list: class 4.2—substances liable to spontaneous combustion; class 4.3—substances which in contact with water emit flammable gases; class 5.2—organic peroxides.

Minister for Roads

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on which occasions the Minister for Roads has met (a) Mr. Des Wilson of BAA and (b) other representatives of BAA, since her appointment. [9208]

Ms Glenda Jackson: None.

Thames Gateway

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to make an announcement on the Government's overall transport priorities for the Thames gateway area. [9946]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Our manifesto recognised the need for modern transport links to enhance accessibility and support regeneration within the Thames gateway. We are reviewing options and priorities and hope to report our conclusion later in the year.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the proposed high-tech bus link between Greenwich and Thamesmead. [9947]

Ms Jackson: None. I understand that London Transport has made a preliminary study of the Thamesmead-Greenwich area following a review of the potential for new forms of public transport in outer London. London Transport is working with local authorities to develop proposals.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will provide financial support for the proposed Thames gateway metro; [9911]

(2) what assessment he has made of the proposed new tunnelled rail crossing linking the North London line in the royal docks with the North Kent line at Woolwich Arsenal; and if he will make a statement; [9910]

(3) what assessment he has made of the regeneration potential of the proposed Thames gateway metro. [9945]

Ms Jackson: A study of the Woolwich rail tunnel, the potential for Thames gateway metro services and the regeneration benefits these may offer is being undertaken for my Department as part of a study of potential new east Thames river crossings. I expect this to be completed by the autumn. Consideration of these proposals will be made in the light of the study's findings and our fundamental review of transport policy. Regeneration benefits of the Thames gateway metro will be examined using the appraisal framework my Department is developing.

East London River Crossing

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what environmental assessment he has made of the proposed east London river crossing. [9948]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Revocation orders for the east London river crossing were published on 26 March. At the same time, an alignment was safeguarded for a multi-modal crossing between Beckton and Thamesmead, which is being promoted by London Docklands development corporation and Thamesmead Town Ltd. They have undertaken an initial appraisal of the new crossing's environmental impacts; further assessment is planned using an appraisal framework that is being developed by my Department.

Coach Safety

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to ensure that children are not carried in the United Kingdom on coaches that do not have seat belts fitted. [9793]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Children who are taken on organised trips in newer coaches in Britain already have to be provided with a seat belt. From 10 February next year, seat belts will also have to be provided for children in older coaches first used before 1 October 1988. Similar arrangements will apply in Northern Ireland from 1 September this year. Enforcement of these regulations is a matter for the police.

A564 Derby (Footbridge)

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the estimated cost to date of providing a footbridge, new vehicular access and associated works across and adjacent to the A564 Derby southern bypass to serve Tynefield court and mews, Etwell; and what is the budget for these works. [9147]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The estimated cost is £385,000—the same as the budget.

Trains (Disabled Persons)

Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which railway operating companies do not permit disabled people's trikes to be carried on their trains; and when each introduced that prohibition. [9466]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This information is not held by the Department. We understand, however, that a ban on the carriage of scooters and larger powered wheelchairs is applied by the majority of train operating companies. A similar ban was operated pre-privatisation by British Rail.

The Department's statutory advisers, the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee, has examined the ban on a number of occasions. It shares the industry's concerns about the stability and manoeuvrability of scooters and has supported the train operating companies' ban. The committee recognises that larger powered vehicles that are designed to give local outdoor mobility are simply too large to be accommodated on public transport.

The regulations we will be making under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 will ensure that wheelchairs constructed to international standard dimensions can be accommodated on new trains. In the meantime, we have been holding discussions with wheelchair manufacturers with the aim of establishing a marking protocol which would indicate to disabled people the suitability of manual and powered wheelchairs for use on public transport to help them make informed choices.

Port of London Authority

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what piloting experience on the River Thames the Chief Harbour Master of the Port of London authority possesses. [9293]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Chief Harbour Master of the Port of London authority is appointed by the board and his qualifications and experience are a matter for them. The Port of London Act 1968 requires that one member of the board appointed by the Secretary of State

"shall be a person with wide experience of navigation (including the command of sea-going ships, pilotage and navigational aids)".

This position is currently filled by a former deputy master and chairman of Trinity House.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the safety implications of reductions in the number of pilots in service in the Port of London authority. [9292]

Ms Jackson: I refer to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Gravesham (Mr. Pond), on 1 July, Official Report, column 102.

Railtrack

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Government plan to exercise the voting rights pertaining to their residual shareholding at the forthcoming annual general meeting of Railtrack. [8892]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 15 July 1997]: No. The Government hold only 0.8 per cent. of Railtrack's shares. Our most effective way of influencing the company is through improved regulation of the rail industry, on which we are currently reviewing the options.

Urban Trees

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the regions what representations he has had concerning the provision of water access zones for urban trees; and if he will make a statement. [8490]

Angela Eagle: My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment has received a letter from the Permaculture Association (Britain), which is concerned about the impact on urban trees of action to reduce the amount of drinking water lost through leakage.

Events over the past few summers have shown that water conservation is an issue that must be taken seriously. Against this background, average losses of nearly 30 per cent. through leakage from the mains system are intolerable. As part of the Government's 10-point plan for a better water industry, tough mandatory targets are to be put in place to secure a substantial reduction in leakage over the next five years.

Existing leakages may artificially increase the availability of water to trees in the immediate vicinity. However, not all trees in towns will be situated near leaking pipes and so be serviced in this way. In addition, as the naturally dry condition of recent years have demonstrated, most trees are able to adapt to changing conditions above and below ground and to adjust their water demand accordingly. Action taken to reduce leakage is, therefore, unlikely on its own to result in major losses of trees from our towns.

Construction Industry

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the members of staff seconded to the construction sponsorship directorate from the construction industry, indicating their employers; and if he will place in the Library a copy of their business plans for (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99. [8459]

Mr. Raynsford: There are two inward secondments from the construction industry to the construction sponsorship directorate.

Dr. Mark Mawhinney of Tarmac International Ltd. has been seconded to fill an administrative grade 7 post in the construction export promotion and materials sponsorship—CEPMS—division and heads a team of four people responsible for the promotion of export opportunities in Europe, the former Soviet Union and the Americas. The secondment began in June 1996 and will end in October this year. Activities include commissioning market information, organising seminars, arranging programmes for inward visitors, planning and briefing of ministerially led trade missions overseas and managing export-related research projects. Dr. Mawhinney's team also provides the secretariat for the export action group for building materials, which is an advisory non-departmental public body set up to boost export activity in the building materials sector.

Work Plan:

1. To plan and implement the branch's trade mission programme.

Action

Supervise the briefing for the 1997 trade missions and ensure that the accompanying companies receive maximum measurable benefit.

2. To build up a knowledge of the work of other Government Departments, specifically those with construction interests and to encourage further co-operation across Departments.

Action

Participate in cross-Department briefings on export issues and, in addition to routine work, aim to work jointly with other Departments on a new project by September 1997.

3. To assist exporters with awareness and generation of proposals for partners in technology—PIT—and sector challenge schemes and to manage robustly the assessment and implementation of nominated projects.

Action

Publicise the results of completed projects, actively manage projects, actively seek proposals for the programmes, co-ordinate assessment of proposals to ensure consistent, quality approval process, contribute to generation of proposals in 1997 PIT and sector challenge schemes.

4. To work on presentation or press opportunities allowing greater publicity for the export support activities of CEPMS division.

Action

To make presentations on 10 occasions at export promotion events by October 1997. To develop better links with the press and to produce one article which is published in the trade press by October 1997. To continue to use "Construction Monitor" to publicise activities and outputs.

5. To develop new ideas which will reflect changes in construction exports and allow greater effectiveness in export promotion and which will enhance the skills base of CEPMS staff.

Action

Promote training of staff to develop their knowledge of the industry and of the requirements for career development, conduct open door policy to encourage communication on all issues, involve staff in the management of the consultancies.

6. To understand and make full use of the Internet to tap information on markets and business opportunities.

Action

To produce a plan for a database by June 1997 and implement.

Dr. Les Parrott is seconded from the British Cement Association to work with the Department on a two days per week basis. His secondment is for one year and is due to end in August 1997. Dr. Parrott's remit is to produce a cross-sectoral analysis of the environmental issues relevant to the use of materials in all aspects of the construction process and to assist the directorate in the application of this information to the development of the construction research programme.

Work Plan:

1. To identify and prioritise cross-sectoral—concrete, steel, timber, masonry and insulation, for example—environmental issues relevant to construction materials and to analyse these with respect to the Department's policy concerns: climate change, resource depletion, waste, air quality, water and soil pollution.

2. To identify key current UK and international research initiatives relevant to environmental impacts of construction materials; to liaise with the environment business plan manager in the construction innovation and research management division to identify future departmental research needs.

3. To liaise with industry to identify opportunities for specific material sectors to take initiatives to minimise adverse environmental effects.

Environmental Task Force

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions to what extent the costs for non-governmental organisations taking part in the environmental task force will be reimbursed. [8643]

Angela Eagle: Non-governmental organisations that provide placements for the environmental task force will receive appropriate funding to manage, supervise and provide project materials for their placements.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what qualifications will be awarded to those taking part in the environmental task force. [8644]

Angela Eagle: We expect a wide range of educational and vocational qualifications to be available to placements on the environmental task force, reflecting the nature of the projects being undertaken.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are the criteria for projects undertaken by the environmental task force. [8675]

Angela Eagle: Suitable projects will be identified based on the quality of work offered, the opportunities for training and qualifications and environmental benefits.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions (Gas Levy)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate his Department has made of the impact the abolition of the gas levy will have on carbon dioxide emissions in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [8651]

Angela Eagle: The abolition of the gas levy will have a minimal effect on carbon dioxide emissions. My Department has estimated that it will result in an annual increase in emissions of about 0.04 million tonnes of carbon in 2000, equivalent to 0.02 per cent. of emissions. We estimate a negligible effect by 2010 because the real value of the gas levy and the quantity of gas covered by it both decline over time.

Stationery

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much his Department spent on stationery provision in respect of paper items in each of the last five years. [8866]

Angela Eagle: The expenditure on stationery items over the last five years was as follows:

1992–93: £1.5 million

1993–94: £1.7 million

1994–95: £1.7 million

1995–96: £1.9 million

1996–97: £1.6 million

It is not possible to separate paper from non-paper stationery items in these figures, which do not include expenditure by the Government offices of the regions.

Solar Energy

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will include the installations of simple solar energy projects in the activities of the environmental task force under the welfare-to-work initiative. [8770]

Angela Eagle: We want a wide range of high-quality projects to be carried out by the environmental task force, including projects that contribute to energy conservation.

Environmental Impact Assessments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which Government policies have been subjected to an environmental impact assessment since 1 May. [8898]

Angela Eagle: Environmental impact assessment normally applies to projects rather than policies. None the less, we are committed to the integration of environmental concerns into all our policy making and are currently investigating the best means of achieving this.

Green Ministers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To aks the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many times green Ministers have met since 1 May. [8899]

Angela Eagle: Green Ministers are currently being appointed and have not therefore met. They will play a key role in helping fulfil our manifesto commitment to put concern for the environment at the heart of government.

Aggregates

Mrs. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the extent of aggregate prospecting in the middle deep and outer Thames estuary and what consultation his Department has had with which companies on the commercial extraction of such aggregates. [8831]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 16 July 1997]: The Secretary of State has no involvement with offshore aggregate prospecting and, consequently, he has no information about its extent within the middle deep and outer Thames estuary.

Prospecting for marine sand and gravel is licensed by the Crown Estate as a custodian of virtually all the territorial sea bed out to 12 nautical miles. Before the Crown Estate issues a prospecting licence, it seeks comments from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the appropriate countryside agencies and the royal commission on historical monuments of England. Prospecting has very little impact on the sea bed because the survey techniques are mainly non-intrusive and surveys are governed by a voluntary code of practice between the industry and MAFF. Bulk sampling—maximum 500 tonnes—requires the prior agreement of MAFF.

Commercial extraction of marine aggregates requires a dredging licence granted by the Crown Estate which will not grant a licence until the Secretary of State issues a favourable "Government view" on the application for a licence. The "Government view procedure", co-ordinated by this Department, provides for a comprehensive environmental assessment to be made of the dredging proposals, including their possible effect on coastal defences, nature conservation and fishing interests. Unless the Secretary of State is fully satisfied that all these interests will be safeguarded, a favourable "Government view" will not be issued.

The Secretary of State consults the British Marine Aggregates Producers Association on matters of dredging policy.

Housing

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if new homes built by local authorities are compulsorily subject to secure tenancies; and if he will make a statement. [9095]

Mr. Raynsford: Section 79 of the Housing Act 1985 states that a tenancy is a secure tenancy at any time when the landlord and tenant conditions are satisfied. The landlord condition is that the interest of the landlord belongs to one of a number of bodies listed, such as a local authority, and the tenant condition is that the tenant is an individual and occupies the dwelling house as his only or principal home.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if a local authority that has transferred its housing stock to a housing company is permitted to provide funds to the company in subsequent years; and if he will make a statement. [9094]

Mr. Raynsford: Yes. A local authority may give grants for housing to any registered social landlord.

Climatic Conditions

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to adopt a sea level rise limit objective as part of his climate policy. [8923]

Angela Eagle: We have no plans currently to adopt a sea level rise limit objective. However, in developing our policy on climate change, we keep under continual review the implications of its impacts, including sea level rise.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many and what percentage of employees in his private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [8958]

Angela Eagle: In the whole of the private office for all Ministers, the total number of employees, including support grades and typists, who have declared their ethnic origin through voluntary and confidential surveys as Asian are eight, or 7.4 per cent., and as Afro-Caribbean seven, or 6.5 per cent. The combined percentage is 14 per cent.

Unmodernised Private Properties

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the estimated number of privately owned properties in the Greater London area that are in need of modernisation; and if he will make a statement. [9087]

Mr. Raynsford: There is no agreed definition of properties "in need of modernisation". However, the 1991 English house condition survey—EHCS—identified dwellings in which the kitchen and bathroom fittings were at least 25 years old. This provides an indication of the rate of modernisation and the figures for privately owned properties in Greater London are shown in the table. More recent information, collected in the 1996 EHCS, will be available later this year.

Privately owned properties in Greater London: 1991

	Number	Percentage of stock
Kitchen fittings more than 25 years old	325,000	14.1
Bathroom fittings more than 25 years old	486,000	21.1
Kitchen and bathroom fittings more than 25 years old	224,000	9.7

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the recent survey of local authorities relating to the financial impact and results of CCT. [9074]

Mr. Raynsford: Research recently published by the Department looked at both the financial and service quality impact of CCT on blue collar services covered by the Local Government Act 1988. It showed average annual savings on contract prices of 9 per cent. for the second round of tendering. This finding is, however, dependent on the way in which the social costs and benefits of CCT are treated. Other research, commissioned outside the Department, suggests a wide variation in estimates of savings when these factors are taken into account.

The departmental study also indicates that these savings have been accompanied by only relatively minor improvements in service standards; more attention needs to be given to the development of local performance indicators. A majority of the authorities surveyed also thought that user involvement in the specifying and monitoring of services could be improved. These issues will be addressed by our best value proposals, currently being developed with the support of local government and the private sector.

Green Belt

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about Government policy on large-scale housing developments in the green belt. [8985]

Mr. Prescott: The Government's policy on development in the green belt is set out in planning policy guidance—PPG—2. There is a presumption against inappropriate development in the green belt unless very special circumstances exist which outweigh the harm caused by the development.

Proposals in draft plans that would result in releasing land from the green belt must be fully justified. The Government are committed to protecting the green belt and encourage the recycling of land urban areas wherever possible to meet development needs.

Hostel Conversions

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many enforcement orders have been issued by local authorities against the unlicensed conversion of hotels, bed-and-breakfast establishments and guest houses to hostels since 1994. [9491]

Mr. Raynsford: This information is not available. Although local authorities provide my Department with quarterly statistics showing the number of enforcement notices they have issued, the figures do not differentiate between different kinds of breaches of development control.

Advance Corporation Tax Credits

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to meet representatives of the Local Government Association to discuss the effect of the abolition of the advance corporation tax credit on local authorities. [9400]

Mr. Raynsford: The Secretary of State, with ministerial colleagues, last met the Local Government Association on Wednesday 16 July. The subjects discussed included the likely impact of the abolition of the advance corporation tax on local authority pension funds.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each local authority the effect on their pension fund contributions of the withdrawal of ACT credits in the Budget. [9908]

Mr. Raynsford: The next valuation of local authority pension funds in England and Wales is due in March 1998. Only after that exercise has been completed will a true picture emerge of the effect of the Budget proposal on ACT credits and what effect this will have on future employer contributions to the separate funds.

Dependent Relatives (Accommodation)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans the Government have to issue guidance to local authorities in respect of families who seek planning permission to accommodate dependent relatives; and if he will make a statement. [8975]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 18 July 1997]: This issue was raised for discussion in last year's Green Paper on household growth. The Government are still considering the responses to the consultation, on which we will make a statement in due course. I have no plans currently to issue further advice.

Rights to erect annex buildings in the gardens of dwelling houses similar to those that currently apply under the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 have existed for many years. To benefit from permitted development rights, however, such new buildings in the gardens of dwelling houses must be "incidental to the enjoyment" of the house. The creation of a separate main residential unit would constitute development requiring planning permission.

However, extensions to create annexes for dependent relatives may be appropriate in certain circumstances, subject to conditions. This is to prevent the creation of independent living accommodation which could subsequently be let or sold off separately from the main house.

The same is true for separate buildings—often conversions of outbuildings—intended for use for dependent relatives. In these cases, it is even more likely that a separate unit of accommodation will be created.

The Government are aware of the need to give householders as many rights to develop their properties as possible, but consider that these freedoms should not be detrimental to the interests of neighbours or the quality of the area in general, and therefore have to draw a line beyond which a planning application is required.

Planning Decisions

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what mechanisms are in place to ensure objectivity in planning decisions; what plans he has to change planning regulations; and if he will make a statement. [9133]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 18 July 1997]: The law requires that planning decisions are made in accordance with the development plan unless material considerations indicate otherwise. The principal mechanisms to secure objectivity are up-to-date development plans and a prompt, efficient appeals systems. The Department is carrying out a comprehensive review of the planning system.

Planning Policy Guidance

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to revise PPG13; and if he will make a statement. [9474]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 18 July 1997]: We have no immediate plans to revise PPG13. However, better integration of transport and land use planning will be an important part of the wide-ranging review of policy leading to a White Paper on an integrated transport strategy to be published next spring.

Care Homes

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if a planning permission for residential and nursing home can, without a change of use, apply to a residential care home for people with challenging behaviour. [9592]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 18 July 1997]: Planning permission is not required for changes of use within each class of the Town and Country Planning (Use Classes) Order 1987. Use class C2 of the order covers use for the provision of residential accommodation and care to people in need of care, use as a hospital or nursing home, and use as a residential school, college or training centre. Use class C3 can cover use as a dwelling house where care is provided for not more than six residents living together as a single household.

Area Cost Adjustment

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the future of the area cost adjustment. [9325]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 18 July 1997]: The work of the review of the area cost adjustment during 1996 provided an examination of the issues, although not one the local authority associations wanted implementation for 1997–98 standard spending assessments. The Department has commissioned research to examine some of the concerns of local government about the review's proposals. It is due to report this week. We shall discuss with local government both the research findings and the way forward on the area cost adjustment.

Unauthorised Campers

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will provide advice to local authorities on time scales for consultation with health and welfare authorities before proceeding to evict unauthorised campers. [9473]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 18 July 1997]: My Department has commissioned researchers from the university of Birmingham to examine the scope for disseminating good practice for local authorities to deal with unauthorised camping. The research is well under way and includes discussions with local authorities on how they liaise with the relevant statutory agencies when deciding whether to evict unauthorised campers. We want to encourage all relevant agencies to work together and to be clear about each other's responsibilities.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what powers exist for local authorities to evict unauthorised campers under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 when health and welfare authorities do not respond to consultations on individual cases. [9330]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 18 July 1997]: Local authorities intending to use their powers in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 to direct unauthorised campers to leave land should make reasonable attempts to ascertain the campers' health and welfare needs before deciding whether eviction is justified. They need to inquire first from the campers themselves if they are receiving assistance from health and welfare services. Even if they are not, this does not mean that they do not need assistance. If it appears that assistance is being received, or is needed, local authorities should liaise with the relevant statutory agencies; the local authority may well at this stage have sufficient information to assess whether it would be justified in evicting.

It is important that local authorities maintain close relationships with the statutory agencies and that, if those agencies have relevant information, this is made known.

Correspondence

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what targets his Department sets for responding to letters from hon. Members. [9854]

Angela Eagle: My Department's target for responding to letters from hon. Members is 15 working days.

Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which animals he proposes to add to the list of those covered by the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976. [9538]

Angela Eagle: The Department has no plans to add any animals to the list covered by the Act.

Local Authority Pension Funds

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to change the solvency and funding requirements for local authority pension funds. [9648]

Mr. Raynsford: The Local Government Pension Scheme Regulations 1995, which control this statutory pension scheme in England and Wales, already require actuaries, as part of each triennial valuation, to set an employer contribution rate to ensure fund solvency, having regard to existing and prospective liabilities and the desirability to maintain as constant a rate as possible. There are no plans to change the current provisions.

Navigation Safety

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of state for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent discussions have taken place with Clydeport and other interested parties about the safe navigation of vessels and off-shore installations through the River Clyde and the firth of Clyde; and if he will make a statement. [9086]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Norman A. Godman, dated 21 July 1997:

The Deputy Prime Minister has asked me to reply to your Question as to what recent discussions have taken place with Clydeport and other interested parties concerning safe navigation of vessels and off-shore installations on the River Clyde and the Firth of Clyde. This question was referred from the Secretary of state for Scotland to the Deputy Prime Minister as the matter falls within the responsibilities of the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

The question of safe navigation on the Clyde was discussed at the meeting of the Strathclyde Sub-Committee of the West of Scotland District Marine Safety Committee at its meeting on 28 February this year. The Sub-Committee meeting was chaired by the Marine Safety Agency's Regional Chief Surveyor for Scotland and Northern Ireland. The Sub-Committee includes representatives of a wide range of interested bodies, including Clydeport Ltd., the Competent Harbour Authority (CHA) for the Clyde, and the Scottish Guild of Pilots.

At the meeting there was a very full discussion of the case, put by the representative of the Scottish Guild of Pilots, for compulsory pilotage of all tankers on the Clyde. There was some but not unanimous support for the views put forward on pilotage. However, it was made clear at the meeting that, under the Pilotage Act 1987, the statutory responsibility for this matter lies with Clydeport Ltd in its role as Competent Harbour Authority. The Sub-Committee is a consultative body only, providing a forum for discussion of marine safety issues amongst interested parties. It has no executive or statutory powers itself.

We understand that, since the meeting in February, there have been further exchanges between the management of Clydeport Ltd and the Pilots and that an agreed view on the matter has been reached.

Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many civil servants there are on each pay band in his Department. [8960]

Angela Eagle: The following information covers non-industrial staff in my Department and its agencies at 1 April 1997. The Health and Safety Executive has a pay band structure, but still with some non-banded grades. The senior civil service has nine pay bands, which are combined as a single total for this reply, and the Department and its agencies are moving towards the introduction of pay bands for remaining grades.

Except where stated, therefore, numbers are shown against standard grade equivalents for the civil service.

Summary of DETR staff numbers at 1 April 1997

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

North Yorkshire and Humberside Arts Board

12. Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to meet the chair and director of the North Yorkshire and Humberside regional arts board to discuss the development of the arts in their region. [7508]

Mr. Fisher: I met the chair and chief executive of North Yorkshire and Humberside regional arts board during my visit to Leeds on 17 July. I was able to see for myself the high quality of artistic activity in the region and was impressed by the commitment of North Yorkshire and Humberside arts board to the arts in the area. I wish them great success when they host the year of photography and the electronic image next year. We look forward to an innovative programme of events.

Sports Facilities

13. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proposals he has to assist sports other than Association Football to improve grounds and stadiums. [7509]

Mr. Banks: I am keen to see higher standards of crowd safety at all sports. The English Sports Council has announced that it will give greater priority to the provision of lottery funding for spectator facilities for the major spectator sports. I welcome that decision.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what national strategy guidance is used to ensure that lottery money is targeted strategically at sports facilities; and if he will make a statement. [7995]

Mr. Banks: The lottery sports fund has provided an excellent opportunity to make great improvements to the nation's sporting facilities. To date, capital funding of more than £570 million has been awarded to some 2,200 projects throughout England.

The English Sports Council—the statutory distributor of lottery funds for good causes in sport in England—undertakes this responsibility within the framework set out in directions issued to it by the Secretary of State. A copy of the directions is available in the Library of the House.

In addition, the ESC has developed additional strategies to help schools and areas of social deprivation, both urban and rural. The schools community sports initiative and the priority areas initiative have been introduced which allow up to 90 per cent. funding for new projects.

More needs to be done to help those regions that have been less successful in securing awards and we are looking into how the distribution of awards can be spread more evenly.

National Lottery

15. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to reform the national lottery. [7511]

Mr. Smith: I will make a statement later this afternoon on my proposals for reforming the lottery. They will widen access to the benefits of the lottery, particularly in the areas of health, education and the environment.

24. Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to review the terms of the national lottery operator's licence. [7520]

Mr. Smith: My Department does not have the power to change the terms of operation for the current licence holder. I will make a statement later this afternoon on my proposals for reforming the lottery including improvements to the way it is operated.

Tourism Grants

16. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to reintroduce section 4 grants in England. [7512]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The Government have no plans to reintroduce section 4 grants in England.

Film Industry

17. Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to promote the British film industry. [7513]

26. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to stimulate the British film industry. [7522]

27. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on his Department's plans to assist the United Kingdom film industry. [7524]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The Government's commitment to film was demonstrated by the new tax relief announced in the Budget. The film policy review group, set up by my Department, aims to double the audience of the British films and to help the film industry to achieve its full creative and economic potential.

Millennium Projects

18. Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent representations he has received in respect of the millennium dome. [7514]

Mr. Chris Smith: Since my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced on 19 June that the new millennium experience would go ahead, I have received numerous representations from Members of the House and their constituents, companies and the public. I have been encouraged by the number of people who have been enthused by our plans for celebrating the year 2,000 and have forwarded the many excellent ideas proposed to the operating company, the New Millennium Experience Company.

21. Lorna Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has for supporting millennium events in the regions. [7517]

Mr. Smith: The Millennium Commission and the New Millennium Experience Company Ltd., are working together on proposals for a regional programme of events in the years up to and during the year 2000. In addition, we would encourage communities and local authorities throughout the country to organise celebrations, and my Department is promoting co-ordination between organisers of major regional events.

22. Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much has been allocated by the Millennium Commission to projects to mark the millennium. [7518]

Mr. Smith: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer that I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolsover (Mr. Skinner).

BBC News

19. Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he next intends to meet the chairman of the BBC governors to discuss the 24-hour news channel. [7515]

Mr. Chris Smith: I have no current plans to meet the BBC chairman to discuss the 24-hour news channel. However, as my hon. Friend will know, approval has already been given in principle, under the provisions of the charter and agreement, to the BBC's initial proposals for public service digital television, including 24-hour news.

Sand Yachting

20. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on his Department's support for sand yachting. [7516]

Mr. Banks: The Government give support for individual sports mainly through the English and UK Sports Councils. The British Federation of Sand and Land Yacht Clubs, the sport's governing body, has been awarded a grant of £19,000 by the UK and English Sports Councils. This runs to September 1997. From September, the funding and development of the sport will rest with the UK Sports Council. Sand yachting has so far been awarded £47,660 from the lottery sports fund.

Architectural Heritage

23. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what further initiatives he intends to take to conserve and enhance the nation's architectural heritage. [7519]

Mr. Banks: We are committed to giving a high priority to protecting our heritage. Government funding to achieve this is channelled in the main through English Heritage. Increasingly, the lottery is also contributing substantial aid. English Heritage and the heritage lottery fund have had continuing discussions in recent months about possible funding initiatives in which they can collaborate to the greater benefit of historic buildings.

Ballroom Dancing

25. Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received in respect of ballroom dancing being given Olympic recognition. [7521]

Mr. Banks: I am not aware that we have received any representations about recognising ballroom dancing as an Olympic sport. It is a good idea; it already has provisional recognition, but a final decision is a matter for the International Olympic Committee.

Football

28. Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to the oral statement by the Minister for Sport of 27 June, Official Report, column 1127, what progress has been made on the creation of a task force for football; and what its remit will be. [7525]

Mr. Banks: I am currently looking into how the task force can be put into effect, its composition and its remit. I shall be making an announcement shortly.

Arts Access

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to enable greater access to the arts. [7510]

Mr. Fisher: Access is a central theme of my Department's policies for the arts. The public has a right to the widest possible access in return for the public funding which the arts receive. The proposals we have made to increase access to the arts include plans to pilot open theatre nights and an artscard scheme for young people as well as plans to review the case for admission charges to core collections in our national museums and galleries.

House of Commons (Radio Broadcasts)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to meet the chairman and Director General of the BBC to discuss the future radio broadcasting of the House; and if he will make a statement. [9878]

Mr. Fisher: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no such plans. Under the terms of its agreement with the Secretary of State, the BBC is required to transmit an impartial day-by-day account of the proceedings in both Houses of Parliament, but it is for the BBC to determine the best way in which to meet this obligation. The BBC is carrying out an extensive consultation exercise about the future direction of Radio 4 and I am sure that it will take into account in arriving at its decisions the strong feelings expressed by Madam Speaker and by hon. Members on both sides of the House about the broadcasting of our proceedings.

Works of Art (Export Licences)

Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the items for which the issuing of export licences was withheld on the recommendation of the Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art during the half-year ended 30 June, specifying in each case the valuation and whether an item was exported or retained, with particulars in the latter event of the acquiring institutions; and if he will list any items for which licences have been withheld but the final disposal of which is not yet decided, specifying in each case (a) the valuation and (b) the relevant time limit. [8977]

Mr. Fisher: The information is as follows:

Description of item	Valuation £	Outcome
A painting Madonna and Child with Saints with a Distant Landscape by Annibale Carracci (1560–1609)	197,325	No offer made, so export licence was issued

TREASURY

Strip Searches

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what procedures are in place at ports of entry to inform people of their rights of appeal before being subjected to a strip search by Customs and Excise officers. [8523]

Dawn Primarolo: Before customs carries out a strip search travellers must be informed of their right of appeal orally by the officer and the traveller's attention is drawn to customs notice No. 11—available in the House of Commons Library—which is displayed in all search rooms. This notice advises travellers that before a strip search is undertaken they have a right of appeal to:

—a senior officer of Customs and Excise, or —a justice of the peace

who will decide whether or not the search is justified.

MIRAS

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the administrative costs of retaining tax relief on mortgage interest. [7987]

Dawn Primarolo: Figures for the total expenditure on this task could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

VAT (Energy-efficient Materials)

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will incorporate within this review of the effects of a reduced rate of VAT for energy efficiency materials all correspondence received by his Department over the past three years, pertaining to this matter. [9194]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor announced in the Budget an extension of the review on the revenue effect of a reduced rate of VAT on energy-saving materials. We want to be sure that we identify effective and efficient ways of helping those on low incomes keep warm. Customs and Excise is leading the review and is taking full account of representations previously received.

Representations (Sir David Simon)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will (a) list and (b) publish those representations his Department received from Sir David Simon prior to his joining the Government; [7425]

(2) if he will (a) list and (b) publish those representations his Department received from BP prior to the Budget statement. [7428]

Mr. Gordon Brown: The content and origination of representations from members of the public that the Treasury receive are treated as confidential. Their release is a matter for the individual concerned.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what percentage of employees in his private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [8934]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury collects data on the ethnic origin of its staff on a confidential, self-declaration basis. When it was collected, an assurance was given that the information would be used in aggregate form only and never in a way that might enable individuals to be identified. The analysis sought cannot be given because the total number of staff in the private office of the Chancellor of the Exchequer is sufficiently small to enable the individuals to be identified.

Employment Advertisements

Ms Perham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how often since 1992 his Department has been responsible for employment advertisements that contained age restrictions upon those who could apply. [9500]

Mrs. Liddell: Age is not a criteria used in recruitment advertisements except for those who join the Treasury through the European fast stream, where there is an age limit of 31. The European fast stream offers EU-related work in the British civil service which, together with specially structured training, is designed to help young British graduates in the competitions for entry into the EU institutions. The age limit of 31 for such entrants reflects a period of training in advance of an age limit of 35 imposed by the European Commission on recruitment to the European institutions. The reason for the age limit is explained in the recruitment literature.

Construction Industry

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate the Inland Revenue has made of the degree of compliance of companies in the construction industry with changes in the application of the rules concerning the employed or self-employed status of workers in that industry. [9126]

Dawn Primarolo: Following requests from the construction industry for help in correctly determining the employment status of its workers, the Inland Revenue and Contributions Agency published new guidance in 1996. To provide uniformity of approach across the industry, construction companies were required to review the employment status of their workers and, by 5 April 1997, make necessary changes and start accounting for Pay-as-you-earn and national insurance contributions where appropriate.

It is too soon to estimate with confidence the number of workers whose employment status has been changed, but it is clear that a substantial number of companies have made changes and started to account for PAYE and NICs where appropriate.

Written Parliamentary Questions

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will raise the advisory cost limit of £450 for answering written parliamentary questions; and if he will make a statement. [10265]

Mrs. Liddell: The advisory cost limit was last increased in 1993—Official Report, 18 February 1993, column 307—and is to be further increased to £500 from today.

The purpose and application of the advisory cost limit remain unchanged. It is intended to act as a threshold for disproportionate cost parliamentary questions. Any written PQ where the marginal cost of preparing the answer is considered likely to exceed the threshold may be refused in whole or in part on the ground of disproportionate cost. Alternatively, the Minister may decide that the PQ is to be answered irrespective of cost. There is no advisory limit for oral PQs.

The advisory limit continues to be based on eight times the average marginal cost for written PQs, which is now £62, rounded to the nearest £50 for convenience of application.

Ivory

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all seizures of ivory made by Her Majesty's Customs between 1 January 1996 and 30 June 1997, giving date, quantity, type, whether whole or pieces of raw tusk, semi-worked or worked ivory, country of origin and intended country of destination for each seizure. [8166]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The records maintained by HM Customs and Excise of finalised ivory seizures do not include all the details requested, but I am able to supply the following information for the period 1 January 1996 to 31 March 1997, which are the latest figures available. With one exception, an export to Japan, the seizures were made at the time of importation into the United Kingdom, the presumed country of destination.

The description "carving" embraces a miscellany of worked ivory wares such as bracelets, statuettes, animal figurines and other ornaments.

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in England and Wales in each year since 1990; and how many maternities there were in each year. [8174]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Dafydd Wigley, dated 21 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), to your recent parliamentary question on multiple births.

Maternities in England and Wales by multiplicity 1990–96

	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996

Oil Revenue

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the expected revenues to the Exchequer for each of the next 10 years arising from development of the British oil fields west of the Shetland Islands. [8048]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 17 July 1997]: Reliable forecasts are not available.

Tax Measures

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what previous occasions the Treasury has announced by press release anti-avoidance tax measures to take effect from Budget day but not to be enacted until the Finance Bill in a subsequent year. [8139]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 11 July 1997]: None, as far as I am aware.

Budget (Leaks)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) which of his advisers had meetings with Robert Peston of the Financial Times prior to the Budget statement; and if they gave Mr. Peston any information concerning the Budget proposals on advance corporation tax; [7691]

(2) which of his advisers travelled back in the same aeroplane from the G7 summit as Robert Peston of the Financial Times; [7693]

(3) which of his advisers gave information to Robert Peston at the Financial Times concerning his proposals on ACT in the Budget prior to the delivery of the Budget statement to the House. [7692]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 10 July 1997]: Neither I nor my advisers gave Robert Peston any information about the Budget proposals on ACT in advance of my Budget statement.

Foreign Income Dividends

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about his proposed abolition of foreign income dividends. [8138]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 11 July 1997]: Several companies with major international interests have made representations concerning foreign income dividends. We wish to foster the United Kingdom's role as a centre for international business. As both the Chief Secretary and the Paymaster General have made clear, we are looking sympathetically at the position of UK groups with substantial foreign income.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Government's plans regarding foreign income dividends. [8703]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 July 1997]: Payment of foreign income dividends will cease from 6 April 1999. However, in order to maintain the United Kingdom's role as a centre for international business, provision will be made in the next Finance Bill to ensure that international headquarters companies can continue to pay dividends out of foreign income without having to pay advance corporation tax.

In addition, as both the Chief Secretary and the Paymaster General have made clear, we are looking sympathetically at the position of UK groups with substantial foreign income.

Medical Insurance (Tax Relief)

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors underlie the discrepancy between the figures on page 34 of the Red Book on the number of people receiving tax relief on private medical insurance premiums and that given in Inland Revenue press release No. 5 issued on the same day. [8698]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 July 1997]: There are two different sets of measurements: the number of contracts—or taxpayers getting relief—and the number of people covered by the contract. It is common for more than one person—usually spouses—to be covered by a contract. The lower figure of one third million quoted in the Red Book represents the number of eligible contracts and the number of people who get tax relief by making their payments net of tax. The higher figure quoted in the press release—550,000—represents the total number of individuals covered by the contracts.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Bank of Credit and Commerce International

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will investigate the total costs of the English liquidators of BCCI to date for dealing with staff loans of former employees. [9893]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: No. This is a matter for the liquidators and the liquidation committee of creditors. I met Tony Scott of the liquidation committee on 10 June.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the issue of writs by the English liquidators of BCCI against former employees of BCCI. [9891]

Mr. Griffiths: No. This is a matter for the liquidators. The bringing of any such proceedings requires the sanction of the liquidation committee.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much was set aside by the BCCI liquidators for the payment of the first dividend; how much has actually been paid; what is the balance amount remaining; and what plans the liquidators have to pay a second dividend. [9895]

Mr. Griffiths: Details of the first dividend payment are given in the report of the joint liquidators to the Secretary of State, pursuant to regulation 14 of the Insolvency Regulations 1994, for the period 16 January 1996 to 15 January 1997, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House and a copy of which I sent to my hon. Friend on 30 May 1997.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much extra money has been collected by the liquidators of BCCI since the payment of the first dividend for the payment of the second dividend; and what costs and fees have been incurred by the liquidators for this. [9896]

Mr. Griffiths: This information will be contained in the next annual report of the liquidators to the Secretary of State, pursuant to regulation 14 of the Insolvency Regulations 1994 which will cover the period 16 January 1997 to 15 January 1998.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will take steps to have the costs and legal fees of the liquidators of BCCI audited by an independent accountant. [9890]

Mr. Griffiths: No. These are matters for the liquidation committee of creditors or for the court.

Newsagents

Mr. Luff: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she proposes to take to safeguard the future of independent retail newsagents; and if she will make a statement. [9909]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The Director General of Fair Trading continues to monitor the newspaper market following the Monopolies and Mergers Commission investigation into the supply of national newspapers in England and Wales in 1992–93. I understand that he is currently considering a submission from the National Federation of Retail Newsagents which calls for a further reference of the industry to the MMC.

British Overseas Trade Board

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the key functions of the British Overseas Trade Board; when the board was established; by what authority; and if she will list the names of the chairman and the secretary. [9628]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The key function of the British Overseas Trade Board—BOTB—is to act as principal adviser to the Department of Trade and Industry and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on overseas trade and the official export promotion programme.

Set up in 1972 by the then Minister of Trade, the board draws on the experience of senior British business people to help improve the export performance of UK industry and commerce, guide the Government's export promotion efforts, including the provision of export services, and provide advice on policy issues affecting international trade promotion.

The current chairman is Sir Martin Laing CBE and the secretary is Dr. Denis Walker.

Utilities Regulation

Mr. Breed: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to revise the regulatory set-up for the utilities; and if she will make a sttaement. [8645]

Mrs. Beckett: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Delyn (Mr. Hanson) on 30 June 1997, Official Report, columns 20–21.

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what occasions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have refused to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings with hon. Members to discuss matters relating to interests registered by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8953]

Mrs. Beckett: The first report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life Cm 2850, made it clear that, when Members are meeting Ministers or others on topics in which they have an interest, the onus is on the Members to declare that interest, not the Minister to know—paragraph 63 of Cm 2850. It is not practicable for Ministers and officials, among their other duties, to vet requests for meetings against the Register of Members' Interests. Should evidence of non-declaration emerge, or contravention of the resolution of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, the matter would be brought to the attention of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department refuse requests from hon. Members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8050]

Mrs. Beckett: The first report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life Cm 2850, recognised the value of enabling Members to retain interests outside the House, provided these were properly declared, both in the Register of Members' Interests and on other occasions. Subject to these requirements, and to the rules of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, Members are free to seek meetings with Ministers and officials who will consider such requests alongside the many other approaches from individuals and organisations concerned to press their own interests or those of others.

Commercial Lobbyists

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department have met commercial lobbyists to discuss matters relating to the business of her Department; and if she will introduce a register of such meetings; [8051]

(2) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department have attended meetings with organisations representing (i) commercial and (ii) non-commercial interests organised by commercial lobbying firms; and if she will introduce a register of such meetings. [8052]

Mrs. Beckett: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained in response to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn), Official Report, column 99, Ministers and officials in the Department receive deputations from many groups who are concerned to press their own interests or those of their clients, which Ministers and officials take due care to consider within the wider public interest and Government policy. As it is not practicable to distinguish particular groups as lobbyists, the Department cannot keep a register of such meetings.

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many licences have been issued for the export of Hawk aircraft to Indonesia since 1978; and in each case what was the date of the licence and the number of aircraft covered by it. [7222]

Mrs. Roche: A licence was formally issued on 2 January 1996 in respect of the approval given for Hawk aircraft and equipment and announced by the then Minister of Trade on 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1081. This licence was for eight 100 series Hawks and 16 200 series Hawks. Six other licences, on the same date, covered equipment including weapon systems, and spares.

A licence was issued on 22 November 1996 for 16 200 series Hawks. Again, six other licences on the same date, covered equipment, including weapons systems, and spares.

To provide details of Hawk aircraft or any related spares licensed for earlier years would entail disproportionate cost.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the number and categories of export licences granted to Manroy Engineering Ltd. for the export of (a) general purpose machine guns and (b) other automatic weapons to Indonesia since 1988. [3436]

Mrs. Roche: Since 1991, when records became readily available, no export licences for such weapons for export to Indonesia have been issued to the company. Information for the earlier period could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The company has, however, told officials that it has not applied for licences for such weapons to Indonesia.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the (a) number and (b) categories of export licences granted to Broadcast and Surveillance Systems Ltd. for the export of surveillance systems to Indonesia since 1988. [3698]

Mrs Roche: Readily available records—from 1991—show that two export licences have been granted to Broadcast and Surveillance Systems Ltd., for the export of surveillance systems to Indonesia: one in September 1995 and the other in May 1996.

Both licence were for the temporary export of goods categorised under the heading ML15 of the relevant Export of Goods (Control) Order. All the exported goods have now been returned to the UK.

It is possible that goods covered by the question may have been supplied as part of a larger order, but not specifically recorded as such in the licensing database. A search of paper records to identify any of these would entail disproportionate cost, as would provision of information for the earlier period.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Broad of Trade if she will list the number of current export licence applications for command control, communication and information systems to Indonesia. [3526]

Mrs. Roche: There are no current export licence applications for command control, communication and information systems to Indonesia.

The licences issued to Procurement Services International Ltd. for Glover Webb Tactica vehicles, which was announced in the House on 9 December 1996, Official Report, column 30, contained 12 Hornet command and communications vehicles, eight Tactica command and communications vehicles and two sets of communications base station equipment. This was announced in the House on 23 January 1997, Official Report, columns 708–709.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many licences have been granted since 1988 for the export of MP5 sub-machine guns to Indonesia; how many shipments there were; and what assurances the United Kingdom Government were given by the Indonesian authorities that the weapons would not be used for internal repression. [2772]

Mrs. Roche: Readily available records—since 1991—show no licences granted for export of these weapons to Indonesia have been issued. It is possible that goods covered by the question may have been supplied as part of a larger order, but not specifically recorded as such in the licensing database. A search of paper records to identify any of these would entail disproportionate cost, as would provision of information for the earlier period.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will provide details of the export licences granted to the Nitor group of companies for the export of firearms training systems to Indonesia since 1988. [2803]

Mrs. Roche: Firearms training systems, unless they are specialised equipment for military training or for simulating military scenarios, do not require an export licence.

Readily available records—since 1991—show that no licences have been issued to the Nitor group of companies for the export of firearms training systems to Indonesia.

To search paper export licence records for earlier years would entail disproportionate costs.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will provide details of the exports by Henckler and Koch of MP5 sub-machine guns to Indonesia. [2771]

Mrs. Roche: Details of deliveries of equipment exported are not held by my Department.

Heckler and Koch MP5 sub-machine guns are manufactured in the UK by Royal Ordnance, a subsidiary of British Aerospace.

Since 1991, when records became readily available, no licence is shown as having been issued to Royal Ordnance for export of these weapons to Indonesia.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will provide details of all licences granted for the export of (a) sub-machine guns, (b) machine guns, (c) assault rifles, (d) automatic rifles and (e) sniper rifles to Indonesia, in each of the last three years. [2773]

Mrs. Roche: In the three years to 15 July 1997, readily available records show that only one licence has been issued for the export of such weapons rated under heading ML1 of the Export of Goods (Control) Order to Indonesia. The export licence was issued in 1995 and was for 10 sniper rifles for the Indonesian armed forces. It is possible that goods covered by the question may have been supplied as part of a larger order, but not specifically recorded as such in the licensing database. A search of paper records to identify any of these would entail disproportionate cost.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many licences have been granted for the export of close quarter battle facilities and firearms training systems to Indonesia since 1988; and if she will provide details of the Indonesian security and military training for which the equipment was intended. [2804]

Mrs. Roche: Readily available records—since 1991—show that three export licences have been issued for the export of close quarter battle facilities and firearms training systems to Indonesia; in one case, the goods were destined for the Indonesian for the Indonesian army headquarters for army training. The other two were temporary licences, the goods destined for the Indonesian

Department of Defence and Security for demonstration to the Indonesian armed forces. These two temporary licences were subsequently returned to the DTI unused.

It should be noted, in general, that firearms training systems, unless they are specialised equipment for military training or for simulating military scenarios, do not require an export licence.

A search of records for earlier years would entail disproportionate cost.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the number of export licences granted in each year since 1990 for export to Indonesia of (a) machine guns, (b) automatic cannon and (c) 7.62 mm ammunition. [18467]

Mrs. Roche: From readily available records—dating from 1991—the numbers of licences issued specifically for these goods for export to Indonesia are as follows:

	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997
Machine guns	—	—	—	—	1	—	—
Automatic cannon	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
7.62 mm ammunition	—	—	2	—	1	—	—

In addition, one further licence was issued in 1995 for 30 in ammunition which is interchangeable with 7.62 mm ammunition.

It is possible that goods covered by the question may also have been supplied as part of a larger order, but not specifically recorded as such on the licensing database. A search of paper records to identify any of these, and for any such items licensed in 1990, would entail disproportionate cost.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will revoke the licences for Hawk jets to Indonesia granted in November 1996. [9146]

Mrs. Roche: Any decision to revoke an export licence issued before 1 May by my Department would be announced to the House.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many licence applications are awaiting approval for the export of sub-machine guns and other automatic weapons to Indonesia. [2774]

Mrs. Roche: At 10 July, four individual export licence applications had been received which included such weapons for Indonesia. These will be considered in light of the Government's commitment not to license for export arms to regimes that might use them for internal repression or international aggression.

Armoured Vehicle Exports

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if she will list (a) the export licences granted since 1988 to (i) GKN and (ii) GKN Defence or Glover Webb for the export of Saxon vehicles and (a) their destination; [3385]

(2) which export licences granted since 1988 to (a) GKN, (b) GKN Defence and (c) Glover Webb for the export of Saxon vehicles covered associated equipment to provide electrified deterrents. [3637]

Mrs. Roche: To search export licences issued for these companies for Saxon vehicles would entail disproportionate cost.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the export licences granted since 1988 to (a) GKN, (b) GKN Defence and (c) Glover Webb for the export of (i) armoured vehicles, (ii) armoured personnel carriers and (iii) internal security vehicles to Nigeria since 1988. [3638]

Mrs. Roche: From readily available records—since 1991—no export licences have been issued to the companies in question for such equipment for Nigeria. Information for the earlier period could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the export licences granted to (a) Procurement Services International and (b) Greys Defence Systems for the export of Tactica and Hornet vehicles to (i) Brunei, (ii) Malaysia and (iii) Turkey. [3695]

Mrs. Roche: Readily available records show that Procurement Services International was granted two temporary export licences for Tactica vehicles to Turkey. One was in May 1995 and the goods were returned to the UK approximately three months later. The other was in October 1996 and as yet has not been used. A temporary licence was also granted for Hornet vehicles to Malaysia in November 1996. There is no record of licences having been granted to PSI in respect of exports to Brunei. Nor is there any record of export licences having been granted to Greys Defence Systems for the export of Tactica or Hornet vehicles.

Nitor Group of Companies

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many licences have been granted to the Nitor group of companies for the export of (a) training systems and (b) close quarter battle facilities in each of the last five years; which countries the licences related to; and how many of the training facilities were for (a) military forces, (b) security police, (c) paramilitary forces and (d) special forces units. [2802]

Mrs. Barbara Roche: Two licences have been issued to the Nitor group for training systems, both in 1992. One was for targets for shooting practice to the Singapore Ministry of Defence, and the other for firing range targetry equipment to the Saudi Arabian Ministry of Defence and Aviation. No export licences are recorded as having been granted to this company for close quarter battle facilities training systems.

Export Licences

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the (a) number and (b) categories of export licences granted to Manroy Engineering Ltd., for the export of the Manroy L80 Manpack CS mist backpack sprayer; and if she will indicate the destination (i) countries and (ii) agencies for this equipment. [3697]

Mrs. Roche: Readily available records—since 1991—show no licences issued for this equipment. The company has informed my officials that this equipment did not go into production.

Johore Jungle Warfare School

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the number and details of export licences granted for military training equipment within category ML14, to the Johore jungle warfare school, Malaysia, and the types of equipment covered by the licence. [18310]

Mrs. Roche: From readily available records—dating from 1991—there is no record of any export licence being issued for equipment rated under heading ML14 for Malaysia showing the Johore jungle warfare school as the end user.

It is possible that goods covered by the question may have been supplied as part of a larger order, but not specifically recorded as ML14 in the licensing database. A search of paper records to identify any of these would entail disproportionate cost.

Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe

Mr. Letwin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe dispensed with the car and driver provided to him by BP. [8750]

Mrs. Beckett: Wednesday 7 May 1997.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 10 July, Official Report, column 601, on the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe, if she will list those energy issues which she defines as not bearing on British Petroleum. [9016]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 17 July 1997]: In order to ensure compliance with "Questions of Procedure for Ministers", the Minister does not see papers, or take part in discussions or decisions, that could rise to a conflict of interest with his past or his present private interests in BP. As QPM also makes clear, these are ultimately matters for his judgment.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will define those (a) papers the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe cannot see and (b) matters he cannot decide which (i) have a bearing on and (ii) affect BP. [9327]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 July 1997]: In order to ensure compliance with "Questions of Procedure for Ministers", the Minister does not see papers, or take part in discussions or decisions, which could rise to a conflict of interest with his past or his present private interests in BP. As QPM also makes clear, these are ultimately matters for his judgment.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the meetings the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe has held since 7 May with (a) executives and (b) directors of BP. [9112]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 17 July 1997]: Since 7 May, the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe has had no formal meetings with executives of BP. He has had three meetings with directors of BP to deal with matters relating to the handover of his duties. He has also attended three farewell social engagements hosted by BP.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the Minister of Trade and Competitiveness in Europe last visited a BP office or installation since becoming a Minister. [9113]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 17 July 1997]: The Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe has visited no BP installation since his appointment on 7 May 1997. He visited BP's offices at Finsbury circus on Friday 9 May to clear his desk and again on Wednesday 4 June for his farewell reception.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many and what percentage of employees, in each pay band, in the quangos for which her Department is responsible, are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [9581]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: My Department is responsible for 22 executive non-departmental public bodies, 25 advisory bodies and seven tribunals, considering the 28 industrial tribunals as one body. I regret that the information requested by my hon. Friend is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many civil servants there are in total on each pay band in her Department. [9582]

Mr. Griffiths: There are 3,950 civil servants in the DTI, excluding agency and Government office staff, with the following numbers by grade:

Current serving grade	Number of staff

Acquired Rights Directive

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what infraction proceedings have been instigated by the European Commission against the United Kingdom with regard to the acquired rights directive—collective redundancy consultation—and if she will make a statement. [9204]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 18 July 1997]: We have had contact with the Commission on this subject and it is under review.

Space Programme

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to develop a strategy for ensuring that the purely scientific aspects of Earth observation from space are fully integrated into the research council system. [9423]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 18 July 1997]: Mechanisms are already in place, through the British National Space Centre partnership and the responsibilities of the Natural Environment Research Council, for ensuring that the scientific aspects of Earth observation are fully integrated into the research council system. NERC, as well as the Office of Science and Technology, is a partner in BNSC and NERC staff are fully involved in the definition and implementation of BNSC's EO activities. NERC's responsibilities include the promotion and support of high-quality basic, strategic and applied research in EO and NERC expenditure on such EO research is currently about £6 million a year.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to ensure that the United Kingdom investment in the European Space Agency Envisat Earth observation satellite yields the fullest returns to the United Kingdom in terms of its commercial, strategic and scientific potential. [9437]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 18 July 1997]: The United Kingdom has been more successful than any other ESA country in winning announcements of opportunity for scientific and strategic exploitation of data from ESA's European remote sensing satellites. We are also one of the leading countries in the development of commercial applications of Earth observations. The British National Space Centre is aiming to continue this success by working with ESA, the EU, Government Departments, industry and academia to ensure an effective infrastructure for processing, archiving, and distribution Envisat data combined with continuing promotional and applications development support.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what additional funding the United Kingdom space science mission will receive to compensate for PPARC's inability to fund the appropriate United Kingdom involvement in some of ESA's science missions. [9434]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 18 July 1997]: The Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council received an allocation from the science budget of £200.65 million—including provision for its international subscriptions—for 1997–98. Within that allocation, it is for PPARC to determine its priorities, including deciding whether and at what level it should participate in ESA missions.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the board of Trade what monitoring PPARC undertakes of the comparative industrial spin-off of its space science expenditure including the ESA subscription against that of its expenditure on ground-based astronomy and particle physics. [9433]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 18 July 1997]: As the only research council which exclusively supports basic research, the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council's mission requires it to "take account" of the potential for contributing to the UK's industrial competitiveness, as opposed to the requirement on the other research councils to place "special emphasis" on this issue. Nevertheless, PPARC seeks to ensure that UK industry benefits from contracts for the construction of major facilities, and that technologies developed for research are exploited in industry.

PPARC is developing performance indicators to help to monitor the number of contracts won by UK companies, and the extent to which the academic community collaborates with companies. As contracts placed by ESA are linked to the level of the UK's subscription, and the high-technology contracts placed by the Gemini telescope project are linked to the level of the UK's participation in the project, there are already good opportunities for UK companies to win contracts. While UK companies already benefit substantially from contracts from ESA, they have not done so well at winning supply contracts from CERN—although they have been more successful at winning service contracts. To address this, PPARC, jointly with the DTI has appointed an industrial co-ordinator to promote to UK industry the opportunities that the new large Hadron collider at CERN will provide.

The PPARC industrial programme support scheme — PIPSS—was launched in 1994 to promote technology transfer from technology research groups to industry. Thirty-four projects totalling £1.6 million have been awarded over three years.

Global Free Trade

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to achieve tariff-free trade across the globe by 2020; and if she will make a statement. [9424]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 18 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the right hon. Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad) on 14 July 1997, Official Report, column 71.

Cot Mattresses

Mr. Öpik: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will ban inclusion of (a) phosphorus, (b) arsenic and (c) antimony compounds in the composition of cot mattresses; and if she will make a statement. [5843]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 1 July 1997]: The use of phosphorus, arsenic and antimony in cot mattresses is currently being considered by the Expert Committee on Cot Death Theories set up by the chief medical officer in November 1994. This committee is due to report to the chief medical officer at the Department of Health.

Coal Authority

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the Coal Authority's report and accounts for 1996–97 will be laid before Parliament. [10086]

Mr. Battle: I have today laid a copy before each House of Parliament.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Forth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for the review of animal welfare controls on live exports (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8236]

Mr. Morley: The conclusions of this review will be announced as soon as practicable. Work such as this on the validation of procedures is part of the Department's planned activities and does not result in an addition to running costs.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) live sheep and (b) consignments of live sheep were exported from Dover on 5 July; what was (i) the place of departure and (ii) the final destination given on the route plan in respect of each consignment; what was (1) the time of departure and (2) the time of arrival at final destination of each consignment; where each consignment received the 24-hour break stipulated by the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997 and if a full 24 hours was spent there; how many livestock vehicles were turned away from Dover by his officials on 5 July and for what reasons; and if he will make a statement. [8537]

Mr. Morley: Four vehicles containing 2,280 sheep were exported from Dover on 5 July. Two locations in Italy were declared as the destinations and the place of departure was in Essex. The ship departed from Dover at 01.00 and the animals were due to arrive at their destinations during the early morning of 7 July having received two 24-hour rest periods, one at the start of the journey and the other at premises in Belgium during the journey. In the port of Dover, two vehicles were served with an enforcement notice requiring the animals to be accommodated in premises close to Dover because the vehicles did not meet the additional criteria necessary for a journey of over more than eight hours, as required by schedule 7 to the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he takes to establish the journey times taken for each movement of non-human primates from entry into the crate in the country of export to arrival at point of destination in this country; if he sets a maximum journey time for such journeys; and if he will make a statement. [8216

Mr. Morley [holding answer 14 July 1997]: There are no statutory limits on journey times for such animals. The Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997, implementing directive 91/628 as amended, sets transport conditions and specifies that animals which are subject to the convention on international trade in endangered species—CITES—shall be transported in compliance with CITES guidelines or the standards set by the International Air Transport Association. Enforcement of the order is a matter for local authorities.

Green Pound

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will bring into operation compensation provisions for farmers to take into account the appreciation of the green pound; and if he will make a statement. [9547]

Mr. Rooker: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Ashford (Mr. Green) on 3 July, Official Report, column 261.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the security of Britain's tuberculosis-free status. [8893]

Mr. Rooker: The officially tuberculosis-free status of individual cattle herds in the United Kingdom is protected by routine tuberculin testing and by post mortem examination of cattle at the time of slaughter or killing.

BSE Research (Primates)

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement of the use of primates in BSE research commissioned by his Department. [9127]

Mr. Rooker: The Department has commissioned no research on BSE which involves the use of primates.

Cattle Cull

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the changes in the level of payment and terms for cattle entering the over-30-months scheme since its introduction. [8929]

Mr. Rooker: The information requested is as follows:

Date	Basic rate in ecu/kg		Sterling rate for cull cows and bulls liveweight £/kg		Sterling rate for cull cows and bulls deadweight £/kg		Sterling rate for clean cattle liveweight £/kg	Sterling rate for clean cattle deadweight £/kg

4 August 1997	0.8	0.9	0.58	0.65	1.15	1.10	0.65	1.10

1. The sterling rate of compensation has been reduced on six occasions as a result of green pound fluctuations.
2. Compensation is fixed in terms of payments per kilogram live weight. Where cattle are not weighed live, a coefficient —of 2 for cows and 1.7 for all other cattle—is applied to the recorded dead weight.
3. A degressive top-up payment for clean cattle—heifers and steers—originally set at 25p/kg was available for the first six months of the scheme. The original top-up payment is still available for clean cattle that were over 30 months of age on 17 June 1996.
4. With effect from 25 November 1996, the minimum period during which an animal has to be present on a UK holding before becoming eligible for the scheme was increased from three months to six months.
5. With effect from 4 August 1997, payment will be limited to a maximum weight of 560 kg per animal.
6. All basic rates of payment in ecu or sterling apply to cows and bulls unless otherwise indicated.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to help beef farmers cope with recent changes in the compensation regime. [9539]

Mr. Rooker: The changes to the compensation arrangements for the over-30-months scheme, which will apply from 4 August, have been introduced to reduce scheme expenditure, which is considerable. Providing financial assistance to offset the impact of the changes would frustrate the objective of reducing scheme expenditure.

Nevertheless, in the period leading up to 4 August, it is recognised that some farmers will accelerate their culling patterns to benefit from the current compensation rates. The Intervention Board has made provision for abattoirs to slaughter more animals than would otherwise have been accepted in this period, although it can not rule out the possibility that demand will exceed the capacity available.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minster of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the cost to farmers of the introduction of the weight limit on cull cattle compensation. [9542]

Mr. Rooker: The effect of the weight limit on farmers' incomes will depend on the weight of the animals being presented. For a typical suckler cow farmer culling five cows per year, each weighing 620 kg, the reduction in income arising from the introduction of the weight limit and the lower compensation rate for cull cows will be about £395.

The weight limit and the reduced compensation rate for cull cows are being introduced to reduce expenditure on the over-30-months scheme, which is expected to amount to well over £200 million this year in compensation alone.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the effect on farmers' incomes of the change in the base rate of compensation for over-30-months cattle to begin on 4 August. [9541]

Mr. Rooker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the right hon. and learned Member for Sleaford and North Hykeham (Mr. Hogg) on 4 July, Official Report, columns 296–97.

BSE

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the percentage of the total Government expenditure relating to the BSE crisis that reaches farmers. [9540]

Mr. Morley: Of the £1.54 billion expenditure on BSE in 1996–97, about 60 per cent. was paid to farmers primarily through the over-30-months scheme and top-ups to the suckler cow and beef special premium schemes.

Intervention Stocks

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the intervention stocks which have been sold to third countries in each of the last five years for which figures are available, indicating for each year the price and overall volume and the relevant world market price at time of sale. [8996]

Mr. Rooker: The information requested is as follows:

Intervention product	Calendar year	Quantity sold to third countries (tonnes)	Sale price per tonne (£)	World market price (£)
Beef
	1992	18,212	[1]1,200.70	[2]—
	1993	19,863	[1]1,401.83	[2]—
	1994	49,940	[1]1,061.1	[2]—

[1] Intervention beef is sold by cut and different cuts have different sale prices. The sale prices shown are therefore average sales prices for all the cuts concerned. The work involved in establishing the individual sale prices for each of the cuts sold for each sale could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

[2] The world beef market is fragmented and prices vary considerably according to the export zone and/or country concerned. Consequently, there is not a recognised and established world market price for beef.

[3] The sale prices shown are average sale prices. The work involved in establishing the individual price for each sale could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

[4] The work involved in establishing the world market price at the time of sale could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Certified Herds Scheme

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what estimate he has made of the percentage of beef herds in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland which would be eligible under the export certified herds scheme for re-entry into world beef markets; [9548]

(2) what estimate he has made of the percentage of beef herds in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and d) Northern Ireland which would be eligible under a date-based certified herds scheme, using a cut-off date of 1 August 1996, for re-entry into world beef markets. [9549]

Mr. Rooker: Discussions on an export certified herds scheme and a date-based export scheme are still at an early stage in Brussels. Some 84 per cent. of beef suckler herds in Great Britain and 98 per cent. of such herds in Northern Ireland have never experienced a case of BSE, but it is not possible to estimate the proportions of these or other herds that would have eligible animals for export under either scheme until the rules have been finalised.

Cormorant Cull

Mr. Soames: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will order a cormorant cull. [9599]

Mr. Morley: Cormorants are protected by the 1979 EC birds directive, implemented in the UK by the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. This Act provides for them to be shot under licence in strictly limited numbers in cases where they are causing serious damage to a fishery and where there is no other satisfactory solution. There are no powers to undertake a general cull.

Sheep Dips

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the environmental consequences of the use of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips; and if he will make a statement. [9702]

Mr. Rooker: As with all veterinary medicines, no sheep dip is authorised for use unless it meets stringent statutory requirements for safety, quality and efficacy. Safety includes safety of the environment.

Following its review in 1996 of the effectiveness of the certificate of competence scheme for the purchase of organophosphorus sheep dips, the independent scientific Veterinary Products Committee—VPC—which advises Agriculture and Health Ministers on veterinary medicines, has begun a further review of the use of non-OP sheep dips, including synthetic pyrethroid dips. Ministers expect to receive the VPC's advice later this year.

South-west Regional Service Centre

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the (a) target and (b) performance data percentage for each of the services provided by (i) the regional service centre in Exeter and (ii) the Truro office of the regional service centre in each year since 1992. [9658]

Mr. Morley: Performance targets were introduced for some schemes in 1993–94 in "Commitment to Service" as part of the citizens charter arrangements. Further schemes were covered subsequently. Information on the main common agricultural policy and other schemes in the south-west region is as follows:

Performance data for South-west RSC

[1] Due to a combination of changes in FEOGA reimbursement dates and the difficulties of linkage with charter targets and payment dates, a large proportion of payments were made after target date for 1994–95.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the estimated redundancy costs of closing the Truro office of the regional service centre. [9660]

Mr. Morley: It is too early to say what redundancy costs there might be. We are closing the office over a period of six months or so to find alternative employment for as many of the staff as possible and have appointed a resettlement officer to assist with that objective.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many staff were employed in the regional service centre in Exeter on (a) full-time, (b) part-time and (c) temporary contracts in each year since 1992. [9662]

Mr. Morley: The table shows the number of staff in post at Exeter as at 1 April each year from 1992. This includes field inspectors out-stationed from Exeter, including at Truro, but who form part of the Exeter RSC. Data on part-time staff are compiled on a head count basis.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of representations received by his Department (a) supporting and (b) opposing his decision to close the Truro office of the regional service centre. [9657]

Mr. Morely: We have received a petition and a number of letters from organisations and individuals, all opposing the decision to close the Truro office.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many staff were employed on less than (a) £2.50 per hour, (b) £3 per hour, (c) £3.50 per hour, (d) £4 per hour and (e) £4.50 per hour in the regional service centre in Exeter in each year since 1992. [9659]

Mr. Morley: This information could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many staff were made redundant from the regional service centre in Exeter in each year since 1992. [9661]

Mr. Morely: None.

Departmental Reorganisation

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on consultation with respect to departmental reorganisation. [9664]

Mr. Morley: Departmental organisation is a matter for internal decision, bearing in mind the jobs to be done and the need for efficient and economic administration. It is not a subject for public consultation or negotiation, although we consider very carefully representations made by interested bodies and individuals. We do, of course, consult fully with the departmental trade union side on the effects of our decisions on our staff.

Food Chemical Surveys

Mr. Michael John Foster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to ensure that the public are properly informed of the results of food chemical surveys for which his Department has a responsibility; and if he will make a statement. [10072]

Mr. Rooker: The Government believe that the public should be properly informed about all food safety matters. I have therefore decided to make some important changes to improve the reporting of results from our regular food chemical surveys. I plan to increase the amount of information available about surveys and ensure wider publication of the results. For all relevant surveys, the full results for individual samples, including brand names, will be given. Furthermore, I will open up the food chemical surveillance programme to greater public scrutiny by publishing information on surveys to be undertaken.

I endorse fully the view that we must release the results fairly and provide the public with the best possible advice on their significance. These changes will benefit consumers by enabling them to make a more informed choice about the food that they buy. The only surveys which will be excluded from these arrangements are those for which brand names have no bearing on the interpretation of the results, such as dietary surveys involving individual people or exploratory surveys aimed at developing analytical methods.

In addition, I propose to review the current arrangements for reporting surveys on pesticides, veterinary residues and microbiological safety of food, which are administratively different from food chemical surveys. I will report on proposed changes to the House as soon as possible.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Obesity

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what new initiatives her Department is planning in respect of obesity; and if she will make a statement. [8745]

Mr. Worthington: A multi-agency action plan aimed at increasing the levels of physical activity among the sedentary population is presently being developed and people who are obese will be one of the target groups. In addition, "Eating and Health—A food and nutrition strategy for Northern Ireland", which was published in November 1996, aims to improve nutrition including the reduction of obesity in Northern Ireland.

Drumcree March

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the cost of the police action to enable the Drumcree march to take place. [8771]

Mr. Ingram: The cost of the police action to enable the Drumcree march to take place is not currently available. I will write to my hon. Friend when the costing has been finalised.

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in Northern Ireland in each year since 1990; how many maternities there were in each year; and how many multiple births in each category were conceived as a result of (i) in vitro fertilisation, (ii) gamete intra-fallopian transfer and (iii) other forms of assisted conception. [8178]

Mr. Worthington: The information requested is set out in the table:

Type	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	[1]1996
Sets of Gamete intra-fallopian transfer (GIFT) was available in Northern Ireland only in 1986 and 1987.

WALES

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) on what occasions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have refused to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings with hon. Members to discuss matters relating to interests registered by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests; [8061]

(2) if he will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department refuse requests from hon. Members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8058]

Mr. Ron Davies: I do not intend to hold or attend any meetings solely for the purpose of discussing Members' registered interests.

Welsh Language Teaching

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to ensure that Welsh will be a core subject under the national curriculum at key stage 4 from 1999. [8913]

Mr. Hain: The White Paper "Building Excellent Schools Together", Cm 3701, published on 8 July, re affirmed the manifesto commitment to the teaching of Welsh in schools in Wales. Welsh is compulsory at key stage 4 in Welsh-speaking schools, and will remain so. The regulations to make it a compulsory part of the curriculum for 14 to 16-year-olds in non-Welsh-speaking schools from September 1999 are already in place. I regard it as essential that all schools should now be actively preparing themselves for the full implementation of national curriculum requirements at key stage 4 from that date, and that their school development plans and prospectuses should set out what they are doing in that regard.

There are 10 secondary schools in Wales that do not currently come within the scope of the regulations to make Welsh compulsory from 1999. The Curriculum and Assessment Authority for Wales will be consulting on a proposal to bring them into line with all other non-Welsh-speaking schools from that date.

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in Wales in each year since 1990; and how many multiple births in each category were conceived as a result of (i) in vitro fertilisation, (ii) gamete intra-fallopian transfer and (iii) other forms of assisted conception. [8176]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The available information on multiple maternities in Wales recorded by the Office for National Statistics is as follows:

	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
Twins	397	416	423	399	431	417	436
Triplets	11	6	8	8	11	14	12
Quadruplets	1	0	0	1	0	1	1

Figures relating to multiple births following assisted conception are only available for the United Kingdom as a whole and are contained in the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority annual report, copies of which are held in the Library of the House.

School Pupils (Exclusion)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many children with statements of special educational needs were permanently excluded from schools in Wales in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and what each figure was as a proportion of the total number of children permanently excluded from schools. [8723]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is not held centrally.

Quangos

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the contracts of Secretary of State appointees to quangos expire by April 1999. [9552]

Mr. Ron Davies: Of the appointments to public bodies which I make, singly or jointly with other Ministers, 399 are due to expire before 1 April 1999. I announced on 13 June 1997 the new procedures for making public appointments in Wales, and I will write to my right hon. Friend with details of that announcement.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the management costs of all-Welsh quangos. [9556]

Mr. Davies: I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply that I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney (Mr. Rowlands) on 4 June 1997, Official Report, column 204.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what action he proposes to reduce unnecessary quango administrative costs before April 1999; [9551]

(2) what action he will take to abolish quangos before April 1999; [9555]

(3) what action he proposes better to coordinate the Welsh Development Agency, the Land Authority for Wales and Development Board for Rural Wales before April 1999. [9557]

Mr. Davies: I will announce my proposals in the White Paper, which is to be published tomorrow.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what studies have been undertaken of unnecessary quango administrative costs; and if he will place them in the Library. [9553]

Mr. Davies: All non-departmental public bodies are subject to a comprehensive review at least every five years. The reviews test firstly whether an NDPB's function is required at all and if so, the scope for contracting out, privatising or transferring any of the functions to another body. The second stage considers the whole system of financial management and control, including administration costs, within the body.

Copies of the action plans of the financial management and policy reviews are available in the Library of the House.

Lead Water Pipes

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with Dwr Cymru in relation to the rate at which lead piping in the water supply system will be replaced (a) between the main road tapping point up to the customer's premises and (b) in the public mains supply. [9914]

Mr. Ron Davies: On 8 July, the drinking water inspectorate, which advises me on drinking water quality matters, published a report on "Nitrates, Pesticides and Lead 1995 and 1996" which describes the actions being taken by the water companies to reduce levels of lead in water supplies. The measures taken include the replacement of lead communication pipes and table 5.8 in that report includes the numbers of such pipes replaced by Dwr Cymru in 1995 and 1996. In addition, Dwr Cymru's response to the Government's 10-point plan launched at the water summit describes the grants available from the company to its customers toward the cost of replacing lead supply pipes and plumbing. Copies of both reports are in the Library of the House.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will review the eligibility criteria of the all work test, with particular reference to its application to people suffering from chronic fatigue syndrome; and if she will make a statement. [3345]

Mr. Denham: We are aware of concerns about the way incapacity benefit all work tests are applied to sufferers of chronic fatigue syndrome. As part of the general review of social security provision, we will look at a number of eligibility issues, including those surrounding the all work test, and seek to ensure that the test provides a fair assessment of incapacity for benefit purposes.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will review the length of the transition period between a failed all work test and the subsequent withdrawal of incapacity benefit. [3346]

Mr. Denham: The Government are committed to looking across the range of current social security provision to ensure that it meets our objectives for a modern welfare system to take us into the next century. A key priority will be to provide more support to enable people to make the transition from benefit into employment. In this context, we will look at what changes are necessary to ensure that the particular needs of people who have disabilities, or who have lost contact with the labour market through long-term sickness, are provided for.

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people in the United Kingdom have received letters confirming the award of reduced earnings allowance (a) for life and (b) until a specified date beyond the date on which the benefit was abolished; [5378]

(2) if she will issue a circular letter to hon. Members to assist them in giving advice to constituents who receive letters from her Department confirming the award of reduced earnings allowance for life, or until a specified date beyond the date on which the benefit was abolished. [5377]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested.

Any of the 24,000 over pension age reduced earnings allowance recipients who transferred to retirement allowance after March 1996 may have had earlier letters advising that their award would continue for life or a specified period.

We are currently reviewing the arrangements for the transfer of REA recipients to RA and will consider whether a circular letter to hon. Members would be appropriate when that review is completed.

National Insurance

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the additional revenue resulting from the abolition of the upper earnings limit on the payment of national insurance contributions. [5458]

Mr. Denham: An estimated £4.05 billion would be raised in a full year if the upper earnings limit on employees' class 1 contributions and the upper profits limit on class 4 contributions paid by self-employed people were removed and about 3.75 million people would become liable to pay more contributions.

The figures assume that the current 10 per cent. class 1 contribution rate would apply to earnings above the present upper earnings limit, the current 6 per cent. class 4 contribution rate would apply to profits above the present upper profits limit and that an upper earnings limit would remain in place for the calculation of employee and employer contracted-out rebates.

Asbestos-related Conditions

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications made to the War Pensions Agency in respect of asbestos-related conditions have not yet been determined. [6485]

Mr. Denham: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many war pensioners are in receipt of (a) a pension and (b) a gratuity in respect of (i) pleural plaques, (ii) diffuse pleural thickening, (iii) asbestosis, (iv) mesothelioma, (v) lung cancer and (iv) other conditions attributable to asbestos exposure during their service in (1) the Royal Navy, (2) the Royal Air Force and (3) the Army; [6493]

(2) if she will list the (a) highest, (b) lowest and (c) average pension and gratuity paid for asbestos-related conditions over the last five years in respect of (i) pleural plaques, (ii) diffuse pleural thickening, (iii) asbestosis, (iv) mesothelioma and (v) lung cancer. [6491]

Mr. Denham: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Retirement Pensions

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what assessment she has made of the impact on income of paying retirement pensions on the first Monday after a 65th birthday and not on the day on which a pensioner reaches pensionable age; [6850]

(2) what representations she has received in respect of financial loss for the days before the pay day following retirement; and if she will make a statement; [6848]

(3) what plans she has to review the payment of pensions on a weekly basis; and if she will make a statement; [6847]

(4) what estimate she has made of the annual cost of paying the retirement pension on the day on which a pensioner reaches pensionable age. [6849]

Mr. Denham: The Government are committed to reviewing all the main areas of insecurity that affect pensioners. The key objectives of the review will be that pensioners should have an adequate income in retirement, that they should share fairly in rising national prosperity and that public finances should be both sustainable and affordable.

I have received a number of representations from hon. Members on the issue of retirement pension pay days. Retirement pension is a weekly benefit paid in advance from the first pay day, usually a Monday, on or after the 65th birthday. In assessing the impact on income, account needs to be taken of the fact that, although retirement pension is paid in advance, income received immediately preceding retirement, such as earnings and most social security benefits, are generally paid in arrears. Most pensioners are therefore entitled to a week's pension within a week of receiving their last income.

Account also needs to be taken of the fact that, as a consequence of the pension being paid in advance, any change of circumstances which would result in reduction of benefit, such as hospitalisation, is effective only from the next pay day. In addition, no benefit is recoverable in respect of the week in which the pensioner dies.

The estimated gross annual cost of paying retirement pension for the days between state pension age and the first retirement pension pay day is £22 million.

We will announce shortly our pensions review which will examine all aspects of the basic pension and its value. We will consider any representations that are submitted on this issue.

We will retain the basic state pension as the foundation of pension provision, increasing it at least in line with prices.

Notes
1. Estimate provided by the Government Actuary's Department. This cost is in 1997–98 prices and is the gross cost to the national insurance fund. Some £1 million of this cost would be offset by reduced payments of widow's benefit where cases transfer from widow's benefit to retirement pension.

Cyclical Social Security

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list (a) the categories of people in receipt of cyclical social security, (b) the number of recipients in each category and (c) the total amount paid or forecast to be paid for each year between 1995 and 2002. [6809]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Our objectives is to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives. One of our first steps is to focus on helping people off welfare and into work.

The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

1. Figures for expenditure have been taken from the 1997 social security departmental report, tables 1, 4 and 5, and are given in £ millions. Estimates of expenditure for the years 2000–01 and 2001–02 are not available.
2. Figures for case load are based on data collected in February and are given in thousands. They are consistent with those given in tables 6 and 7 in the 1997 social security departmental report. Figures split by broad groups of recipients are not available for years after 1995–96 on the same basis. It is estimated that in 1995–96 135,000 people received both income support and unemployment benefit.
3. Figures given may not sum due to rounding.
4. Income support paid to a person aged 60 and above is treated as part of the social security control total—i.e. it is not cyclical social security—irrespective of whether that person would also fit one of the other categories listed in the table.

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her Department's definition of cyclical social security. [6810]

Mr. Bradley: Cyclical social security is defined as the jobseeker's allowance and income support paid to people under the age of 60.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total amount paid out in housing benefit in (a) 1974, (b) 1979, (c) 1988, (d) 1992, (e) 1993, (f) 1994, (g) 1995 and (h) 1996. [6680]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Our objective is to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives. We will develop a system that supports work, savings and honesty.

The information is set out in the table:

Housing Benefit expenditure	£ million
1974–75	[1]237
1979–80	[1]1,238
1988–89	3,763
1992–93	7,901
1993–94	9,213
1994–95	10,120
1995–96	10,885
1996–97	11,523

1. The current housing benefit scheme was introduced in April 1988. The 1974–75 and 1979–80 figures are an approximation of the housing benefit expenditure component of supplementary benefit.
2. Figures for 1988–89 to 1996–97 are taken from the 1997 DSS departmental report and show total expenditure paid by local authorities in the relevant years.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on her Department's timetable for dealing with the year 2000 computer problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the proected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7135]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The central information and technology unit, CITU, through its agent the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency, CCTA, has set a model timetable and framework for Government Departments to follow to ensure that business-critical systems are year 2000 compliant and thoroughly tested well in advance of 2000. The Department is on course to meet this timetable.

The Department of Social Security has established a year 2000 project led by the Information Technology Services Agency, ITSA, to co-ordinate the extensive activity across DSS. An ITSA director, reporting to the chief executive, leads the work. There is a project manager and a core team of five staff to take the project forward within the CCTA-approved framework. In addition, each business unit has appointed co-ordinators and staff to work with the project which is working within the CCTA-approved framework for managing IT projects. The departmental board, chaired by the permanent secretary, is receiving regular reports on progress.

The project is on schedule. The Department's main computer systems have now been fully analysed for year 2000 compliance and plans to complete the necessary changes are being implemented. All the major benefit and recording computer systems supporting the day-to-day delivery of social security will be amended by the end of 1998 to permit a full year's processing before 2000. Like any large organisation, the Department also makes full use of a wide range of personal computers and commercial software packages. We are working closely with external suppliers to assess the year 2000 compliance of these products and other non-IT areas.

The total projected cost to the Department has been estimated at £30 million. A further review is to be carried out at the end of August 1997 to enable updated, costed plans to be produced in October.

Council Tax Benefit

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to alter the assumption on income from capital in calculating council tax benefit from the current rate of £1 per week for each £250 held over £3,000. [7241]

Mr. Keith Bradley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 2 July, Official Report, columns 205–206.

Family Credit

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many households claimed family credit in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [7181]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Work is the best form of welfare for people of working age. We will develop a system that supports work, savings and honesty. Our objective is to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives.

The information is in the table.

Year	Family credit case load
November 1992	458,800
November 1993	525,000
November 1994	584,300
November 1995	648,700
November 1996	725,300

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest 100 cases.
2. Figures relate to the family credit live case load at 30 November each year.
3. Case load represents the number of families receiving family credit. If a household contains more than one family receiving family credit—for example, lone parents in a shared household—that household would be counted more than once.
4. Figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample and subject to a degree of sampling error.

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what occasions (a) Minister and (b) officials have refused to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings with hon. Members to discuss matters relating to interests registered by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8057]

Ms Harman: The first report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life, Cm 2850, made it clear that, when Members are meeting Ministers or others on topics in which they have an interest, the onus is on the Member to declare that interest not the Minister to know—paragraph 63 of Cm 2850. It is not practicable for Ministers and officials, among their other duties, to vet requests for meetings against the Register of Members' Interests.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department refuse requests from hon. Members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8054]

Ms Harman: The first report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life, Cm 2850, recognised the value of enabling Members to retain interests outside the House, provided these were properly declared both in the Register of Members' Interests and on other occasions. Subject to these requirements, and to the rules of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, Members are free to seek meetings with Ministers and officials, who will consider such requests alongside the many other approaches from individuals and organisations concerned to press their own interests or those of others.

Commercial Lobbyists

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department have met commercial lobbyists to discuss matters relating to the business of her Department; and if she will introduce a register of such meetings; [8055]

(2) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department have attended meetings with organisations representing (i) commercial and (ii) non-commercial interests organised by commercial lobbying firms; and if she will introduce a register of such meetings. [8056]

Ms Harman: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained in response to my hon. Friend the Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 2 June, Official Report, column 99, Ministers and officials in the Department receive deputations from many groups who are concerned to press their own interests or those of their clients, which Ministers and officials take due care to consider within the wider public interest and Government policy. As it is not practicable to distinguish particular groups as lobbyists, the Department cannot keep a register of such meetings.

Uxbridge Benefits Agency

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if she will make a statement on the current proposals to move staff from the Uxbridge Benefits Agency office to the Harrow Benefits Agency office; [9332]

(2) if she will extend the current consultation period for the proposed move of staff from the Uxbridge Benefits Agency office to the Harrow Benefits Agency office; and if she will make a statement; [9333]

(3) what estimate she has made of the amount of money which will be saved by the transferral of Benefits Agency activities form the Uxbridge Benefits Agency office to the Harrow Benefits Agency office; and if she will make a statement. [9334]

Mr. Field: One of our key aims is that delivery of service should be simpler and more efficient. To maintain and improve the level of service while keeping within announced spending totals, managers are proposing to move the processing of benefits from the Benefits Agency office at Uxbridge to the Harrow office but, as the hon. Member will see, the Benefits Agency guarantees that the range of services offered to the public will be unaltered. Queries on operational mattes are for the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, Peter Mathison. I have asked him to reply to the hon. Member directly and for his reply to be published with the answer.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Mark Oaten, dated 18 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions concerning the Benefits Agency (BA) offices at Harrow and Uxbridge.

The BA is currently undertaking a reappraisal of its services and the way they are delivered, in order to maintain and improve the level of service whilst keeping within the spending targets that have been set for the next two years.

The agency is committed to ensuring that people will get the help they need to claim the benefits they are entitled to. The Chilterns Area Directorate remains committed to providing a high level of service to its customers and equal access to the benefit system for all members of the public.

It is proposed to move processing staff from Uxbridge to the Harrow site. The two offices are only 11 miles apart with excellent transport links. The range of services offered to the public will be unaltered. The BA would normally only consult with outside organisations in cases where there would be a significant change in services provided. In this case, in addition to consulting staff, outside organisations were consulted, as a matter of good practice. There are no plans therefore to extend the consultation period.

Staff have been aware of the proposals since November 1996, they were disclosed to local customer organisations earlier this year and have also been reported in the local press. A letter was issued to local Members of Parliament and outside organisations on 9 July, asking for comments by 30 July, a copy of which is attached. All comments and representations will be taken in account before any decision is made.

It is expected that by making better use of existing building space, this project will save £7.9 million of public money, based on a 20 year business case. In the first 5 years the savings will be on average £370k per year.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Text of consultation letter

Dear

I am writing to let you know about proposed changes to the way we process and maintain claims to benefit in the Harrow and Hillingdon offices.

At this point I would like to reassure you that this would be an internal reorganisation and does not involve the closure of any public caller facilities.

Current Position

Until recently we have always had a full claims processing and claims maintenance operation at both Colham House, Uxbridge, and King's House, Harrow.

However, when the new Job Seekers Allowance was introduced in October last year, we moved the processing and maintenance of claims for unemployed customers into the five local Job Centres. This is a more practical arrangement as it means that these customers can deal with both job search and benefits issues at the same time.

With our staff now spread over seven sites (5 Job Centres and 2 Benefits Agency offices) the building space at Colham House and King's House is not being used efficiently, and I have to look at ways of rationalising our estate to make the best use of resources and to ensure value for money.

Proposed Changes

We propose to move all remaining processing and claims maintenance work from Colham House, Uxbridge to King's House, Harrow starting in November this year. There will be no change to the arrangements for personal callers who go to our Uxbridge office, and staff remaining at Colham House will be able to deal with all enquiries and make Crisis Loan payments as they do now.

Advances in Information Technology allow us to process claims off-site, and staff are linked by computer terminals and a telephone network to allow them instant access to customer information to answer queries and give advice.

As most of the contact we have with customers is by phone or correspondence, the changes would be largely invisible to your constituents. In fact we would expect to be able to raise the quality of the service we provide because of the increased viability gained from the merger of processing work into a larger unit.

In the longer term I would also be looking to improve caller facilities at Uxbridge by vacating Colham House completely and moving to more suitable premises in the town centre.

I am discussing these proposals with our staff and customer organisations. I welcome your views and would appreciate a response by 30 July 1997.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely

Jane Manning (Mrs)

Vaccine Damage Compensation Scheme

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on her Department's review of the operation of the vaccine damage compensation scheme, with specific reference to (a) the 80 per cent. disability rule and (b) the six-year rule; and what groups and individuals her Department intends to consult in connection with the review. [8830]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Lancaster and Wyre (Mr. Dawson) on 17 July, Official Report, column 242.

Welfare to Work

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the number of single parents in Warrington, North who will benefit from the Government's welfare-to-work policy. [9212]

Mr. Keith Bradley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State today launched the historic new deal for lone parents, fulfilling the Government's manifesto commitment to help lone parents get off benefit and into work. In the first phase, up to 40,000 lone parents will be contacted over eight areas throughout the UK and offered help in finding work. Up to 4,300 lone parents will be contacted in north Cheshire, which includes Warrington, North. The programme will be rolled out nationally from October 1998.

The new deal for lone parents marks a radical new approach to welfare and is central to our plans for long-term reform of the welfare state. A unique feature of the scheme is the use of new technology to help co-ordinate benefit, employment and career services. This will start in Cambridge and later roll out across the other areas. From today, lone parents will be given a helping hand up into work, not just a hand out of benefit. Lone parents on income support with school age children will get their own personal adviser who will help them develop their own individual plan of action on job search, training and child care. The personal adviser will explain how the lone parent can be better off in work than on benefit and help them with family credit.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to re-examine the entitlement of persons receiving disability living allowance. [7148]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 7 July 1997]: Our aim is to restore confidence in the social security system by having systems which promote honesty and integrity and ensure that people are receiving their correct entitlement.

Over the next two to three years, in addition to the normal maintenance of disability living allowance claims, the Benefits Agency will be making inquiries by post and through home visits of around 425,000 DLA recipients to establish whether the correct amount of benefit is being paid.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Policy Reviews

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each departmental policy review presently in progress or scheduled, (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10191]

Mr. Straw: The information requested for reviews which have already been announced is set out in the table.

Review	(a) Purpose	(b) expected completion date
Immigration detention policy, Official Report, 23 June, column 358.	Internal review of all aspects of immigration detention policy	Autumn 1997
Vulnerable and intimidated witnesses, Official Report, 3 July, column 236.	Interdepartmental review to look at further ways of assisting vulnerable witnesses—such as victims of rape and of domestic violence—and providing witnesses with greater protection from intimidation.	Aims to report to Ministers by end 1997
Prison and Probation Services, Official Report, 16 July, columns 172–73.	To look at ways in which the better integration of the two services could improve their performance and effectiveness. The review will include looking at the structure and organisation of the Probation Service, to complement the review of the Prison Service which is already under way.	Initial report by end 1997

In addition, my Department will be playing a full part in the Government's comprehensive spending review, details of which will be announced shortly.

Referendums

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria the Government use to determine whether constitutional changes should be submitted to a referendum. [10206]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Legislation is currently before Parliament to enable referendums to be held on the Government's proposals for devolution to Scotland and Wales.

We have also indicated that referendums will be held on the proposed strategic authority for London, on the voting system for elections to the House of Commons and in the regions on the questions of whether regional government should be established.

Our manifesto made it clear that Britain would not join a single currency unless the people had said yes in a referendum.

Other referendums may also be held when the Government and Parliament consider it appropriate.

Abbas Radiom Case

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedural changes in respect of appeals concerning right of abode he plans following the European Court ruling in the Abbas Radiom case; and if he will make a statement. [10212]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Special Immigration Appeals Commission Bill, which is currently before Parliament, would give a right of appeal to European Economic Area nationals in the small number of cases where the Secretary of State has decided that their exclusion, removal or departure from the United Kingdom would be conducive to the public good. There is currently no right of appeal in such cases.

Dogs (Experimentation)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 4 June, Official Report, column 175, how many of the project licences issued under the Animal (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 to experiment on non-purpose-bred dogs in 1995 covered procedures classified as being of (a) mild, (b) moderate and (c) substantial severity; at what kind of establishments these procedures were carried out; what was the nature of the research; and if these dogs were obtained directly from individual owners who had kept them as pets. [9005]

Mr. George Howarth: The 66 non-purpose-bred dogs which were acquired from non-designated sources in the United Kingdom were used under four different project licences; three were of mild severity and one of moderate. In all cases, the work was carried out in veterinary schools.

A variety of breeds was used for studies relevant to the specific breed or type of dog involved. Two of the projects involved research into reproductive hormone levels in dogs. The third was a study of inherited diseases in dogs and the last was an animal welfare study to improve post-operative care of dogs undergoing clinical veterinary surgery.

The majority of procedures involved taking blood samples for subsequent analysis. The remainder involved administration of analgesia. In all cases, the owner's consent to use the dogs was obtained. The dogs were later certified as fit to be discharged from the controls of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 and were returned to their owners.

Violent Offences

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the main types of offences which fall into the category of violent offences. [9073]

Mr. Michael: Violent crime comprises the offences groups of violence against the person, sexual offences and robbery. A breakdown of the offence classifications within each offence group is given in the table.

Violence against the person

Homicide—murder, manslaughter and infanticide

Attempted murder

Threat or conspiracy to murder

Child destruction

Causing death by dangerous driving or careless driving when under the influence of drink or drugs

Causing death by aggravated vehicle taking

Wounding or other act endangering life

Endangering railway passenger

Endangering life at sea

Other wounding

Abandoning a child under the age of two years

Child abduction

Procuring illegal abortion

Concealment of birth.

Sexual offences

Buggery

Indecent assault on a male

Indecency between males

Rape of a female

Rape of a male

Indecent assault on a female

Unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under 13

Unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under 16

Incest

Procuration

Abduction

Bigamy

Gross indecency with a child.

Robbery

Robbery.

Private Sector Housing (Neighbours)

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce measures to protect residents in the private housing sector from intimidation, harassment and nuisance from their neighbours. [9172]

Mr. Michael: We intend to introduce community safety orders in the Crime and Disorder Bill. Under our proposals, courts will be given the power to grant such orders on the application of a local authority or the police. The order will apply to a named individual or individuals and would require that person or persons to desist from specified anti-social behaviour. A breach of the order will be a criminal offence which would carry stiff penalties—including the possibility of imprisonment. An order will be able to protect the residents of private houses from anti-social behaviour by their neighbours in the same way that it will protect other people.

Employment Advertisements

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how often since 1992 his Department has been responsible for employment advertisements which contained age restrictions upon those who could apply. [9502]

Mr. Straw: Recruitment advertisements for assistant immigration officers include a minimum age limit of 18 and advertisements for Prison Officers include minimum and maximum age limits of 20 and 50 respectively. In addition, advertisements for psychological assistants in the Prison Service and for candidates for the prison officer accelerated promotion scheme included age restrictions until 1995.

Apart from these exceptions, it is not Home Office policy for employment advertisements to include age restrictions. It is possible that a small number of individual advertisements since 1992 may have contained age restrictions, but this could be checked only at disproportionate cost.

Road Rage

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many motorists were convicted of offences associated with road rage in the greater London area during the last 12 months. [9294]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is not available. "Road Rage" is not an offence covered by separate statute and motorists involved in criminal behaviour are likely to be charged with an offence appropriate to the circumstances in each case. None of these can be separately identified, as the statistics do not include details of the circumstances.

Immigrants (Employment Restrictions)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times employers have been investigated under section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996; in how many cases employers have been prosecuted under this act; and what level of fines were imposed in these cases. [9490]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The approach of the Immigration Service towards section 8 of the 1996 Asylum and Immigration Act is that if, during the course of normal operational activity, an employer is found to have breached section 8 they will be advised of its provisions and issued with a warning letter. The warning letter informs them that if they continue to offend consideration will be given to prosecution. There is no central record of the number of warning letters issued and there have been no prosecutions under section 8 to date.

Immigration (Former Yugoslavia)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his Department's policy in respect of those who entered the United Kingdom under the 1,000 quota rule from the former Yugoslavia; and if he will allow them to regularise their status in the United Kingdom. [9852]

Mr. Mike O' Brien: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Goole (Mr. Cawsey) on 16 July, Official Report, columns 176–78.

Special Constables

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Police Federation about representation of special constables following the disbandment of NASCO. [9869]

Mr. Michael: I have not yet discussed the special constabulary with the Police Federation. I am aware that the working group on the special constabulary could not find a satisfactory answer to the question of representation and suggested that the Home Office meet the relevant bodies and representatives of the special constabulary to explore whether some form of formal representation for specials would be possible. This will be included in our work following the working group's report. I have an open mind on the issue and will seek the views of the Police Federation and other groups in due course.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the percentage of special constables who have left the force in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [9844]

Mr. Michael: The in-post and wastage figures for special constables over the past five years are as follows:

Year ending	In-post	Resignations	Percentage
31 December 1992	19,243	3,982	20.7
31 December 1993	20,573	4,224	20.5
31 March 1995	20,026	4,474	22.3
31 March 1996	19,736	4,488	22.7
31 March 1997[1]	19,836	4,169	21.0

[1] The figures for 1996–97 are provisional.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the advantages of providing special constables with a retainer as an incentive to remain on the force. [9846]

Mr. Michael: A pilot scheme, whereby special constables could qualify for a bounty payment of £200 on completion of 125 hours in a six-month period, was conducted in Dorset between 1991 and 1993. The results were inconclusive. While the number of hours performed by the specials increased slightly, the scheme had no effect on recruitment or retention. There is therefore no evidence to confirm that a retainer would have a marked effect on the wastage rate.

Nevertheless, we will be considering the question of a bounty payment following the report of the working group on the special constabulary. The working group was against such a payment, but the Audit Commission, in its "Streetwise" report of last year, was in favour of retainers. These views will be taken into account and the police staff and local authority associations consulted before decisions are made.

Police forces are tackling the wastage rate in other ways with the support of the working group's recommendations and over £9 million of Government grant has been provided during the past two years to improve the training, equipment, and terms and conditions of specials. This is already having an effect as the number of specials leaving the service in 1996–97 is down by 319 on the previous year.

Police National Computer

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to update the police national computer directly from courts. [9840]

Mr. Michael: The technical options by which court results could be entered directly onto the police national computer are being investigated by the committee for the co-ordination of the criminal justice system, under the direction of the cross-departmental trials issues group. It is too early yet to arrive at any conclusions.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Employment Advertisements

Ms Perham: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, how often since 1992 the Commission has been responsible for employment advertisements which contained age restrictions upon those who could apply. [9562]

Mr. Kirkwood: It is not the policy of the House of Commons to include age restrictions on eligibility in employment advertisements. The Establishments Office of the House, which is responsible for advising Departments on the content of employment advertisements, is not aware of any instance of age restrictions appearing in an advertisement since 1992.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, how many and what percentage of employees in the House of Commons are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin, broken down by grade. [9561]

Mr. Kirkwood : The ethnic monitoring of staff employed by the Commission has been in place since 1988. This is on a voluntary basis and not all staff choose to respond to the ethnic monitoring questionnaire. The numbers and approximate percentages, by grade, of employees of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin are:

Grades	Total number of Staff in Post	(a) Number	(a) Percentage	(b) Number	(b) Percentage
2–5	61	1	Approximately 2	Nil	—
6–12	362	4	1	Less than 1
12 and Below	538	6	1	13	2
Parliamentary Works Directorate Craft Grades	83	2	2	3	4
Refreshment Department Catering Grades	266	10	4	20	8

Grades have been grouped to protect confidentiality.

Telephone Number

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire representing the House of Commons Commission if the Commission will consider introducing an 0345 phone number for the House. [9647]

Mr. Kirkwood: There are no plans currently to do so, since it would commit the House to bearing a large part of the costs of any call received on such a number.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Housing

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he is having with London borough councils in respect of new proposals to build houses; and if he will make a statement. [9097]

Mr Raynsford: The Government's capital receipts Initiative will make additional resources available to local authorities to help meet housing need. In some London boroughs this might entail support for the building of new houses in partnership with registered social landlords. The Government are currently consulting on its proposals and we look forward to receiving local authorities comments.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what support his Department has given to the development and commercialisation of the technology described in FP50 over the last 10 years. [8984]

Angela Eagle: Higher efficiency motors have been available for a number of years and my Department recommended their use. However, sales were very low because they were about 25 per cent. more expensive than an equivalent standard motor.

To overcome this cost barrier my Department supported, through the energy efficiency best practice programme, a club research project that lead to the development of a higher efficiency motor that did not carry a premium price. The project, managed by motor manufacturer Brook Hansen, cost £12 million and the Government's contribution was £4 million. More recently, further support has been provided to disseminate the results of the project via a range of publications and promotional events. We are also supporting the European Commission's work to promote the use of higher efficiency motors.

The new motors are currently saving industry around £2 million per year in reduced electricity costs. It is estimated that these savings will eventually reach about £120 million per year, when there is a much greater range of models available and other manufacturers catch up. In terms of reducing greenhouse gas emissions, savings of £120 million wold equate to a reduction of some 3 million tonnes of carbon dioxide per year.

Air Quality (Brent Cross)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are the present air quality standards in the vicinity of Brent Cross shopping centre, with reference to (a) carbon monoxide, (b) nitrogen oxide, (c) nitrogen dioxide and (d) particulate material below 10 microns; what are the pertinent European limits for (a) to (d); and if he will make a statement. [9185]

Angela Eagle: As part of its national air quality monitoring programme, my Department, in collaboration with local authorities, monitors air pollutants using automatic and non automatic methods across London. The two automatic monitoring stations closest to the Brent Cross shopping centre are (i) an urban background station in the Kingsbury area of the London boroughs of Brent and (ii) a roadside station situated next to the A41 Great North Way at Swiss Cottage, in the London borough of Camden. The results of this monitoring for carbon monoxide, nitrogen oxide, nitrogen dioxide and particulate material below 10 microns, measured during 1996, are presented in the Table below.

Site	Carbon monoxide—max 8 hour running mean	Nitrogen oxide—98th percentile of hourly means	Nitrogen dioxide—98th percentile of hourly means	Particles (PM10) max 24 hour average
Brent	8.00 ppm	191 ppb	55 ppb	61 ug/m3
Camden	Not measured	397 ppb	57 ppb	77 ug/m3

My Department also monitors nitrogen dioxide using non-automatic methods, in collaboration with local authorities, in its national diffusion tube survey. The results from the sites nearest to the shopping centre, for 1995, are given in the table.

London Borough	Location	Site type	Annual mean (ppb)
Barnet	158 Burnt Oak Broadway, Edgware	Kerbside	21
Barnet	32 Sanders Lane, Mill Hill	Background	18
Barnet	158 Burnt Oak Broadway, Edgware	Intermediate	17
Barnet	42 Lytton Road, New Barnet	Background	17
Brent	Abbydale Road, Alperton, Wembley	Kerbside	29
Brent	Stanley Avenue, Wembley	Background	20
Brent	66 Lodore Gardens, Kingsbury	Background	20
Brent	349–357 High Road, Wembley	Intermediate	21
Camden	Camden Town Hall, Judd Street	Kerbside	33
Camden	Church Hall, Wakefield Street	Background	19
Camden	St. Andrew's United Reform Church, Finchley Road	Intermediate	23
Camden	9–11 Froghal Way	Background	18

European Community Directive 85/203/EEC sets a limit value for nitrogen dioxide of 104.6 ppb as a 98th percentile of hourly means. There are currently no European limits for nitrogen oxide, carbon monoxide or particulate material below 10 microns.

Asbestos

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions (a) have taken place and (b) are planned between his Department and the Health and Safety Executive on the use and development of safe alternatives to asbestos. [9190]

Angela Eagle: As my hon. Friend is aware from the Adjournment debate on 18 June, I have asked the Health and Safety Commission to advise me urgently on a mechanism for introducing a domestic ban on the import, supply and use of asbestos. Safe and effective alternative non-asbestos products are available for some, but possibly not all, uses. The Health and Safety Executive is currently researching the situation with other Government Departments and industry. The commission is consulting widely before giving its formal advice.

Green Ministers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the green Ministers appointed to date in other Government Departments; when he intends green Ministers to have been appointed in all departments; and if he will make a statement. [9494]

Angela Eagle: The committee of green Ministers is chaired by his right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment. Other members of the committee have been appointed as follows:

Department	Minister
Agriculture, Fisheries and Food	Jeff Rooker MP
Chancellor's Departments	Dawn Primarolo MP
Culture, Media and Sport	Mark Fisher MP
Defence	John Spellar MP
Education and Employment	Dr. Kim Howells MP
Environment, Transport and the Regions	Glenda Jackson MP
Foreign and Commonwealth Office	Derek Fatchett MP
Health	Tessa Jowell MP
Home Office	Mike O'Brien MP
International Development	George Foulkes MP
Law Officers	The Lord Falconer QC
Lord Chancellor's	Geoff Hoon MP
Northern Ireland Office	The Lord Dubs
Public Service and Science	Peter Kilfoyle MP
Scottish Office	The Lord Sewel CBE
Social Security	Keith Bradley MP
Trade and Industry	John Battle MP
Welsh Office	Win Griffiths MP

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many and what percentage of civil servants in each of the grades 1 to 5 in his Department are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [9564]

Angela Eagle: There are no civil servants employed in my Department in the grades 1 to 5 who are of (a) Asian origin or (b) Afro-Caribbean origin.

Mobile Homes and Caravan Parks

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy to encourage local planning authorities to allow the provision of residential wardens' accommodation at mobile home and caravan parks. [9171]

Mr. Raynsford: Development proposals for on-site residential accommodation for wardens are considered within the framework of Government policy as set out in planning policy guidance notes. PPG7 on "The Countryside—Environmental Quality and Economic and Social Development" restricts the provision of new dwellings in the open countryside in order to protect rural landscapes and the character of the countryside. There is scope for local planning authorities to grant permission for isolated dwellings in the countryside in exceptional circumstances, for example where these are essential for agricultural or forestry workers. The Government have not been persuaded that exceptions should be made to existing policy other than in certain exceptional cases provided for in existing guidance PPG7.

Policy Reviews

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each departmental policy review presently in progress or scheduled, (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10195]

Angela Eagle: The Department is undertaking a fundamental review of transport policy whose purpose is to lead a White Paper on an integrated transport policy. We anticipate the White Paper will be published next spring. A review of compulsory competitive tendering regulations and guidance, which seeks to identify changes which will improve the existing regime pending its replacement by a duty of best value, is due to be completed shortly.

Housing Development, Poulton Le Fylde

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review his decision in respect of the housing development at Briarfield Nurseries, Blackpool old road, Poulton Le Fylde, Lancashire. [10102]

Mr. Raynsford: The Secretary of State has no plans to do so.

Chemical Hazards

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the nature of the proposed directive on the protection of employees from chemical risks; what procedure it will be subject to; and if he will make a statement. [10201]

Angela Eagle: The proposed directive on chemical agents would establish minimum standards for the control of hazardous chemicals in the workplace. It is based on article 118A and is subject to the co-operation procedure. It will be a directive under the framework directive 89/391/EEC.

The UK has secured all its objectives on the proposal which reached political agreement at the Social Affairs Council on 27 June. It is likely to reach common position formally in September 1997 and then be subject to a second reading by the European Parliament towards the end of 1997.

The UK already has comprehensive regulations covering the health effects of chemicals—principally the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1994—which is one of the most advanced regimes in Europe. The UK has therefore supported this proposal in principle, believing that it would fill an important gap in EU legislation and raise standards elsewhere in Europe.

Definitive Maps and Statements

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what amendments he proposes to make to the guidance on the interpretation of definitive statements in circular 2/93. [10383]

Mr. Meacher: We have revised the guidance in circular 2/93 which deals with the interpretation of information recorded on statements which accompany definitive maps. We have written today to the local government associations and others with an interest to advise them that paragraph 31 of the circular has been replaced with the following.

> "Information recorded in the definitive statement about position or width or as limitations or conditions affecting a public right of way is conclusive evidence of position, width, limitations or conditions. Information may be recorded in the definitive statement which, in practice, restricts the use of the way by those whose rights to use it are recorded on the definitive map. Where such information is not about position or width, or is not recorded as a limitation or condition, highway authorities should examine the evidence in each case in order to resolve the inconsistencies."

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what advice he proposes to issue on definitive maps and statements in the light of recent High Court judgments. [10384]

Mr. Meacher: We have been looking at the implications of a recent High Court judgment for the evidence that is required to prove that vehicular rights of way have been established through regular use. We have concluded that vehicular rights cannot be claimed through 20 years' use, under section 31 of the Highways Act 1980, if access to the route in question was prohibited by the Road Traffic Acts during any of those 20 years. The fact that people have driven along a footpath or bridleway does not mean that it has ceased to be a footpath or bridleway. Vehicle users will not be able to claim new rights of way on the basis of past use unless the landowner has dedicated a way for their use.

Aircraft Safety

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of whether the current Civil Aviation Authority minimum seat pitch on aircraft is sufficient to allow for evacuation in an emergency; if he will review the CAA minimum seat pitch; and if he will make a statement; [8229]

(2) what checks are made to ensure that airlines comply with the Civil Aviation Authority minimum seat pitch. [8228]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Civil Aviation Authority has set minimum requirements relating to the spacing of passenger seats for aircraft on the UK register as it is one of a number of factors which can have an effect on the evacuation of an aircraft in an emergency. These standards were the results of a thorough assessment by the CAA. In addition to other tests, demonstration evacuations were carried out on two aircraft types before the standard was adopted.

Compliance with these standards on individual aircraft is initially checked by the CAA when it approves the aircraft's passenger cabin layout. While the operator of an aircraft is responsible for ensuring that the passenger cabin layout continues to meet the required standards, this will be the subject of checks as part of the CAA's on-going aircraft monitoring process.

I have no evidence to suggest that a review of these standards is necessary.

Shadow Tolling

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 15 July, Official Report, column 131, (1) whether the results of the development work on refining the shadow toll payment mechanism so that it is less dependent on traffic-related payments will cover those schemes contained in the accelerated review; [9957]

(2) in what circumstances shadow tolling of roads offers value for money; [9958]

(3) when he expects to be able to make an announcement on the refinements to shadow toll payment mechanisms to make them less dependent on traffic-related payments. [9959]

Ms Glenda Jackson: A consideration in selecting design, build, finance and operate projects for competition is potential commercial viability. Whether projects offer value for money depends entirely upon the bids submitted for individual projects. The development work on payment mechanisms was begun initially for possible application to the A40 west London approach and A13 Thames gateway DBFO projects. If this refinement of remuneration arrangements is successful it could be applied elsewhere, and we would announce its introduction when we are able to apply it to a particular project.

Coach Safety

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he will make to other EU countries to legislate to require all coaches carrying children to have seat-belts fitted. [9795]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 21 July 1997]: Other EU member states are fully aware of the UK's keenness to have seat belts fitted to all coaches, and its national requirement for seat belts to be fitted in coaches used to carry children, but the decision to introduce a similar national requirement must remain one for the Governments of the individual EU member states.

However, we expect that in the future more foreign coaches will have seat belts, especially from 1 October 1999 when any member state can impose a general requirement for all coaches being registered to have seat belts fitted.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce legislation to prevent foreign coach operators carrying children as passengers in the United Kingdom without having seat belts fitted in their coaches. [9792]

Ms Jackson [holding answer 21 July 1997]: It is a long standing principle that certain of the UK's national vehicle regulations do not apply to vehicles registered abroad which are temporarily visiting this country. Similar arrangements apply when British vehicles travel to other EU countries. We do not require visiting foreign coaches to comply with our domestic regulations by fitting seat belts for children, and I do not believe it would be realistic to alter this. However, we expect that more foreign coaches will be fitted with seat belts in future as an amended seat belt directive starts to take effect that will allow member states to require the fitting of seat belts to all new coaches.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he will take to prevent children being carried in European Union countries on coaches that do not have seat belts fitted. [9794]

Ms Jackson [holding answer 21 July 1997]: When organised trips to European Union countries start in Britain, newer British coaches must have seat belts available for children. This requirement will extend to older coaches in February next year. While such vehicles will often continue to be used for the journey outside Britain, we do not have any jurisdiction over the domestic transport arrangements for children within other countries if they use a local vehicle. However, we would encourage those arranging trips for British children abroad always to use coaches fitted with seat belts.

Thamesmead Rail Link

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the proposal for a rail link to Thamesmead. [10103]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The option of constructing a southerly extension to the docklands light railway to Thamesmead from Gallions Reach is being assessed as a potential public transport component of the Thames gateway bridge, one of the potential new river crossings for east London currently being appraised by my Department.

Seahorse and Exodus Incident

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the marine accident investigation branch expects to submit its report on the incident between the flagged vessel Seahorse and the Irish vessel Exodus in March. [10208]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The marine accident investigation branch has carried out a joint investigation with the Irish Department of the Marine into this tragic accident. As this investigation was not an inspector's inquiry the report will not be published through the Stationery Office, but is expected to be available to the Marine Safety Agency and involved parties by the end of September.

A1

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will list the feasibility schemes put up to the Highways Agency by Northumberland county council in respect of the route of the A1 in Northumberland; when these schemes were received; and which ones he proposes to implement; [9497]

(2) if he will list the article 14 highway directives issued in respect of the A1 from the new Tyne crossing to the Gorforth Park iterchange; and if those directions are still in force; [9496]

(3) for what purpose he has issued article 14 directives in respect of the A1 between the new Tyne crossing and the Gorforth Park interchange. [9515]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 22 July 1997:

The Minister for Transport in London has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the A1 North of Newcastle.

You asked for a list of the feasibility schemes which Northumberland County Council have put to the Highways Agency in respect of the route of the A1 in Northumberland.

The County Council submitted a report on the feasibility of dualling sections of the A1 at the end of March 1997. The recommendations are being studied, but it would be inappropriate to list them at this stage because it could cause unnecessary Blight on long sections of the A1. A decision on the schemes may of course also be affected by the reviews announced recently by the Minister.

You also asked for a list of all Article 14 Highway Directions issued in respect of the A1 from the new Tyne Crossing to the Gosforth Park Interchange and if those Directions are still in force.

The Agency has issued two such Directions with respect to planning applications for Newburn Haugh and Newcastle Airport. The purpose for these is:

Newburn Haugh

The Agency has directed conditions on an application to cover improvements needed to the A1 southbound of slip road and the Scotswood Road junction as well as improvements to Scotswood Road (local highway). Planning permission was granted on 8 November 1996.

Newcastle Airport Terminal Extension

The Agency has directed conditions to cover improvements needed to the A696 and A696/A1 junction to facilitate the development. The development now has planning permission.

Older Drivers

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will work with the motor industry to develop industry best practice for secondary protection against accidents for older drivers. [9301]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Manufacturers are continuing to improve the overall secondary safety of cars for all occupants. Longer-term departmental research with industry participation includes the possibility of tailoring car secondary safety to the physical characteristics of individual occupants.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the sight distance standards for non-signalised junction designs to take account of the perception-reaction characteristics of older drivers. [9295]

Ms Jackson: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 22 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to reply to your recent question concerning a possible review of the sight distance standards for non-signalised junction designs to take account of the perception-reaction characteristics of older drivers.

The standards issued by the Highways Agency for non-signalled cross-road junctions were reviewed and updated in 1995 and for roundabouts in 1993. UK standards are similar in this respect to most European standards. The sight distance standards in the documents take account of a range of perception-reaction characteristics which includes that of older drivers.

Perception-reaction characteristics comprise the time taken to see a sign, feature or hazard, decide what action is necessary, and take action: our standards assume two seconds perception-reaction time. Experience and judgement are important to perceiving and avoiding any potential hazard, though perception-reaction processes slow with advancing age, experience and judgement improve.

In 1995 the Highways Agency reviewed whether road design standards should be amended to allow for demographic changes. Our study concluded that at present sight distance standards are appropriate for drivers with the range of perception-reaction characteristics prevalent in the driving population.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of Devon county council's roadfit scheme. [9299]

Ms Jackson: The Department has not made any formal assessment of the Devon county council's roadfit scheme, but is taking a close interest in this and similar schemes directed at older drivers.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures his Department takes to make drivers aware of declining sensory and cognitive abilities as they get older. [9300]

Ms Jackson: The present driver licensing system recognises that aging may affect driving ability, although this varies from person to person. Drivers must renew their licences at 70 years of age, at which point they are required to make a declaration about their health. A licence is then issued for up to three years only, subject to a further health declaration at each renewal.

The Department's leaflet, "Advice to Older Drivers", provides advice on driving skills, legal requirements and guidance on when to consider giving up driving. I will arrange for copies to be deposited in the House Libraries.

The Department has commissioned research to study the effects of aging on cognitive ability and to develop appropriate measures for elderly drivers in order to help them maintain their mobility safely.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to work with other European countries towards developing a common approach to helping older drivers. [9302]

Ms Jackson: There are no current initiatives at European level to develop a common approach towards older drivers.

The report on the safety of older car drivers in the European Union recently published by the European Road Safety Federation is a useful contribution to the international understanding of this issue.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will investigate the use of directional arrows at traffic signals with the objective of simplifying decision making for older drivers. [9296]

Ms Jackson: Work is being done to increase the conspicuity of traffic signals, including those with directional arrows, particularly in adverse viewing conditions. Some trials are under way to assess improvements that can be made to directional arrow signalling at more complicated junctions. Such improvements would help all drivers.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidelines his Department issues to (a) the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency, (b) police authorities, (c) doctors and (d) optometrists in respect of advice to older drivers who are considering giving up driving. [9298]

Ms Jackson: Guidance on giving advice to older drivers, including advice on preparing to give up driving when this becomes necessary is included within the publication "Medical Aspects of Fitness to Drive", which is published by the medical commission on accident prevention and endorsed by the Secretary of State's honorary medical advisory panels on driving. This publication is distributed widely to medical practitioners, who may also consult doctors at the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency by means of a dedicated telephone line.

The Department's chief medical adviser regularly meets the Association of Optometrists and issues associated with all aspects of driving are regularly discussed with the police.

Road Signs

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what arrangements exist for the cleaning and maintenance of road signs on roads for which the Highways Agency is responsible; and if he will review these arrangements to take account of older road users. [9297]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 22 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to reply to your recent question asking what arrangements exist for the cleaning and maintenance of road signs on roads for which the Highways Agency is responsible; and if he will review these requirements to take account of older road users.

The Highways Agency is responsible for the management and maintenance of the Trunk Road Network and signs on these roads are cleaned and maintained by Term Contractors under the direction of our Managing Agents. In some areas Local Authorities are our Managing Agents and in others the service is provided by Consulting Engineers. Our requirements for cleaning and inspecting signs are detailed in Volume 8 of our Design Manual for Roads and Bridges and in our Routine Maintenance Management System. In summary they are:–

Safety Patrols and Inspections are undertaken at frequent intervals and defects which constitute an immediate danger to the public are rectified within 24 hours.

Inspections to detect failure of lamps and their control mechanism are made at monthly intervals.

Annual inspections are undertaken to check if foliage is obscuring signs.

Every two years the condition of all signs is checked.

Signs are cleaned on an "as required" basis but not less frequently than every three years. The need varies greatly between different locations.

These requirements for cleaning and inspecting signs are being reviewed taking account of the needs of older road users. At this stage it is not possible to say when this review will be completed or whether the standards I have described will be amended.

Clean Engine Technology

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the progress made by United Kingdom motor manufacturers in the development of clean engine technology. [9317]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Although development of clean engine and after-treatment technologies is undertaken on an increasingly globalised basis, work done in this area in the UK continues to place its manufacturers among world leaders.

The speed of development has been largely determined by the increasingly stringent emissions standards which have been set in recent years. Emissions standards recently agreed at the EU Environment Council for passenger cars, for 2000 and 2005, together with proposals in the pipeline for other vehicles, will provide a further stimulus to technological development in this area. Meanwhile, the Government's decision to provide fiscal incentives for heavy vehicles meeting more stringent emissions standards should also stimulate development of new technologies.

Port of London Authority

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many maritime incidents were recorded by the Port of London Authority in each of the last five years. [9807]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department does not collect statistics on maritime incidents recorded by individual port authorities. I understand that the Port of London Authority has written to my hon. Friend offering an opportunity to visit it and discuss these matters.

Epping-Ongar Line

Mr. John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure that gains from property development undertaken by a commercial operator of the Epping to Ongar line are subject to clawback by London Underground Ltd. [9862]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Before making a decision on London Underground's proposed sale of the Epping to Ongar line, the Secretary of State will need to be satisfied that appropriate safeguards are in place concerning the future potential for this land.

Railtrack

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in what form he proposes to receive the dividends for Her Majesty's Government's residual shareholding in Railtrack. [9850]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government intend to take cash dividends for their residual shareholding in Railtrack; these will be paid into the Exchequer—consolidated fund extra receipts.

Roads Review

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which representative bodies he intends to consult in July in respect of his roads review. [9866]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My noble Friend the Minister for Roads and Road Safety held a series of meetings during July on the arrangements for the forthcoming review with representatives of environmental groups; road user and construction groups; local government; statutory bodies; and industry. The bodies represented at these meetings were as follows:

Alarm UK
Automobile Association
British Road Federation
Confederation of British Industry
Council for the Protection of Rural England Countryside Commission
English Heritage
English Nature
Freight Transport Association
Friends of the Earth
Local Government Association
Quarry Products Association
Road Haulage Association
Royal Automobile Club
Royal Society for the Protection of Birds
Transport 2000.

We shall issue a public consultation document shortly.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Bank of Credit and Commerce International

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total amount of funds which have been recovered by the BCCI liquidators since 1992; and what amount of funds is now held by them. [9998]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: This information is contained in the report of the joint liquidators to the Secretary of State made up to 15 January 1997 copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House and a copy of which was sent to my hon. Friend on 30 May 1997.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will ask the liquidators to report progress to her Department in respect of their attempts to recover BCCI assets held by the United States Department of Justice; what sums are being claimed; and if she will investigate the delay in recovering those assets. [9999]

Mr. Griffiths: The joint liquidators reported on their efforts to recover BCCI assets held in the United States of America in their report to the Secretary of State pursuant to regulation 14 of the Insolvency Regulations 1994 for the period 16 January 1996 to 15 January 1997. Copies of this report have been placed in the Libraries of the House and a copy was sent to my hon. Friend on 30 May 1997.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she last met the liquidators of BCCI. [10002]

Mr. Griffiths: My officials last met the liquidators of BCCI on 2 July 1997.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the worldwide assets of the BCCI companies, excluding those countries which have ring-fenced their assets; what proportion of the assets is available for distribution to creditors; what factors have led to the remaining assets being unavailable for distribution; what is the aggregate amount for which proofs of debt have been received worldwide, excluding duplicate proofs of debt and proof of debts submitted in countries which have ring-fenced; and what proportion of the amount is disputed. [10003]

Mr. Griffiths: These are matters for the liquidators. My Department does not hold this information.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the total worldwide liabilities of the BCCI companies, excluding those countries which have ring-fenced their assets. [1005]

Mr. Griffiths: My Department does not have this information.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will investigate the factors underlying the non-distribution of assets retained by the BCCI liquidators since 1992. [9997]

Mr. Griffiths: No, but if my hon. Friend will indicate the assets to which he is referring I will cause further inquiries to be made.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the current estimates of the percentage amounts of dividend payments for BCCI creditors; what is the current estimate of the aggregate total of dividends to BCCI creditors which will be paid; and by when they are expected to have been paid. [10001]

Mr. Griffiths: These are matters for the liquidators, but I understand that they hope to pay a substantial further dividend as soon as possible.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of trade if she will set up an inquiry into the conduct of the liquidation of BCCI and the fees charged by the liquidators prior to the payment of the first dividend. [9996]

Mr. Griffiths: No. The conduct of the liquidation of BCCI is a matter for the liquidators, for the liquidation committee and for the court. The remuneration payable to the liquidators is a matter for the liquidation committee, the creditors generally or the court.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will investigate the compliance of demand notices issued to former employees by the English liquidators of BCCI with section 84(1) of the Consumer Credit Act 1974. [9892]

Mr. Griffiths: I am advised that section 84(1) of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 is unlikely to apply to the transactions in question, although other provisions of the Act may, if my hon. Friend has any concerns regarding them would he please send details to the Director General of Fair Trading, who enforces the Consumer Credit Act.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the global costs of the BCCI liquidation to date. [10006]

Mr. Griffiths: None.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what regulations govern the (a) reporting and (b) publication of liquidators' fees and expenses. [1000]

Mr. Griffiths: Regulation 14 of the Insolvency Regulations 1994 provides that liquidators shall send in an account of their receipts and payments if required by the Secretary of State at any time. In the case of BCCI the liquidators have made copies of their report available to all creditors and copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the global costs of Deloitte Touche's fees in respect of the BCCI liquidation to date. [1004]

Mr. Griffiths: This information is not held by my Department. Information on the total of realisations, remuneration, costs and other expenses of the UK liquidation is given in the joint liquidators' report to the Secretary of State made up to 15 January 1997, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House and a copy of which was sent to the hon. Member on 30 May 1997.

European Structural Funds

Barbara Follett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the role of social partners in the implementation of European structural funds in the United Kingdom. [10380]

Mrs. Roche: The Government see the advantages of a wider social partnership, bringing employers' and trade union representatives into local European structural funds partnerships. We will expect the social partners to make a real contribution to the programmes, as existing partners do. The precise way in which they participate will be for each monitoring committee to determine locally.

Monopolies and Mergers Commission (Property Inquiry)

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the experience that the members of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission's committee investigating Scottish Residential Estate Agency Services have in respect of (a) Scots law and (b) the Scottish property market. [9953]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The role of the members of an inquiry group investigating a reference made to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission is to bring to that investigation a mixture of expertise in legal, economic, industrial, financial and other relevant disciplines. It has not been their function to have detailed expertise and knowledge of a particular market under investigation. In carrying out the investigation, the MMC obtains information from a wide range of experts in relevant fields as required and often retains consultants to provide expert advice.

The chairman of the MMC informs me that the MMC group investigating this case had access to expert advice on Scottish law and the Scottish property market.

Private Health Insurance

Mr. Brady: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the Government's policy on the regulation of the private health insurance sector. [8180]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The private health insurance sector is regulated through a combination of statutory legislation and industry best practice. Underwrites of health insurance are subject to prudential supervision under the Insurance Companies Act 1982; insurance intermediaries active in this field are subject to regulation under the Insurance Brokers (Registration) Act 1977 or industry-regulation under the Association of British Insurers general business code of practice. The Government continue to keep this under review.

Food Safety

Sir Richard Body: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in what way she plans to implement the product safety directive concerning the mixing of unwrapped non-food articles with food products; what is the purpose of this legislation; what representations she has received from the food industry on this issue; what food products will be exempted; and if she will make a statement. [10204]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The general product Ssfety directive lays down general rules for assessing the safety of consumer products. There is concern that if unwrapped non-food items are sold mixed in with food products there would be a possibility that consumers could accidentally ingest them with consequent risk of injury. It has been agreed that European member states will ascertain whether such products are on sale within their national territories and inform the European Commission accordingly. My Department is investigating the position in the UK. I have received no representations from the food industry on this subject.

National Physical Laboratory

Mr. Quinn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress is being made towards providing improved facilities for the National Physical Laboratory under the private finance initiative. [10379]

Mr. Battle: I am pleased to announce that I have today confirmed Laser—a joint venture between John Laing and Serco—as preferred tenderer for the redevelopment of the National Physical Laboratory's site at Teddington. Laser will now proceed to develop detailed plans to provide serviced accommodation for NPL and I hope to enter into a formal contract with it by November this year.

Coal Imports

Mr. Coaker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the level of coal imports into Britain for each of the last 10 years; and what percentage of these imports are used in British power stations. [9291]

Mr. Battle: Available information is as follows:

Year	Coal imports into United Kingdom[1,2]	Percentage of imports used in UK power stations[3,4]
1987	9,781	—
1988	11,685	—
1989	12,137	—
1990	14,783	29.5
1991	19,611	37.2
1992	20,339	37.9
1993	18,400	28.1
1994	15,088	24.4
1995	15,896	27.0
1996	17,799	39.0

Southampton University

Mr. Colvin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will visit Romsey to discuss with students of Southampton university the employment effects of the Government's minimum wage policy; and if she will make a statement. [9196]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I have no plans at present to visit the students of Southampton university. The national minimum wage will be introduced sensibly taking account of the economic circumstances prevailing at the time. The independent Low Pay Commission will recommend to Government the level at which the minimum wage might be introduced having considered all relevant economic circumstances, including the possible effect on employment, before formulating its recommendation.

Consumer Credit Licensing

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the key functions of the consumer credit licensing appeals system; when the system was established; and by what authority. [9634]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 the Director General of Fair Trading can decide not to grant, or to revoke, a consumer credit licence.

In the event that the director general decides to refuse an application for a licence, or to revoke an existing licence, the Act provides for a right of appeal to the Secretary of State. The procedure for appeals is set out in the 1976 appeals regulations.

I am considering making revisions to the 1976 regulations to speed up the appeals procedure and improve the decision making process. I have issued a consultation paper and will finalise the policy when I have considered the responses. A copy of the consultation paper is in the Library of the House.

Advisory Committee on Arbitration Law

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the key functions of the advisory committee on arbitration law; when the committee was established; by what authority; and if she will list the names of the chairman and the Secretary. [9632]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The departmental advisory committee on arbitration law was set up in March 1985 by the then Secretary of State with the following terms of reference:

(i) To consider the draft model law on international commercial arbitration adopted by a working group of the United Nations commission on international trade law in February 1984 and, in the light of any representations made by British interests, to advise the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry:

(a) Upon any modification which the committee consider should be proposed by Her Majesty's Government to the text of the draft model law prior to its adoption by the commission;

(b) If and when a model law is adopted by the Commission, upon whether, and to what extent, the provisions of the model law should be implemented in England and Wales and upon what associated changes should be made to the law of England and Wales:

(ii) To examine the operation of the Arbitration Acts 1950 to 1979 in the light of the model law and to recommend to the Secretary of State any legislative or other steps which the committee considers should be taken to improve the system of arbitration in England and Wales;

(iii) To advise the Secretary of State, where appropriate, upon the implications which any changes resulting from their recommendations for arbitration in England and Wales may have for arbitration in Scotland and Northern Ireland.

The DAC's formal work came to an end in January 1997 with commencement in England, Wales and Northern Ireland of the Arbitration Act 1996. The most recent chairman was Lord Justice Saville, now Lord Saville, and the secretariat was provided by the Department of Trade and Industry. A separate committee under the chairmanship of Lord Dervaird is considering aspects of Scottish arbitration law.

Overseas Projects Board

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the key functions of the Overseas Projects Board; when the board was established; by what authority; and if she will list the names of the chairman and the Secretary. [9630]

Mrs. Roche: The Overseas Projects Board was established in 1977 as a separate group within the framework of the British Overseas Trade Board to give Ministers and their officials independent advice on issues affecting UK industry's ability to compete effectively for major project business overseas.

The present chairman is Andrew Buxton, chairman of Barclays bank and the secretary is Geoffrey Nuttall, an official in the Department of Trade and Industry.

Travel Industry

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the representatives of the outbound travel industry whom the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs met in the United Kingdom between 1 May and 1 July. [9427]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 18 July 1997]: Between 1 May and 1 July I have had official meetings in the UK with the following:

Steven Freudman and Ian Reynolds from ABTA; Alan Fluke and Martin Brackenbury from FTO; Chris Kirker and Julia Hendry from AITO.

Internet

Mrs. May: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what data her Department collects on activity on the Internet. [9444]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 18 July 1997]: The Department of Trade and Industry subscribes to a number of proprietary studies and surveys of Internet activity. In addition, under the Government's IT for All initiative, run by the Department, two surveys of attitudes towards and usage of the Internet have been conducted. The first of these was published in December 1996 and the second will be published later this year. Also as part of a recent international benchmarking study, commissioned by the Department from Spectrum Strategy Consultants, the NOP research group collected information on, among other things, Internet activity in five countries—UK, USA, Japan, Germany and France. This study will be published by the end of this month. I will ensure that copies of the second IT for All survey and the international benchmarking study are placed in the Library of the House.

EU Internal Market

Mrs. May: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the United Kingdom's record on implementing measures to complete the European internal market; and what assessment she has made of the record of other member states of the European Union in this respect. [9452]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 18 July 1997]: I am placing a Commission table showing the state of transposition of the single market directives into national law in the UK and other member states in the Libraries of the House.

Mrs. May: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps her Department is taking to ensure completion of the European internal market; and within what timetable. [9440]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 18 July 1997]: Enhancement of the single market is a Government priority. We have helped to secure a warm welcome at the Amsterdam European Council for the Commission's action plan for the single market. The plan detailed an ambitious set of objectives for the next three presidencies of the Council of Ministers—Luxembourg, UK and Austria—to achieve practical improvements in the single market. The action plan closely reflects key UK priorities for the single market, including:

Improvements in the enforcement of single market rules;

Measures to simplify existing legislation and reduce burdens on business;

A tightening up of rules on state aids;

Measures to liberalise public utilities.

In addition, the Department has a unit called "action single market" which helps UK business overcome illegal state aids and trade barriers in other single market countries. It has scored successes in overcoming barriers across a wide range of sectors and problems types.

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she will publish the planned Green Paper on late payment of debt; and what will be the consultation programme on it. [9439]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 18 July 1997]: The Green Paper will be published before the summer recess. The closing date for responses will be 3 October. During the consultation period we will welcome views in writing or in person from all those who have an interest.

Mrs. May: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what her Department's policy is on the timely payment of debt; and what its record has been on debt payment in the current financial year. [9324]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 18 July 1997]: All Departments are required to pay all their bills within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of the goods or service or a valid invoice, whichever is the later, where no such terms exist. The Government will publish a league table of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the autumn.

Consumer Issues

Mrs. May: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the hon. Members with whom she or her Ministers had meetings to discuss consumer issues following the questionnaire on that topic. [9442]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 18 July 1997]: No. I have met a number of hon. Members from all parts of the House to discuss matters relating to the consumer questionnaire and received letters of thanks from several of her hon. Friends.

Mrs. May: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the hon. Members who responded to the questionnaire on consumer issues. [9441]

Mr. Griffiths [holding answer 18 July 1997]: No.

Nuclear Fusion

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the results of her Department's research into nuclear fusion; and if she will list the projects funded by her Department's expenditure on nuclear fusion since 1986. [8920]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 16 July 1997]: My Department's expenditure on nuclear fusion is managed by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority, which uses it to pay its subscription to the Joint European Torus project and to carry out fusion research that is part of the European Union's fusion programme. The EU programme—including JET—is evaluated regularly, and the report of the most recent evaluation under the chairmanship of Professor Barabaschi was published in December 1996. I shall arrange for copies of the report to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

The UKAEA's research is regularly monitored by the European Commission and by officials of my Department.

The projects funded by this expenditure since 1986 include:

Three conventional tokamak devices: Closed Line Experiment (CLEO—to 1987), Divertor and Injection Tokamak Experiment (DEATH—to 1989), Compact Assembly

(COMPASS—from 1989)

Two spherical tokamak devices: Small Tight Aspect Ratio Tokamak (START—from 1990), Mega-Amp Spherical

Tokamak (MATST under construction)

Reverse field pinch device: High Beta Toroidal Experiment (HBTX—to 1991)

Negative Ion Neutral Bema Development Project (to 1992)

Microwave heating systems—Electron Cyclotron Resonant Heating (ECRH—from 1990)

Materials Development Projects (to 1990)

Reactor design studies

Safety and Environmental Assessments (from 1992).

Sustainably Produced Timber

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make it her policy to ban imports of timber other than from sustainable managed forests. [9535]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 21 July 1997]: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister made clear the Government's commitment to sustainable forestry in his answer of the 3 July, Official Report, column 234.

The UK intends to adopt a new forest standard which will provide a benchmark for the regeneration of forests.

We believe that the best way to protect the world's forests is by extending this approach multilaterally rather than by imposing a unilateral ban on timber imports. We will continue to work with timber-producing countries to help improve forest management standards world wide and ensure long-term conservation.

Press Releases

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much her Department spends on biking press releases to (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals or groups, each time her Department issues a press release; how many such press releases were issued by her Department (i) in the period 1 May to 1 July and (ii) in the period 1 January to

1 March; and if she will review her Department's use of couriers to deliver press releases and investigate the possibility of using fax or e-mail. [8813]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 17 July 1997]: The DTI does not bike press releases. Such information is distributed by the Central Office of Information's news distribution service, NDS.

NDS's delivery mechanisms include a newswire service which supplies press release to the Parliamentary Online Information Service, POLIS, which can be accessed by all MPs and Lords, hand deliveries, fax and postal deliveries, online database and a widely accessed web site on the Internet.

These mechanisms are used either singly or in combination to ensure the most cost effective methods are used to reach the relevant target audiences and to suit the nature of the documents—for instance, whether press releases are dispatched on their own, or accompanied by reports, consultation documents etc; no separate costing is available for the hand delivery service alone.

The number of press releases that my Department put out through NDS for the period 1 May to 1 July was 115. For the period 1 January to 1 March there were 180 press releases issued through NDS. My Department and the COI keep a watching brief on new developments to ensure the most cost effective delivery mechanism are used at all times.

International Development

Mr. Ruane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the civil servants who are co-ordinating her Department's input into the White Paper on International Development. [9313]

Mrs. Roche: The preparation of the forthcoming White Paper on international development involves input from a number of different DTI directorates with the new issues and developing countries directorate acting as a liaison point within the Department.

Electro-shock Batons

Dr. Tonge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what trans-shipment licences the Government have granted for electro-shock batons since 1990; and if she will list both originating and recipient countries. [9468]

Mrs. Roche: One trans-shipment licence has been granted since 1990. This was granted on 19 April 1993 for goods originating in the USA and destined for Saudi Arabia.

Petrol Pumps

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when new regulations will be introduced to tighten controls on the verification of petrol pumps by repairers. [7785]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I am currently examining how best to protect consumers following the decision announced by the last Government on 10 June 1996 to deregulate weights and measures and allow self verification by manufacturers and others.

At my invitation, representatives of the Information Technology Services Agency and Local Authorities Co-ordinating Body on Trading Standards met me with the chief executive Seton Bennett of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory. Hewill hold further discussions with ITSA and LACOTS on how best to protect consumers and will report to me as soon as practicable.

Rights of Trade Union Members

Mr. Dismore: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to review the financing, terms of reference and working of the committee for the rights of trade union members; and if he will make a statement. [9779]

Mr. Ian McCartney: My Department intends to consider the role and functions of the Commissioner for the rights of trade union members, together with other fairness at work issues, later this year.

Aid and Trade

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 11 July, Official Report, column 646, if she will list the representations which her Department has received on retaining the aid and trade provisions and place a copy of each in the Library. [9476]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 18 July 1997]: Nearly all the representations received since 1 June have been oral.

The Department has also received written representations from the Export Group for the Constructional Industries and Major British Exporters. With the agreement of those organisations, I am placing copies of their letters in the Library of the House.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many and what percentage of employees in his private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [8943]

Mr. Tom Clarke: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has five employees in his private office, none of whom is of Asian or Afro-Caribbean origin.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many and what percentage of employees, in each pay band, in the quangos for which his Department is responsible, are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [8944]

Mr. Clarke: It is not possible to provide the information requested without incurring a disproportionate cost to the Department.

Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many civil servants there are on each payband in his Department. [8945]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The number of civil servants in each pay band within the Department for Culture, Media and Sport as at 17 July 1997 is shown in the following table:

	Number
SCS	21
A(U)	7
A(L)	48
B	83
HEOD	4
C	68
D(U)	74
D(L)	31

Grade equivalents:

SCS: Grade 5 and above

Grade A(U): Grade 6 and equivalent grades

Grade A(L): Grade 7 and equivalent grades

Grade B: HEO/SEO and equivalent grades

HEOD: Combined admin trainee HEO (development) grade

Grade C: EO and equivalent grades

Grade D(U): AO and equivalent grades

Grade D(L): AA and equivalent grades.

Welfare to Work

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the work opportunities which the tourism industry can offer under the welfare-to-work programme. [7523]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 21 July 1997]: Tourism is one of the UK's leading growth industries. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will shortly be calling together people from tourism, hospitality and leisure to discuss how we can achieve our welfare to work objectives and help meet the industry's staffing needs.

National Lottery

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what evidence he has evaluated that a not-for-profit national lottery would generate as much money for the good causes as the present lottery; [9445]

(2) what success he has had in attracting interests from companies to bid for the opportunity to run the national lottery in 2001 on a non-profit-making basis; [9449]

(3) if the Government plan to consider a bid to run the national lottery by Camelot in 2001 on a profit-making basis; [9447]

(4) what is his policy towards the continuation of a profit-making national lottery; [9446]

(5) if the Government remain committed to the principle of operating the national lottery on a non-profit-making basis; [9451]

(6) what representations he has received from companies showing an interest in operating the national lottery on a non-profit-making basis when the present contract expires in 2001. [9448]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 18 July 1997]: Lottery proceeds should go to the good causes, with the minimum necessary being used to run the lottery efficiently and in the public interest. We will seek an efficient, not-for-profit and competitive operator on this basis. I made a statement about this matter to the House on 21 July, Official Report, columns 685–98.

Camelot, if it chooses to bid, will be properly considered as a candidate to manage the new arrangements at the end of the current licence period.

To date, I have received no formal representations from any other companies wishing to run the lottery after the year 2001.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportions of (a) the national lottery, (b) bets on the Irish lottery and (c) other numbers draws are taken for (i) tax and (ii) good causes. [9900]

Mr. George Howarth: I have been asked to reply. Twelve per cent. tax is deducted from national lottery stakes and 6.75 per from bets on the Irish lottery and other numbers draws; 30 per cent. of national lottery stakes go to good causes; there is no statutory good causes deduction from Irish lottery or other numbers bets.

Works of Art

Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the allocations made to public institutions in the United Kingdom during the half year ended 30 June of individual works of art and museum objects pre-eminent for national, scientific, historic or artistic interest which have been accepted in satisfaction of inheritance tax, together with information, where applicable, as to conditions or wishes expressed by testators or executors in the matter of allocation; and if he will list the works of art and museum objects which are still awaiting allocation with the respective dates of their acceptance in satisfaction of inheritance tax. [8978]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The information which the hon. Member requests is as follows:

Item(s)	To whom allocated	Conditions/wishes expressed
Landscape with Lord Coventry on a Blue Roan Horse and Deer, Hounds and Attendants and a Dead Stag (painting) by John Wootton	The National Trust for Places of Historic Interest or Natural Beauty (for display at Antony House, Cornwall)	Conditional offer

TREASURY

Public Utilities

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his Department's definition of a public utility; [7577]

(2) if his Department defines Railtrack plc as a public utility. [7703]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: There is no single, commonly accepted definition of a utility. The Concise Oxford Dictionary defines a public utility as "an organisation supplying water, gas, etc to the community".

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Key: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the dates and attendees by Department and grade of meetings of officials which have taken place in his Department on the strategic defence review. [6761]

Mr. Darling: Various meetings have been held on various dates. It is not practical to list those attending. In any event, it is a long-established convention that Ministers are responsible for all policy decisions.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the Ministers and Treasury officials who attended the Foreign Office seminar on the strategic defence review. [7825]

Mr. Darling: No Treasury Ministers or officials attended the first strategic defence review seminar on 3 July. An official attended the second seminar on 11 July.

Income Tax

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate what additional revenue in Scotland would be raised by a 1p in the pound increase in the rate of income tax at (a) the 20p lower rate, (b) the 23p basic rate and (c) the 40p top rate. [9114]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 17 July 1997]: The latest estimates, which relate to 1995–96, are as follows:

	Full year yield at 1995–96 income levels £ million
a. Increase lower rate by 1p	60
b. Increase basic rate by 1p	150
c. Increase higher rate by 1p	30

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to make further changes to the level of mortgage interest tax relief at source; and if he will make a statement. [9487]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The level of mortgage interest relief is a matter to be considered each year in the Budget. The costs and benefits of all reliefs are kept under review to ensure that they continue to provide best value for money, and mortgage interest relief is no exception.

Business Investment

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the impact on United Kingdom business investment in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000 consequent on the reforms in the taxation of businesses and dividends contained in his Budget; and if he will make a statement. [9485]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The corporation tax reforms will encourage better quality and more long-term investment and so benefit the economy. They encourage companies to retain and reinvest profits and, with the substantial tax rate cuts, provide a very attractive environment in which to do so.

Windfall tax

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the potential legal obstacles to the timely collection of the windfall tax. [9701]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The Government are satisfied that the legislative provisions for the implementation of the windfall tax are legally robust.

Construction Industry

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what checks are being made by Inland Revenue inspectors to ensure that some companies in the construction industry do not gain an unfair advantage by classing employed labour as self-employed. [9791]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 21 July 1997]: Specialist Inland Revenue staff involved in the review and checking of payroll records are working to ensure that construction businesses comply with their legal liabilities for PAYE and national insurance contributions. Where they find that contractors are not properly accounting for these duties, they will normally seek arrears back to 6 April 1997. Where there is evidence of evasion, payment will be sought for earlier years. Interest and penalties may also be charged in appropriate cases.

Offshore Trusts

Mr. Prior: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the cost to the Exchequer of tax avoidance schemes involving the holding shares in offshore trusts in which Government Ministers are beneficiaries since 1 May. [9796]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 21 July 1997]: I do not accept the premise of the hon. Member's question. Comprehensive information about the beneficiaries of offshore trusts is not held, nor required in all cases, by the Inland Revenue.

Sustainably Produced Timber

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the Government's purchasing policy in respect of timber from sustainably managed forests. [9534]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 21 July 1997]: Decisions regarding the procurement of goods and services, including timber or related products, are the responsibility of individual Departments. In taking such decisions, Departments must have regard to the need to secure best value for the taxpayer's money, to EU and other international rules on procurement and to their strategies for environmentally friendly housekeeping. In pursuing these aims, Departments can be expected to seek timber from sustainable sources where practicable.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many and what percentage of employees, in each pay band, in the quangos for which his Department is responsible, are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [8956]

Mr. Fatchett: It is not possible to give precise statistics because the information we hold concerning ethnic origins is based on questionnaires completed voluntarily by staff. On the basis of those questionnaires, the position is as follows:

Pay bands	Asian		Afro-Caribbean
	Number	Percentage of total number of staff in those pay bands	Number	Percentage of total number of staff in those pay bands	Total numbers of staff
Equivalent FCO Senior management structure pay bands 1–7	0	0	0	0	191
Equivalent FCO DS6/SEO–DS5S/HCS6	15	3.2	6	1.3	468
Equivalent FCO AA–DS7/HEO	50	7.8	39	6.1	641
Totals	65	5	45	3.4	1,300

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many and what percentage of employees in his private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [8955]

Mr. Fatchett: Staff within this Department are not obliged to report their ethnic origins. A voluntary staff survey into ethnic origins was carried out in 1989 and 89 per cent. of staff responded. We have since invited all new entrants to complete the questionnaire. Staff are assured that the information gathered from their responses to the survey will be used for statistical purposes only.

Staff working in my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's office have been asked if they would be prepared to have the results of their own returns to the survey made public. Since some of them are not so prepared, I regret that I cannot give the information requested.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many and what percentage of civil servants in each of grades 1 to 5 in his Department are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [9567]

Mr. Fatchett: Staff within this Department are not obliged to report their ethnic origins. According to a regular survey of staff, conducted on a voluntary and confidential basis, this Department employs no civil servants of Asian or Afro-Caribbean origin in the equivalents of home civil service grades 1 to 5.

Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many civil servants there are on each pay band in his Department. [8957]

Mr. Fatchett: Hitherto pay bands have been introduced into this Department only for the senior management structure. The numbers at each pay band are:

	Number
Grade 1	10
SMS9	1
SMS8	7
SMS7	22
SMS6	16
SMS5	46
SMS4	69
SMS3	71
SMS2	92
SMS1	117

The numbers employed in the remainder of this Department, classified by grade level, are:

	Number
DS5S/HCS6	86
DS5/HCS7	574
DS6/SEO	370
DS7M/HEO	870
DS7D/8/HEO(D)	162
DS9/EO	1,524
DS10/EA/AO	1,421
AA	233

Australia

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's role in sponsoring the EU-Australia declaration on closer ties; and what assessment he has made of the effect of the declaration on Britain's Commonwealth links with Australia. [9645]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We have always advocated closer EU-Australia relations. This Department together with other Whitehall Departments has worked hard to ensure a good EU-Australia joint declaration. We therefore warmly welcome the signature of the joint declaration as a foundation for strengthened EU-Australia co-operation into the next century. The joint declaration is unlikely to have any direct effect on our Commonwealth links with Australia, but as the prime proponent of the declaration the UK has reinforced its role as Australia's partner of choice in the EU, building on an already excellent bilateral relationship.

Police and Judicial Co-operation

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role the European Commission played at Denver on the issue of international police and judicial co-operation; if (a) the Schengen Agreement and (b) the Title VI material of the draft Amsterdam treaty were discussed during the proceedings at Denver; and if he will make a statement. [9690]

Mr. Doug Henderson: International crime was one of the main focuses of discussion at the Denver summit of the G8. The European Commission was fully involved in the discussion on crime, but neither the Schengen agreement nor title VI issues were raised.

Amsterdam Treaty

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the text of the Amsterdam treaty deposited in the Library is the final draft; if articles in that text may be altered substantially before the treaty is signed; which articles are currently under negotiation; and if he will make a statement. [9692]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The text placed in the Libraries of the House is a provisional version of the draft treaty of Amsterdam. The presidency is reviewing its contents, in consultation with the member states, to ensure that it accurately reflects what was agreed at Amsterdam. The text will also be recorded and scrutinised by jurist-linguists, which may result in technical changes to a number of articles.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs under what provisions of the Amsterdam treaty information may be passed (a) from EU institutions to the Schengen secretariat and (b) from the Schengen secretariat to EU institutions. [9642]

Mr. Henderson: There are no provisions in the Amsterdam treaty relating to the passage of information between the EU institutions and the Schengen Secretariat. Under article F of the Schengen protocol

"the Council, shall, acting by a qualified majority, adopt the modalities for the integration of the Schengen Secretariat into the General Secretariat of the Council".

European Documents (Access)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions the European Commission has denied a request for access to documents from an outside source since the establishment of the European Ombudsman; and what is the nature of the documents which have been withheld. [9644]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Under the code of conduct approved by the Council and the Commission concerning public access to documents, it is for each institution to implement the principles in the code as they concern access to its documents. We do not therefore hold detailed information on the requests for access to documents that have been refused by the Commission.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's recent discussions with the Minister of Justice of Sri Lanka. [9841]

Mr. Fatchett: I met the Sri Lankan Minister of Justice and Constitutional Affairs and Deputy Minister of Finance, Professor G. L. Peiris, on 19 June. We discussed bilateral economic relations and the current situation in Sri Lanka, including the Sri Lankan Government's efforts to find a resolution to the ethnic conflict.

Pakistan (Bear Baiting)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Government of Pakistan about the suffering of bears in bear-baiting contests. [9769]

Mr. Fatchett: Our high commission in Islamabad has made representations to the Pakistani authorities in the past about the practice of bear baiting. In view of recent reports, they will raise the issue again and urge the Government of Pakistan to take steps to enforce the law banning this abhorrent practice.

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the conclusions of phase 1 of the strategic defence review. [10105]

Mr. Fatchett: Work on stage 1 of the strategic defence review is continuing. No decision has been taken on publication.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the submissions that he has received as part of the strategic defence review. [10145]

Mr. Fatchett: The Ministry of Defence and this Department have received a large number of submissions. These are the property of the authors and may not be circulated outside Government without the author's consent. We shall seek that consent and place in the libraries of the House copies of submissions whose authors consent.

Policy Reviews

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for each departmental policy review presently in progress or scheduled, (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10192]

Mr. Fatchett: We are the lead Department in a review of the detailed criteria used in considering licence applications for the export of conventional weapons. Its purpose is to give effect to the Government's commitment not to sell arms to regimes that might use them for internal repression or international aggression.

The review is being concluded as a matter of urgency. The new criteria will be published shortly.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Procurement Policies

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when she expects to complete the social audit of her Department's procurement policies. [7833]

Clare Short: We are currently examining the feasibility of a social audit. We have no specific timetable. We have started to review our procurement policies, initially with respect to contracts for Department for International development-funded construction projects. We are drawing up a detailed proposition for a DFID code of conduct for works contracts, to ensure that no project with which DFID is associated has unacceptable health and safety or employment practices. In support of this work, the development co-operation office in Delhi is studying the situation of construction workers on DFID-funded projects in India. The conclusions from this particular study will be available by November.

Policy Review

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list for each departmental policy review presently in progress or scheduled, (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10181]

Clare Short: My Department is currently undertaking two key exercises; the preparation of a White Paper on development and the departmental spending review.

The purpose of the White Paper is to set out the Government's development agenda for the elimination of poverty and coherence of policies towards developing countries. The White Paper will be published in October.

The departmental spending review will examine all DFID's programme to ensure that the resources allocated to my Department contribute directly to the achievement of the Government's development objectives as set out in the White Paper. Emerging conclusions are expected by November.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Office Refurbishment

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 7 July, Official Report, column 323, if he will set out a schedule of the proposed refurbishment of the Lord Chancellor's official residence and offices within the Palace of Westminster, together with estimated costs. [9342]

Mr. Hoon: I confirm that the cost of the proposal will be in the region of £650,000. The bulk of the costs will be incurred on the restoration and refurbishment of the state rooms. I can also confirm that the following works are included in the proposals:

- Replacement and/or restoration of furniture
- Redecoration, including wallcoverings
- Replacement of soft furnishings, such as carpets, curtains and blinds
- Replacement of light fittings
- Miscellaneous work and services, including plumbing, heating, fire detection systems, electrical works and porterage charges.

The total estimated cost of £650,000 also includes fees to cover the work of a structural engineer, the preparations of designs—for light fittings and reproduction furniture—and the services of a quantity surveyor. In addition to these works, the residence will be further enhanced by the loan of very many paintings and sculptures, free of any charge, by major national institutions. The Palace of Westminster—House of Lords is moreover considering the implications of a proposal to open the state rooms to the public so that the public could benefit from viewing both the residence, restored in accordance with an historically authentic scheme, and the works of art and sculpture within it.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Policy Reviews

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each departmental policy review presently in progress or scheduled, (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10190]

Dr. Howells: The Department is undertaking two departmental policy reviews. Details for each are as follows:

First, a review of the Equal Opportunities Commission is being undertaken during 1997–98. The aim is to review the functions of the EOC, the effectiveness with which they have been carried out and the likely need in the future for these functions. The review will consider the case for the continued existence of the EOC and how its functions can be best fulfilled. It will also consider the powers, constitutional status, membership and terms of reference of the EOC. The review will have regard to the Government's equal opportunities policies and to the duties of the commission as laid down in statute.

The Outcome of the review will be reported by 11 September 1997.

Secondly, a review of the Employment Service performance targets is being undertaken to ensure that the nature and level of targets set enable the ES to deliver to Ministers' priorities and have the maximum positive impact on the labour market while maintaining a high level of customer contact.

The review will report to Ministers by December of this year and will give details of the development of targets for 1998–99 and beyond.

Sir Christopher Hatton School, Wellingborough

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will determine the reference to him by the Sir Christopher Hatton school, Wellingborough, under section 432(3) of the Education Act 1996. [10381]

Mr. Byers: The Secretary of state has today determined that Sir Christopher Hatton school should admit all of the children concerned.

National Disability Council

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the National Disability Council will report on its activities during the 1996–97 financial year. [10345]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I am pleased to announce that the Secretary of State has today laid the National Disability Council's second annual report before Parliament.

The NDC has reported on its activities from April 1996 to March 1997 and set out what it hopes to achieve during 1997–98. Copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

Chefs (Work Permits)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to the meeting between the hon. Member for Leicester, East and the Under-Secretary of State for Employment on 30 June, if he will make a statement on what action he has taken with regard to the case of Mr. Roy. [9563]

Mr. Alan Howarth: As my hon. Friend is aware, the Department's overseas labour service has already issued a work permit for Mr. Roy to work in the UK as a chef. Mr. Roy also requires an entry visa which, I understand, has been refused. Visas are the responsibility of the migration and visa department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, and I understand that that Department is currently looking into its decision in this case.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many work permits were issued for (a) Indian food and (b) Chinese food chefs in 1996. [9885]

Mr. Howarth: The specific information requested is not available. However, about 200 work permits were issued to chefs in 1996.

Work Permits

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many persons are employed on work permit issues in his Department. [9886]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department's overseas labour service, which deals with work permit issues, has 120 staff.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and what percentage of employees in his private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [8961]

Dr. Howells: The number of staff of Asian origin in private office is fewer than six and is therefore not shown, in accordance with the Department's agreed code of conduct on the use of ethnic monitoring data.

The number of staff of Afro-Caribbean origin in the private office is seven. The percentage of staff of Afro-Caribbean origin in private office is 14 per cent. of those who have chosen to state their ethnic origin, 11 per cent. of the total number of staff.

Youth Service

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the audit of Youth Service provision will be completed; and if he will make a statement. [9478]

Dr. Howells: The Department is consulting currently about the form and content of the audit of youth service provision. We intend to write to local authorities in the late autumn when the responses have been fully considered. Authorities will be given about three months to respond.

Student Governors

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to increase the number of student governors in further education in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [9135]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 18 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 15 July, Official Report, column 122. Matters concerning further education institutions in Wales are for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

GCSE Performance Tables

Mrs. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his Department's assessment of the advantages of (a) including the number of pupils on the roll in September of year 11 in the performance tables for GCSE results and (b) including only those pupils who take GCSE exams. [9011]

Ms Estelle Morris: The 1997 secondary school performance tables will be based on the achievements of all pupils of the relevant age on roll at the time of the schools census in January. The tables will not therefore be influenced by different school policies on the entry of pupils for GCSE examinations, but will allow comparisons to be made on the basis of the achievements of all pupils by the end of compulsory schooling. Schools are, however, already able to provide for publication the GCSE achievements of all pupils in year 11, regardless of age, and value added measures will soon help give a fuller picture of school performance.

Excluded Pupils

Mrs. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will ensure that when a school permanently excludes a pupil that place is made available to an excluded pupil from another school. [9085]

Ms Estelle Morris: Where a school has spare places they must be offered to any suitable applicants, regardless of their disciplinary record.

Early Years Development Plans

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make it his policy, when considering interim early years development plans submitted to him, not to approve plans which do not include provision for the reduction in numbers of four-year-olds currently in reception classes; and if he will make a statement. [8494]

Mr. Byers: The Secretary of State approved 79 interim early years development plans on 11 July, all of which include proposals for raising standards. This is an encouraging response to the Government's early years policy. We are grateful to local authorities for all their hard work on the plans, particularly given the tight timetable.

Schools (Capital Funding)

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will be taking into account factors relating to economic and social deprivation when assessing the improvement in performance that schools need to make in order to be eligible for a share of the £1.3 billion set aside for capital funding to deal with their disrepair; and how these factors will be weighted in the analysis. [9010]

Mr. Byers: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 17 July, Official Report, column 308.

Employment Advertisements

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how often since its establishment his Department has been responsible for employment advertisements which contained age restrictions upon those who could apply. [9509]

Mr. Andrew Smith: For jobs within the Department and the Employment Service, no age restrictions apply with the exception of places on the modern apprenticeship scheme where age limits reflect the requirements of the national program.

When advertising posts for other employers, the Employment Service challenges age restrictions placed on vacancies to try to persuade employers to consider jobseekers on their merits. However, no records are kept of the number of vacancies displayed with age restrictions.

New Deal

Mr. Tony Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what use will be made of local partnerships under his Department's new deal proposals for providing employment for young people. [8679]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Employment Service, working closely with the Government and the Scottish and Welsh Offices, will act as the lead agency in the delivery of new deal. This will be done in partnership with other agencies and organisations—including employers, local authorities, training and enterprise councils, career service, further education bodies, voluntary and environmental organisations, and others.

Bringing together the knowledge, services and initiative of all those who can play a part will be an important factor in delivering the new deal for unemployed people.

During the next few months, we shall be building on existing local partnerships where feasible, or establishing new ones where necessary. These partnerships will help ES in planning the nature, volume and delivery arrangements for new deal in each location.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the employment option in the new deal will require minimum pay and conditions from employers who agree to take part. [8209]

Mr. Smith: The design of the new deal will be developed alongside the Government's other employment policies, so that the benefits of all are maximised.

Welfare to Work

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will ensure that communication support is provided under the welfare-to-work scheme for all deaf young people who require it; and how the provision of communication support will be administered. [9768]

Mr. Alan Howarth: We intend that disabled young people will get the help they need to meet the aim of improving their long-term employability. Detailed proposals about how this help can be provided will be developed.

CABINET OFFICE

Prime Minister's Questions

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what is his role in the drafting and distribution of Prime Minister's Questions. [10112]

Mr. Mandelson: None.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Ministerial Accountability

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what factors led his Department to undertake a review of ministerial accountability; and what is its remit and scope. [10108]

Dr. David Clark: Our manifesto promised that

"Ministerial accountability will be reviewed so as to remove recent abuses".

My right hon. Friend the President of the Council has invited the Select Committee on the Modenisation of the House of Commons to look at the means by which the House holds Ministers to account, and the Government will be ready to put papers to that Committee in the autumn. Our review will also cover the guidance given to Ministers on matters of conduct and procedure.

Policy Reviews

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list for each Cabinet Office policy review currently in progress or scheduled (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10196]

Dr. David Clark: We are committed to reviewing ministerial accountability, and my right hon. Friend the President of the Council has asked the House of Commons Modernisation Select Committee to consider the means by which the House holds Ministers to account. The Government will be ready to put a paper to the Select Committee in the autumn.

On quangos, we have announced that our intention is to reduce overall numbers, Official Report, 4 June 1997, column 192, and we are also committed to enhancing the openness and accountability of these bodies.

The outcome of both these reviews will be set out in the White Paper on "Better Government", the publication of which I announced in answer to my hon. Friend the Member for the City of Durham (Mr. Steinberg), Official Report, 3 June 1997, column 119.

We have conducted a review of the existing code of practice on access to Government information to ensure that it can provide an adequate level of openness in the period until our proposed freedom of information Act comes into force. We have concluded that the discretionary elements of the code allow sufficient flexibility to achieve this. However, changes to the code may be considered if this proves not to be the case.

Like all Government Departments, we are also participating in the comprehensive spending review, the results of which will be published in the next 12 months.

WALES

Further Education Report

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the conclusions and recommendations of the second report of the Welsh Affairs Committee into further education in Wales, HC 64 96–97. [10386]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Government have today published a command paper, Cm 3708, responding to the Committee's conclusions and recommendations. On behalf of this House, I thank the Committee for their thorough and wide-ranging inquiry into further education in Wales. The Government's response, so soon after the publication of our first White Paper on Education in Wales, further demonstrates our firm commitment to making education and training more relevant and accessible to our young and adult people, and it will make a significant contribution to delivering the Government's plans for promoting life-long learning.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his statement in "Wales Deserves a Voice", how a Welsh Assembly will ensure that a future government would no longer be able to impose legislation such as the poll tax. [9554]

Mr. Ron Davies [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The Welsh Assembly would be the credible voice of the Welsh people. The White Paper, "A Voice for Wales", makes it clear that the Government expect the Welsh Assembly to work in partnership with the Westminster Parliament and the Government of the day. Any attempt to override the clearly expressed views of the Assembly would put that partnership in jeopardy.

Implementation of the poll tax depended upon the exercise by the Secretary of State of a multiplicity of order—and regulation-making powers. If a Government wished to impose on Wales legislation which the Assembly opposed and which related to matters such as education or health that would normally be dealt with by the Assembly, it would either have to put all the detail in the new primary legislation or have to give all the powers in that legislation to the Secretary of State.

Small Businesses

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what innovations he will make it his policy to assist small businesses; [7861]

(2) what discussions he has had with the Welsh Development Agency to ensure improved services for new and small businesses. [7862]

Mr. Hain: We are committed to developing Business Connect, ensuring that it is able to respond more effectively to the needs of the small business sector. Specific initiatives will include: introducing new measures to tackle late payment; enhancing support for high technology start-ups; and better regulation. We also hope that small firms in Wales will take advantage of UK-wide initiatives like the university for industry. The Welsh Development Agency is a key player in Business Connect and will have a vital role in our efforts to support the development of the small firms sector. I met the North Wales Federation of Businesses in St. Asaph in May to discuss these and related matters.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his latest estimate of the number of small businesses in Wales. [7860]

Mr. Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave him on 3 June 1997, Official Report, column 128.

Regional Policy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on how his regional policies will assist the location of new industries at (a) Engineer Park, Deeside, Flintshire, (b) Deeside Industrial Park, Flintshire and (c) Buckley, Flintshire; and if he will make a statement. [7864]

Mr. Hain: The main form of regional aid available for companies wishing to pursue investment projects in Wales is regional selective assistance. The RSA scheme provides discretionary grants to viable businesses for investment projects which create or safeguard employment in assisted areas. Engineer Park and Deeside Industrial Park lie within the assisted area. Therefore, investment projects at these locations are eligible for RSA support.

A range of other general industrial support measures is available throughout Wales with the objective of improving the performance of new and existing businesses and in particular supporting the development of small and medium sized enterprises. Buckley, and other non-assisted areas, will benefit from those measures.

North Wales Health Authority

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what meetings and discussions have taken place between the chief executive of the North Wales health authority and (a) the chairpersons of the acute trusts in North Wales and (b) the Director of the Health Division at the Welsh Office. [8332]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Meetings between staff of the North Wales health authority and chairmen and staff of NHS trusts in the area are a matter for those concerned. The director of the Welsh Office health department has frequent discussions with chief executives of all health authorities on a wide range of issues.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many sites of special scientific interest in Wales he estimates will be denotified in 1998 as a result of Government funded schemes; and if he will list them. [8785]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Countryside Council for Wales is responsible for designating sites of special scientific interest. There are currently no plans to denotify any SSSI in Wales during 1998.

Assisted Areas

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the designated assisted areas lying within (a) the M4 corridor and (b) the A55 corridor. [10148]

Mr. Hain: The assisted areas in the eastern M4 corridor, are all of those within the Cardiff and Newport travel-to-work areas, and the southern parts of those within the Pontypool and Cwmbran, Pontypridd and Rhondda, and Bridgend travel-to-work areas.

The assisted areas in the eastern A55 corridor are all of those within the Shotton, Flint and Rhyl and the Wrexham travel-to-work areas.

Policy Reviews

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each departmental policy review presently in progress or scheduled, (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10182]

Mr. Ron Davies: My Department's significant reviews are: a comprehensive spending review, to be completed in the next 12 months; a fundamental review of transport policy, to be completed spring 1998. In addition, my Department has an on-going programme of policy evaluations and reviews.

DEFENCE

Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation

Mr. Dennis Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation defence agency for 1997–98. [10382]

Dr. Reid: The agency's key targets for 1997–98 are as follows:

Quantity

Target: To achieve 98 per cent. of scheduled quantity of MOD sales orders in year and thereby achieve the master schedule.

Customer satisfaction

Target: To achieve no more than 90 customer complaints.

Timeliness

Target: To achieve 93 per cent. of the delivery dates agreed with MOD customer.

Cost

Target: To achieve a reduction in the full operating cost of the NARO DA, from the 1995–96 figure, of at least 2.9 per cent. This is to include a reduction of at least 5.25 per cent

(£2.3 million) in operating costs, of which £1.5 million is mortgaged, and at least a 1.5 per cent. (£1.2 million) reduction in the cost of material consumed, and assumes constant output.

Volume

Target: To utilise 100 per cent. of the available capacity by ensuring existing and, when required, additional customers furnish the programmes of work against which resources have been allocated.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if consideration of the number of European fighter aircraft to be purchased will form part of the strategic defence review. [9516]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the right hon. Member for Fylde (Mr. Jack) on 26 June, Official Report, column 627.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 2 July, Official Report, column 180, how many series of technical reports and pages are in current use by the atomic weapons establishment. [9495]

Mr. Spellar: The four main series of technical reports listed in the answer given to the hon. Member on 2 July 1997, Official Report, column 180, are still open but little used. Other internal reports and papers are produced by the various divisions of AWE, but numerical details are not held centrally and a census would require unreasonable diversion of resources. I am, therefore, in accordance with exemption 9 of the code of practice for open government, withholding this information.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many papers have been produced in the CXD memoranda series of technical papers and reports from the atomic weapons establishment at Aldermaston; when the papers were first produced in this series; when this series ended; and how many of the papers in this series are currently unclassified. [9472]

Mr. Spellar: There are 686 papers in the CXD—chemistry and explosives division—memoranda series, 230 of which are currently unclassified. The series started in 1979 and ended in 1991. More recent papers of this type are known as CXD technical reports, of which, from 1991 to date, there have been 255; 74 of these are currently unclassified.

Service Personnel (Exposure to Radioactivity)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research has been carried out with radioactive substances at the nuclear, biological and chemical centre at Winterbourne Gunner in Wiltshire since 1967; if service personnel have been exposed to radioactive substance (a) intentionally and (b) accidentally during this work; what radioactive substances were involved in this work; for what purposes this work was carried out; and what the results of this work were. [6359]

Mr. Spellar: The Defence Nuclear, Biological and Chemical Centre at Winterbourne Gunner does not conduct research with radioactive substances and available records show no evidence that such research has ever been conducted there. However, DNBCC does conduct training courses in NBC defence involving the use of low-level radioactive sources. Available records show that, during such training, no service personnel have been intentionally or accidentally exposed to radioactive sources, but that six personnel stationed at DNBCC at various times received small doses of radiation as a consequence of working with ionising radiation. In all cases, these were well within prescribed safe limits. The radioactive substances used at DNBCC are: tritium(H-3), cobalt-60, caesium-137, radium-226, chlorine-36, strontium-90 and nickel-63.

Organophosphates

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the link between exposure of soldiers to organophosphates during the Gulf war and Gulf war syndrome; and if he will make a statement. [8553]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 16 July 1997]: Research is currently under way to try to determine the effects of low-level exposure to organophosphate pesticides on human health in the context of ill health claimed by some farm workers. This work is sponsored jointly by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Department of Health and the Health and Safety Executive and is due to report in 1999. This will be an important step towards understanding the possible effects of potential exposures to organophosphorous-based products of British troops during the Gulf war. However, pending the outcome of this and other work, there is no firm evidence to support a link between low level exposure to OPs and adverse health effects.

HMY Britannia

Mr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to proceed with proposals for the preservation of the royal yacht Britannia provided that they are viable. [9019]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 17 July 1997]: The Government are currently considering the future of HMY Britannia. An announcement will be made as soon as a decision has been reached.

Invincible Class Carriers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the procurement of replacements for the Invincible class carriers; and when a decision on replacement of the class is expected to be made. [9421]

Mr. Spellar: The requirement to provide platforms to support maritime fixed-wing air power beyond the projected lives of the current Invincible class carriers will be considered as part of the strategic defence review.

Departmental Contractors

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many firms are on his Department's contractors list. [9404]

Mr. Spellar: Since 1994, the MOD has not maintained its own defence contractors list. Generally, for UK contractors, MOD now uses appropriately certified companies listed in the Department of Trade and Industry's United Kingdom register of quality assessed companies. As an indication of the number of contractors with whom MOD deals, in June 1997 the Defence Bills Agency database showed that there were extant contracts with 10,320 contractors.

Research and Development

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total expenditure on defence industry research and development in 1996. [9403]

Mr. Spellar: My Department does not maintain statistics covering expenditure by the UK defence industry on research and development. Information, based on data collected by the Office of National Statistics, can be found in table 4.1 of "Science, Engineering and Technology Statistics 1996", Cm 3257–II, which is available in the Library of the House.

Courts Martial

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many persons were court-martialled in each year since 1990. [9884]

Dr. Reid: The number of persons court-martialled in each year since 1990 is set out in the table:

Year	RN	Army	RAF	Total
1990	38	917	145	1,100 (989)
1991	50	718	153	921 (884)
1992	82	763	149	994 (892)
1993	115	677	128	919 (774)
1994	113	600	91	804 (676)
1995	111	430	104	645 (515)

The figures shown are the latest we have available to date and represent the total number of service personnel tried by court-martial within that period. The figures in brackets show the number of persons actually convicted of one or more offences.

Under-18 Service Personnel

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the Government's policy on the recruitment of volunteers under the age of 18 years into the armed forces. [9813]

Dr. Reid: The minimum age of recruitment of volunteers into the armed forces is 16 years.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances volunteers under the age of 18 years are (a) required and (b) permitted to be on active service in areas of armed conflict. [9815]

Dr. Reid: The armed forces comprise entirely of volunteers, regardless of the age of enlistment. Therefore, no service personnel are forced into active service in areas of armed conflict. However, once fully trained, all members of the armed forces are required to deploy to any area or duty, on orders from higher authority.

Members of the armed forces are not deployed operationally until they are fully trained. As a general rule therefore, due to the period of training, personnel are not deployed below the age of seventeen and a half years. Exceptions to this general rule may be personnel on board ship and members of the Royal Marines who could be re-deployed directly into an area of conflict from a location beyond the UK base.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the Government's policy towards weapons training for volunteers aged under 18 years in the armed forces. [9811]

Dr. Reid: The policy towards weapons training in the armed forces is the same for all ages of volunteers. Weapons training and discipline forms an integral and essential part of the normal training programme.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of those persons aged under 18 years in the armed forces have been killed on active service since 1993. [9809]

Dr. Reid: No persons aged under 18 years in the armed forces have been killed on active service since 1993.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to change his Department's policy towards volunteers aged under 18 years in the armed services being placed in situations of danger. [9812]

Dr. Reid: There are currently no plans to change the rules governing the deployment of under-18-year-olds in the armed forces in situations of danger, although our policies remain under constant review.

Army Foundation College

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the Government's policy on the Army Foundation College. [9808]

Dr. Reid: The Army Foundation College is part of the manning of the army strategy, which aims to return the Army to full manning by 2002. The college will provide young people aged between 16 and 17 destined for the Royal Armoured Corps, the Royal Artillery and the infantry, with vocational, adventurous leadership and basic military training and will also give them a good grounding in six NCVQ key skills. On graduation from the college, they will go on to trade training before joining the Field Army. The intention is that the college will be funded through the private finance initiative. Until this process is complete, we cannot therefore be certain of the college's location, although the successful contractor will be offered the site of the former Apprentices' college in Harrogate.

West Indies Guard Ship

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from the Department for International Development concerning the West Indies guard ship. [10104]

Dr. Reid: My Department has received no representation from the Department for International Development concerning the West Indies gaurd ship.

Defence Review

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of all the submissions made to his Department on the strategic defence review. [9985]

Dr. Reid: We have received a large number of inputs from outside bodies and individuals. These submissions are the property of the authors and the Department may not circulate them outside Government without the authors' consent. Our intention is to seek that consent and to place in the Library of the House copies of these inputs where consent has been given.

Reservist Aircrew

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what further arrangements have been made for the wider employment of reservist aircrew in the Royal Air Force. [10387]

Dr. Reid: I am pleased to announce that, following the success of trials using reservist aircrew to augment regular personnel on the Hercules aircraft and Wessex helicopter, a trial is to be conducted between 1 October 1997 and 30 September 1998 to evaluate the feasibility of recruiting and training volunteer reservist aircrew for employment on the Tornado F3 aircraft. Trials involving other aircraft types may follow next year.

SCOTLAND

Hunting

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received from (a) supporters and (b) opponents of hunting on the subject of hunting on Forestry Commission land; and if he will list them. [8894]

Mr. Chisholm: Ministers and the Forestry Commission have received thousands of representations on this matter in recent years, both from supporters and opponents of hunting. Listing these representations could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many civil servants there are on each pay band in his Department. [8939]

Mr. Dewar: A pay and grading review is currently underway in The Scottish Office and its executive agencies other than the Scottish Prison Service, but has not been completed. Staffing figures are therefore shown on the basis of standard civil service grades in the table.

The Scottish Office and its executive agencies (excluding SPS) at 1 April 1997

Grade equivalent	Full-time equivalent
Senior civil service	151.4
Grade 6	151.2
Grade 7	396.5
Senior executive officer	350.1
Higher executive officer	733.6
Executive officer	877.8
Administrative officer	990.6
Administrative assistant	997.8
Industrial	305.0
Total	4,954.0

As a pay and grading review has taken place in the Scottish Prison Service it is possible to provide a breakdown by pay band, although numbers are available on a headcount rather than an FTE basis. The information is set out in the table.

The Scottish Prison Service at 1 April 1997

Band	Pay range	Headcount
Senior civil servants
I	£33,700–£52,100	6
H	£28,100–£43,400	6
G	£23,500–£35,750	58
F	£17,900–£30,650	296
E	£14,300–£25,550	563
D	£11,450–£21,450	2,261
C	£9,300–£16,350	1,194
B	£7,350–£11,450	200
A	£6,150–£9,600	40
Total		4,654

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of employees in his private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [8937]

Mr. Dewar: At 1 July 1997 none of the 46 staff employed in the Scottish Office ministerial private offices was of Asian or Afro-Caribbean origin.

Children (Scotland) Act 1995

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate was made by the reporters service of the additional resources required to administer the Children (Scotland) Act 1995; and what additional resources have been provided. [9616]

Mr. Galbraith: The Scottish Children's Reporter Administration's estimate to implement its responsibilities under the 1995 Act was for an additional £804,000. This additional requirement was taken into account along with other factors in setting the administration's baseline of £10,300,000, an increase of £200,000 over the previous year's provision.

Capital Receipts Initiative

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the consultation process which will take place on the distribution of funds under the capital receipts initiative. [9956]

Mr. Chisholm: My right hon. Friend announced on 3 July that he would wish to discuss with local government and Scottish Homes how we might deploy the additional £12.5 million made available for housing investment in Scotland this year and the additional £43.7 million made available next year. He indicated that he was in favour of using the resources to support welfare to work schemes directed at improving the energy efficiency of our housing stock, and to take forward our policy of new housing partnerships. The Department is consulting the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities and Scottish Homes accordingly and a further announcement will be made as soon as possible.

Scottish Arts Council Inquiry

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 9 June, Official Report, column 321, (1) if he will identify the report produced at the conclusion of the Scottish Arts Council inquiry into the production assisted by the Scottish film production fund; who wrote it; if copies will be publicly available; and what is its projected date of publication; [9960]

(2) when the Scottish Arts Council inquiry into productions assisted by the Scottish film production fund was instituted; what was the total cost of producing the inquiry's report; and if he will indicate those individuals and bodies which have had sight of the report prior to publication.

Mr. Galbraith: The Scottish Arts Council commissioned Morgan Harris Burrows in February 1997 to report on the handling of national lottery film-related applications in Scotland. The cost of producing the report was £12,867. The report has not been published, but is available on request from the Scottish Arts Council. Arrangements are being made to place a copy in the Library of the House.

Policy Reviews

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each departmental policy review presently in progress or scheduled, (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10187]

Mr. Dewar: The following major departmental policy reviews are in progress:

	Purpose of review
Review of transport policy	The purpose of this review is to enable a White Paper setting out our proposals for an integrated transport policy to be published early next year.
Review of the Scottish trunk roads programme	The purpose of this review is to enable decisions to be taken on the future roads programme which complement our overall approach on transport policy. It is expected to be completed by summer 1998.
Strategic review of Scottish Enterprise and the Local Enterprise Companies	The purpose of the review is for SE, in consultation with the department, to examine their strategic objectives with a view to improving the effectiveness, responsiveness and the accountability of the enterprise network in Scotland. The review is expected to be completed during the course of the Summer.
Water authorities review	The purpose of the review is to consider the steps which might be taken to strengthen local democratic control of the three Scottish water authorities. It is expected to be completed in November.
Review of planning policy for opencast coal mining in Scotland	The purpose of this review is to follow up the 10-point plan for opencasting, published in April 1997. Consultation on the issues will commence shortly with a view to completion of the review by the autumn.
Housing reviews	There are to be two reviews relating to housing. The first is to examine the way in which Scottish Homes supports social rented housing; the second is to review the various home ownership schemes administered by Scottish Homes. The reviews are expected to be completed by spring 1998.
Best value regime in local government	The purpose of the review by the joint Scottish Office/Convention of Scottish Local Authorities task force is to develop the essential elements of the new best value arrangements. The task force's first draft report was presented to the Secretary of State and COSLA on 4 July and councils will be required to assess by Autumn how far they meet the essential elements; if they wish to apply for further exemption from compulsory competitive tendering.
Review of development planning in Scotland	The purpose of this review is to identify aspects of the present development plan procedures which prevent effective and efficient preparation and processing of plans, and changes which could be introduced to minimise their effect. The review is due to be completed by the end of 1997.
Review of further education colleges' funding methodology	The purpose is to review the current arrangements for the distribution of Government grant funding for further education colleges in Scotland to determine that these efficiently and effectively support and deliver the objectives for the sector set out by Ministers and reflect appropriate funding principles; and to identify the scope for improvement in consultation with the sector. The review is presently expected to be completed in September.

Scottish Community Education Council

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the forthcoming policy and financial review of the Scottish Community Education Council. [10344]

Mr. Dewar: My Department will conduct a review of the Scottish Community Education Council during 1997 under the programme of five yearly non-departmental public body reviews. The review will examine the status and functions of the Scottish Community Education Council in accordance with Cabinet Office guidance.

The first stage of the review will take the form of a "prior options" study. This will assess the extent to which the functions that the Scottish Community Education

Council performs are necessary for the achievement of the Government's policies, and whether there is scope for privatising, contracting out or transferring all, or part of its functions to another body. The results of the prior options study will inform a detailed review of the Council's policy and financial management systems.

The review will also examine the roles of other organisations involved in the development of community education in Scotland and the scope for co-ordination of their activities with those of the Council to ensure maximum value for money from the central government resources available for community education in Scotland.

This study will commence in the late summer. In order to help ensure that all options are considered fully, comments from interested parties will be welcome. Comments should be sent by 12 September 1997 to:

Mrs. P. A. Morrison
Head of the Community Education Branch
The Scottish Office Education and Industry Department
Area 2A West

Infertility Treatment

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in Scotland in each year since 1990; how many maternities there were in each year; and how many multiple births in each category were conceived as a result of (i) in-vitro fertilisation, (ii) gamete intra-fallopian transfer and (iii) other forms of assisted conception. [8177]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The information is as follows:

Type of birth	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996[1]

Pupil Exclusions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children with statements of special educational needs were permanently excluded from schools in Scotland in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and what each figure was as a proportion of the total number of children permanently excluded from schools. [8724]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 21 July 1997]: Information on the number of pupils with statements of special educational needs who were permanently excluded from school is not held centrally.

Information on the total number of pupils permanently excluded from school is available for 1994–95 but was not collected in prior years. The information for 1994–95, consistent with that set out in the report on attendance and absence in Scottish schools, 1994–95 published by the audit unit of HM inspectors of schools, is set out in the table.

	Number of pupils permanently excluded from schools in 1994–95
Primary pupils	47
Secondary pupils	296

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the policy of his Department on the timely payment of debts; and what is his Department's record on the payment of debts in the current financial year. [9525]

Mr. Chisolm [holding answer Friday 18 July 1997]: All Departments are required to pay all their bills within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of the goods or service or a valid invoice, whichever is later, where no such terms exist. Information on payment performance for the current financial year could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Government will publish a league table of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the autumn.

HIV-AIDS

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many new HIV infections there have been among (a) intravenous drug users, (b) heterosexuals and (c) homosexuals in the age groups (1) 16 to 25, (2) 26 to 35, (3) 36 to 45, (4) 46 to 55 and (5) over 55s by health authority (i) each year since 1985 and (ii) in total; if he will list the year on year change in each group in percentage terms; and if he will make a statement about the Government's targeting of HIV-AIDS prevention materials. [9221]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer Monday 21 July 1997]: Information about diagnosed HIV infections in Scotland is held in the transmission categories and age groups shown in table 1. Individuals often do not seek testing unless they believe themselves to be at risk or develop symptoms and hence reported HIV infections underestimate the true number of cases. In addition, these figures may be subject to under-reporting.

The figures are given on an all-Scotland basis because presenting data by health boards may threaten confidentiality in low prevalence areas. Table 2 shows the year on year change in each group in percentage terms.

The Government's targeting of HIV-AIDS prevention materials is in line with the UK health Departments' Strategy, "HIV and AIDS Health Promotion: An Evolving Strategy", November 1995. This emphasised the need for better targeting of vulnerable groups such as gay men, as well as the need to inform the general population about the continuing potential risks from HIV.

In Scotland, recent data indicate that new infections among gay men remain the highest of all transmission categories. In line with the strategy, The Scottish Office Department of Health is funding a project involving prevention work for gay men in Scotland. In addition to work aimed at the general population, The Health Education Authority carry out a limited amount of prevention work UK-wide targeted at gay and bisexual men. HIV-AIDS is one of the priority areas for the Health Education Board for Scotland; and its work at national level is complemented by the local activities of health boards.

Sustainably Produced Timber

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps his Department is taking to encourage the use of timber from sustainably managed forests. [9536]

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 21 July 1997]: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced at the recent UN General Assembly special session that the Government are preparing a new forest standard to provide a benchmark for the management of our forests. The Forestry Commission will monitor achievement against that standard. This initiative will help assure consumers that timber grown in Britain comes from sustainably managed forests. In addition, we are working to promote sustainable forestry abroad through our development assistance programme.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Public Order Offences (Londonderry)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many illegal republican parades and demonstrations her Department assesses to have taken place in Londonderry city during the last year; and how many persons have been charged with public order offences as a consequence. [4062]

Mr. Ingram: During the past year, there was one illegal Republican parade in Londonderry city. To date, no persons have been charged with public order offences.

Killyleagh Community Hall

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what dates the central community relations unit received the outline design for the Killyleagh community hall from Down district council; on what dates the CCRU decided to appoint independent consultants to prepare an economic appraisal of the project; when the consultants were advised of their appointments by the CCRU; and when the CCRU received the economic appraisals from the consultants. [4785]

Mr. Worthington: The central community relations unit received the outline design for Killyleagh community hall on 21 February 1996; CCRU decided to appoint independent consultants to assess the proposal as a stand-alone project on 16 December 1996; the consultants were given written confirmation of their appointment on 21 March 1997; and the economic appraisal was received on 17 June 1997.

This application was unusual as a separate application for a capital project with a cross community dimension in the same area was also received in 1996. It was important to consider the relationship between both projects and to avoid duplication. Consequent on the economic appraisal, CCRU will recommend grant aid for the community hall and has informed Down district council accordingly.

Absent Voting Papers

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the number of absent voting papers issued in (a) each parliamentary constituency and (b) in Northern Ireland for the (i) 1992 and (ii) 1997 elections, and the percentage difference between 1992 and 1997 for each constituency; and if she will make a statement. [7722]

Marjorie Mowlam: The information is as follows:

1992 and 1997 Northern Ireland general election: absent voting

Parliamentary constituency	Absent voting		Percentage difference
	1992	1997
North Down	1,048	1,052	0.40
Strangford	938	1,271	35.50
South Down	5,359	3,504	34.61
Lagan Valley	1,104	1,443	30.71
Upper Bann	1,854	1,759	–5.12
Newry and Armagh	3,580	3,960	10.61
Fermanagh and South Tyrone	5,847	5,996	2.55
Mid-Ulster	3,638	5,047	38.73
Foyle	1,531	1,460	–4.64
East Londonderry	2,409	2,128	–11.66
North Antrim	1,032	1,467	42.15
East Antrim	1,002	793	–20.86
South Antrim	962	884	–8.11
Belfast north	615	847	37.72
Belfast east	638	912	42.93
Belfast south	856	886	3.50
Belfast west	757	1,104	45.84
West Tyrone	—	4,372	—
Totals	33,170	38,885	17.23

These figures show a significant rise in the numbers of absent votes in Northern Ireland over the last two general elections. Due to boundary changes which increased the number of Northern Ireland constituencies by one in 1995, there is no strict comparison between the two elections.

However, in just under a third of Northern Ireland parliamentary constituencies the number of absent votes issued was greater in 1992 than at the 1997 general election. In those constituencies which did see an increase in the absent votes issued, in a quarter of these cases the percentage increase was less than 5 per cent. It is the case that in just under half of the 17 constituencies there has been an increase of more than 30 per cent. in the numbers of absent votes issued.

The Government have made it clear that they are concerned at the increase in the numbers of absent votes issued at the last election, and that will study with interest the results of the study begun by the chief electoral officers into all absent vote applications in Northern Ireland for the last three elections.

Orange March, Garvaghy Road

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the decision was taken to allow the Orange Order march down the Garvaghy road on 5 July; and what criteria were used in coming to that decision. [8481]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 18 July 1997, Official Report, column 338.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what occasions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have refused to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings with hon. Members to discuss matters relating to interests registered by those hon. Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8113]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The first report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) made it clear that, when Members are meeting Ministers or others on topics in which they have an interest, the onus is on the Member to declare that interest, not the Minister to know—paragraph 63 of Cm 2850). It is not practicable for Ministers and officials, among their other duties, to vet requests for meetings against the Register of Members' Interests.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department refuse requests from hon. Members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those hon. Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8110]

Dr. Cunningham: The first report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life, Cm 2850 recognised the value of enabling Members to retain interests outside the House, provided that these were properly declared, both in the Register of Members' Interests and on other occasions. Subject to these requirements, and to the rules of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, Members are free to seek meetings with Ministers and officials, who will consider such requests alongside the many other approaches from individuals and organisations concerned to press their own interests or those of others.

Commercial Lobbyists

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have met commercial lobbyists to discuss matters relating to the business of his Department; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings; [8111]

(2) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have attended meetings with organisations representing (i) commercial and (ii) non-commercial interests organised by commercial lobbying firms; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings. [8112]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained in his reply to my hon. Friend for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 2 June 1997, Official Report, column 99, Ministers and officials in my Department receive deputations from many groups which are concerned to press their own interests or those of their clients, which Ministers and officials take due care to consider within the wider public and Government policy. As it is not practicable to distinguish particular groups as lobbyists, my Department cannot and does not keep a register of such meetings.

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what regulations govern the transportation of poultry between farms and slaughterhouses. [8663]

Mr. Morley: Welfare provisions for the transport of poultry, and other animals, are contained in the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the compliance of transporters with laws protecting animals during international transit. [8660]

Mr. Morley: It has been stated in a European Commission report, and is widely acknowledged, that transporters commonly flout the rules on welfare in transit when transporting livestock over long distances on the continent. The Department has undertaken no research on this, but has arrangements in place with certain other member states to undertake spot checks on compliance with route plans declared in advance when animals are sent from Great Britain. These arrangements will continue, in support of the activities of local authorities in pursuit of their statutory responsibility to enforce the tougher controls we have now introduced in the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) inquiries and (b) applications have been received by his Department for licences for exporting animals under the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1957; and how many licences have been granted. [8677]

Mr. Morley: There is no requirement in the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997 for exports of animals to be licensed. However, the order does require that, from 1 October 1997, anyone transporting cattle, sheep, pigs, goats or horses on a journey over eight hours must have a specific authorisation to engage in this activity. The process of receiving and processing applications for these authorisations is at an early stage: we have received 67 applications to date.

Broiler Chickens

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to restrict the selective breeding for rapid growth of broiler chickens. [8656]

Mr. Morley: Selective breeding for rapid growth of broiler chickens is not, of itself, a cause for concern. It is, however, important to consider the implications for the welfare of the birds. An independent review by the Farm Animal Welfare Council, which will cover all aspects of the broiler breeding industry including selection procedures, is currently under way. I look forward to receiving the council's recommendations as to the direction of any future controls.

Hunting (Forestry Commission Land)

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the review of hunting on

Forestry Commission land will be completed; what is the composition of the body undertaking it; and what its terms of reference are. [8729]

Mr. Morley: The review of hunting on Forestry Commission land is an internal review which is being carried out by the forestry commissioners and commission officials as a normal part of their duties. The commissioners aim to complete their review later this summer.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with the Forestry Commission regarding the review of hunting with hounds on forestry commission land. [8891]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 July 1997]: The forestry commissioners are reviewing their policy on hunting with hounds on commission land, and will advise us of their conclusions in due course.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many and what percentage of employees in his private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [8967]

Mr. Morley: Of the individuals working in the Minister's Private Office, one is of Asian origin—16.66 per cent. of staff—and two—33.3 per cent. of staff are of Afro-Caribbean origin.

Jules Hurry

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what investigation was carried out into the political activities of the civil servant Jules Hurry. [9015]

Mr. Morley: The Department has recently concluded a full investigation under its disciplinary procedures. It is long-established Government practice that the results of such investigations are not made public.

Sheep Exports

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking (a) to ensure that sheep exported from the United Kingdom on 5 July and currently held at two Italian abattoirs whilst a dispute about their health certification is resolved are properly cared for and (b) to resolve that dispute; and if he will make a statement. [9410]

Mr. Morley: Responsibility for the welfare of the exported sheep now rests with the Italian authorities We have pressed them to fulfil this responsibility, and understand that the Italian authorities are regularly checking the animals and the conditions in which they are being kept. We have made it clear to the Italian authorities that the certification that they are demanding has no basis in Community law and that we cannot provide it. We have also drawn the position to the attention of the European Commission. As we have stressed to the Italian authorities, it is vital, in the absence of an immediate solution to this problem, that what is to happen to the sheep is quickly resolved.

Employment Advertisements

Ms Perham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how often, since 1992, his Department has been responsible for employment advertisements which contained age restrictions upon those who could apply. [9513]

Mr. Morley: Since 1992, neither the core Department nor its agencies have used age restrictions in any recruitment advertisements.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to receive Professor Krebs's report on bovine tuberculosis; what compensation he intends to make to farmers for damage suffered as a result of the current curtailment of badger removal operations; and if he will make a statement. [9464]

Mr. Rooker: Professor Krebs's report is expected later this year. Compensation is already paid to farmers for animals compulsorily slaughtered as reactors to the tuberculin test or as contacts.

Flax

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement on his policy towards flax sowing, with special reference to the Offham marshes site of special scientific interest near Lewes; [9518]

(2) what plans he has to amend the fibre flax regime to prevent previously uncultivated land which is ploughed from qualifying for payments under the regime; and if he will make a statement. [9520]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 July 1997]: The Government consider that fibre flax is a useful alternative crop, whose production we should in general like to encourage. A number of changes have recently been made to the EU regime which should ensure that flax is grown on suitable land, appropriately cultivated and processed for a definite end use.

However, in view of recent concern, we are looking at a range of options specifically to address the problem of flax cultivation on valuable wildlife sites.

As regards the Offham marshes site of special scientific interest, I understand that ploughing and cultivation of crops is considered to be an acceptable operation, provided certain safeguards are observed.

Honey

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the proposal for a European Council Regulation to improve the production and marketing of honey (Com 96/0596). [9329]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 July 1997]: The Commission proposal for a regulation concerning the production and marketing of honey was adopted at the Council of Ministers meeting of 23 to 25 June. I welcome the regulation, which mainly aims to assist the beekeeping sector in dealing with the burden of the bee disease varroa. We are currently assessing how the UK might make the best use of the expenditure reimbursement provisions of the regulation and will consult the industry and others about it.

Cattle Cull

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he is taking to ensure that the reduction in abattoir contracts does not increase the backlog of cattle awaiting slaughter. [9544]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The indicative throughputs associated with the new abattoir contracts are based on regional forecasts of animals expected to enter the scheme with a sufficient margin to allow for seasonal fluctuations.

The current bottleneck at abattoirs has risen because producers are seeking to bring forward their culling plans before changes to the over-30-months scheme are introduced on 4 August. For the two weeks leading up to these changes, the indicative throughputs will be increased substantially to assist producers.

In addition, the Intervention Board has issued instructions to scheme abattoirs to ensure, as far as possible, that priority is given to those producers whose animals were already booked into the scheme, and that the available capacity is otherwise distributed as equitably as possible.

Truro Regional Service Centre Office

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the estimated performance improvements from the closure of the Truro office of the regional service centre. [9663]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 July 1997]: We expect to deliver high-quality services at a saving of some £100,000 a year to the taxpayer.

BSE

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which European Union member states currently face infringement proceedings in relation to bovine spongiform encephalopathy; what assessment his Department has made as to the health risks that result from such countries to consumers in the United Kingdom; if his Department has made representations for an export ban on beef products from those countries; and if he will make a statement. [10202]

Mr. Rooker: At the Standing Veterinary Committee on 3 July, the EU Commission's intention to take infraction proceedings against 10 member states for various reasons related to the EU measures in place in relation to BSE, was discussed. Action was to be taken against France, Germany, Portugal, Sweden, Belgium, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Spain, Finland and Italy.

These measures were to be taken as a result of the report of Commission inspections which were shown by the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee at its meeting on 23 May. On the basis of this, SEAC issued advice to Government which was published on 5 June and which resulted in the reply the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food gave to the House on that day, Official Report, columns 227–28. This reply made it clear that the Government proposed to extend the controls on beef from animals slaughtered in the UK to material once imported into the UK. We are not banning imports as such. The Agriculture Council on 22 to 23 July will be deciding on the introduction of EU-wide controls on cattle, sheep and goat offals.

Fish Stocks

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by port of registration the number of pressure stock licensed to be sold outside the United Kingdom. [10180]

Mr. Morley: Under the UK's restrictive licensing arrangements for fishing vessels, no new licences are issued. Licences may be transferred from one UK registered fishing vessel to another at the discretion of Ministers. We have no information readily available about the number of such transfers which may take place in the future. However, we estimate that currently there are some 160 UK-registered and licensed fishing vessels which have significant foreign interests in their ownership.

Cod Quotas

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much cohesion cod is allotted annually to each European Union state; what criteria determine such allocations; and if he will make a statement. [10211]

Mr. Morley: This quota to fish cod in Norwegian waters north of 62°N, granted to the European Union by Norway as part of the European Economic Area agreement, is allocated to the four cohesion countries on the basis of fixed allocation keys. The shares, and quantities received in 1997 are as follows:

	Per cent.	Tonnes
Greece	5	550
Ireland	5	550
Portugal	45	4,950
Spain	45	4,950

Beef Exports

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the risks to health posed by British beef exported in breach of the beef export ban. [10013]

Mr. Rooker: Health and identification marks have been partly or wholly removed from beef which has been seized in another country on suspicion that it has been illegally exported from the UK. Without those marks, it is not possible to confirm either that it met hygiene standards at the time of slaughter or its origin. Standards for the production of beef in the UK are, nevertheless, as high as anywhere in Europe. There are stringent safeguards to ensure that carcases from BSE suspects cannot enter the human food chain and UK controls to prevent specified bovine material from entering the human food chain are the toughest in Europe.

Hormones

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the World Trade Organisation hormone panel conclusions; and if he will make a statement. [10203]

Mr. Rooker: The disputes panel has upheld complaints by the US and Canada about the EU's ban on meat from animals treated with growth promoting hormones, finding it to be inconsistent with the World Trade Organisation agreement on sanitary and phytosanitary measures. The reports cannot be adopted by the WTO until the appeals process has been completed; we expect this will not be before the autumn at the earliest.

PRIME MINISTER

Law Agent's Letter

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what response he has sent to the letter of 14 July of the law agent, George More, of Edinburgh, relating to the suffering of the Libyan people. [9829]

The Prime Minister: As far as I am aware, I have not yet received this letter.

House of Commons (Radio Broadcasts)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to consult leaders of other parties represented in the House over the future radio reporting of the House; and if he will make a statement. [9832]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 21 July 1997]: None; in all matters concerning the editorial content and scheduling of programming, responsibility rests with the BBC itself. I am sure, however, that the BBC will take into account the strong views which have been expressed on the matter by Madam Speaker and by hon. Members on both sides of the House.

Offshore Trusts

Mr. Prior: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to prohibit the holding of shares in offshore trusts by Ministers. [9786]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 21 July 1997]: "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" is currently being reviewed. Until the review is complete, I have asked my ministerial colleagues to abide by the general principles contained in the 1992 version, which has been published.

Honours

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister how many staff are employed in preparation and scrutiny of applications for honours; and what was the annual cost of (a) preparation of the honours list and (b) the Political honours scrutiny committee, in the latest year for which figures are available. [9412]

The Prime Minister: The ceremonial branch of the Cabinet Office which handles all honours applications and related matters, including public nominations, comprises 18 people and has an annual budget of £368,000. The wider cost of operating the honours system, including estimates of small parts of the work of many people at home and overseas, could not be provided other than at disproportionate cost. Members of the Political Honours Scrutiny Committee receive no remuneration.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has for changes in the procedures for the allocation and scrutiny of honours. [9411]

The Prime Minister: I plan to continue recommending bi-annual honours lists, for which the sole criterion will be quality of service in a wide range of areas of national life. I have asked that those scrutinising nominations should give weight to achievements in areas of service identified by the Government as priorities for improvement.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the names of the members of the Political Honours scrutiny committee and the number of occasions on which it met in each of the last five years. [9413]

The Prime Minister: The members of the political honours scrutiny committee are Lord Pym MC DL, chairman, the Lord Cledwyn of Penhors CH and the Lord Thomson of Monifieth KT. The number of meetings to scrutinise those proposed on account of their political services, including working life peers, were as follows:

1993: 4

1994: 3

1995: 4

1996: 4

1997: 2 (to date)

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 16 July, Official Report, columns 387–88, in reference to the letter from Alain Dejammet, Stephen Gomersall and Bill Richardson, permanent representatives of France, the United Kingdom and the USA, to the President of the Security Council, what recent review of the evidence relating to the Lockerbie case has been conducted by the UN Security Council. [9830]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 21 July 1997]: None. It is not the Security Council's job to do so. The evidence is held by the national investigating and prosecuting authorities and is not in the public domain.

Political Appointments

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Prime Minister how many political advisers or their political appointees have been appointed since 1 May, who are not paid from public funds; if he will name them and their departments; if each such appointment has been approved by him; by whom they are paid; whether they are in all other respects subject to the same rules of employment as political advisers paid from public funds; and if he will list the precedents for such appointments. [2838]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 10 June 1997]: The appointment of unpaid political advisers is subject to the same rules as were followed by the previous Administration. Unpaid advisers are personal appointments by the Minister concerned and carry no remuneration or reimbursement from public funds. They are not civil servants and are not subject to the same rules of employment as special advisers paid for from public funds. In making an appointment, Ministers and unpaid advisers must ensure that there is no conflict between the issues on which the unpaid adviser will be advising and their private concerns; unpaid advisers are also subject to the normal rules of confidentiality. I am notified before these appointments are made.

In addition to the political office in No. 10 Downing street, the following appointments have been made:

Appointing Minister	Appointee	Individual or organisation paying their salary
Chancellor of the Exchequer	Sue Nye	Not in receipt of any pay
Deputy Prime Minister	David Taylor	Lancashire Enterprises PLC
Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs	David Mathieson	Labour Party
Minister without Portfolio	Benjamin Wegg-Prosser	Labour Party
President of the Board of Plc Trade	Lord Hollick	United News and Media
Secretary of State for Social Security	Anna Coote	Institute of Public and Policy Research

There are precedents for appointments on the same basis under previous Administrations.

HEALTH

Child Care

17. Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to improve the arrangements for the care of pre-school age children. [7960]

Mr. Boateng: My hon. Friends the Under-Secretaries of State for Education and Employment, the Members for Birmingham, Yardley (Ms. Morris) and for Newport, East (Mr. Howarth), met me on 30 June to discuss our plans to create a fully integrated early years service for all pre-school children. I shall ensure that we protect the care needs of very young children and in particular children in need as we develop our plans, but I believe that integrating services as we propose will greatly benefit young children.

Health Inequalities

18. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what inequalities in Health and life expectancy exist between different regions in England. [7961]

Ms Jowell: Substantial inequalities in health and life expectancy exist between different regions in England. For example, in the early 1990s, there were regional variations in life expectancy at birth of more than three years for males and two and a half years for females. In 1992 East Anglia had the longest life expectation at 75.4 years for men and 80.3 years for women, while North Western had the worst at 72.3 years for men and 77.6 years for women. Regional variations in certain measures of health are even greater. On the basis of the 1991 census question on limiting long standing illness, it has been estimated that the expected number of years of life in good health varies between the best and the worst region by six and a half years for men and five years for women.

36. Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the relative (a) health and (b) life expectancy of different ethnic groups in England. [7979]

Ms Jowell: Information on health in certain ethnic groups is available from various surveys and the 1991 census included specific questions on health and ethnicity. A collation of key information, "Ethnicity and Health: a guide for the NHS" was published in 1993 by the Department of Health and a new edition is in preparation.

The fourth national survey of ethnic minorities, which was co-ordinated by the Policy Studies Institute, was the largest study of ethnic minorities ever carried out in Britain. An initial report which included a chapter on health was published earlier this year. More detailed reports on the physical and mental health of ethnic minorities are due out shortly.

Although there are currently no data readily available on life expectancy in different ethnic groups the Acheson inquiry will be looking at inequalities in health, including those related to ethnicity, since this is a topic of considerable importance. Furthermore, detailed studies of mortality by country of birth have been performed which indicate marked differences from the national average in specific sub groups. For example, there are high rates of stroke mortality in people under 65 years among those born on the Indian subcontinent and in the Caribbean and African Commonwealth.

Abortion

19. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his attendance at the Devolution, Scotland, Wales and Regions Cabinet Committee, with particular reference to discussions relating to abortion. [7962]

Ms Jowell: The Government's forthcoming White Paper will set out our proposals on all aspects of devolution, including abortion.

NHS Appointments

20. Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria he will be using to decide whom to appoint to the boards of NHS trusts. [7963]

Mr. Milburn: The Department has recently issued revised guidelines on the qualities we will be looking for in non-executive directors of NHS trusts. The guidelines are designed to make boards much more representative of the communities they serve; to encourage more NHS users and carers to become members of boards; and to ensure that all candidates are personally committed to the national health service.

Public Health Strategies

21. Ms Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to address the problems of want, idleness, squalor, ignorance and disease. [7964]

Ms Jowell: I addressed Beveridge's five giants in my speech on our new health strategy on 7 July, a copy of which is available in the Library. Our new health strategy will be wider and focus on determinants in health. Want will be tackled through the minimum wage. Idleness through the Welfare to work programme. Squalor through improved housing through the phased release of council house sale receipts; and through policies to improve the environment. Ignorance through education, by encouraging schools to promote health and well-being. Disease through rescuing the NHS banning tobacco advertising, establishing the food standards agency and a £1,000,000 programme of research into the effects of air pollutants commonly found in the home. This will complement research on outdoor pollutants which is already under way.

28. Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to ensure that the Government's public health strategy for England will address the issues of social exclusion. [7971]

Ms Jowell: As announced in my speech on 7 July, improving the health of our nation and tackling the legacy of inequality are matters not just for the Department of Health but are jobs to be confronted across Government. We aim to tackle poverty and inequality through our commitment to helping people move from welfare to work, to ending poverty pay by introducing a national minimum wage, and to improve housing conditions by the phased release of local authority capital receipts.

Of all the important aspects of public health, none exacts a heavier toll in terms of disease and death than smoking. And smoking is a clear proxy for inequalities. There are more poor smokers, and as a result, poor people suffer disproportionately from preventable illness and premature death. That is why the Government have given an undertaking to ban tobacco advertising and promotion, and why we are determined to tackle smoking with the seriousness it deserves. On 14 July, we held an international anti-smoking summit to galvanise concerted action across society, and to learn from the experience of experts from around the world on how best to proceed. We will use the knowledge gained at the summit to inform the development of a White Paper which will be published later this year. The White Paper will set out in full our plans for measures to curb smoking, including our proposals for legislation to ban tobacco advertising.

Private Medical Insurance

22. Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many retired people he expects to relinquish private health cover as a consequence of the loss of tax relief. [7965]

Mr. Milburn: Few.

30. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of the abolition of tax relief on private medical insurance for the over–60s on the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [7973]

Mr. Milburn: Any impact on the national health service will be dwarfed by the additional resources of £1.2 billion recently announced by the Chancellor.

Management and Office Costs

25. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health authorities have achieved the previous Government's targets for reduction in management costs; and what assessment he has made of how soon health authorities will implement the £120 million of further cuts required in management and office costs. [7968]

Mr. Milburn: Final accounts figures for health authority costs and trust management costs in 1996–97 are expected to be available towards the end of the year.

On 22 May, we announced that national health service management costs would be reduced by £100 million in 1997–98.

Health Service Review

27. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he intends to publish a White paper on the future of the NHS; [7970]

29. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he now expects the review of the NHS to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [7972]

Mr. Milburn: We intend to publish a White Paper on the national health service this autumn which will set out the Government's plans to replace the NHS internal market.

Accident and Emergency Facilities (Solihull)

26. Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy towards the undertakings provided by the former Minister for Health on 20 March 1996 regarding services at Solihull hospital, with particular reference to 24 hour accident and emergency facilities; and if he will make a statement. [7969]

Mr. Milburn: The future of Solihull hospital within the Birmingham Heartlands NHS trust is secure. We will look to the trust to continue to provide high quality health services for the people of Solihull.

NHS Trusts

31. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the role and responsibilities of NHS trusts and their non-executive directors. [7974]

Mr. Milburn: National Health Service trusts exist to provide a range of vital health services to the communities they serve. Non-executive directors are appointed to guide the work of the trust and to take decisions about policy and strategic direction to ensure the efficient and effective delivery of services.

Operations

32. Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of whether operations are being performed by appropriately qualified and supervised doctors. [7975]

Mr. Milburn: We do not collect details about the medical staff who carry out operations. Hospital consultants are responsible for supervising the work of doctors in training. All doctors have a professional responsibility to ensure that they only undertake operations within their clinical competence.

Waiting Lists

33. Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about hospital waiting lists in (a) Stretford and Urmston and (b) Greater Manchester. [7976]

Mr. Milburn: Information about numbers of patients waiting for admission to national health service trusts in England is published quarterly in "Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England", copies of which are available in the Library. The latest information available gives the position on 31 March 1997. This shows that the numbers of patients waiting for admission on either an in-patient or day case basis to the two major trusts in Stretford and Urmston have increased by 20 per cent. since 31 March 1996. In Greater Manchester the numbers waiting have increased at nine of the 12 major trusts serving the area, by 10 per cent. overall. The latter is in line with the increase nationally over the period.

Nutrition

34. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to promote a greater awareness of nutrition in relation to the causes of ill health; and if he will make a statement. [7977]

Ms Jowell: Research by the Health Education Authority shows that most people in all social classes now know the key messages of healthy eating.

The Department will continue to secure and publish expert independent advice from the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy; to work with the Health Education Authority and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in developing and publishing materials for health professionals and the general public on healthy eating throughout the age range; and to continue work to ensure that nutrition features in the training of health professionals and teachers.

On 7 July I announced the Department's plans to publish a Green Paper in the autumn on a strategy for health which will be subject to wide consultation.

Primary Care Commissioning

35. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when primary care commissioning pilots will commence. [7978]

Mr. Milburn: A programme of primary care-led commissioning pilots was announced on 26 June. Applications to take part in the programme should be made by 31 August and the final selection will be made by 30 September. Following a preparatory period, the evaluation will start on 1 April 1998.

Insulin Pens

37. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is his Department's intention to put insulin pen needles on prescription. [7980]

Mr. Milburn: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Greenock and Inverclyde (Mr. Godman) on 17 June, Official Report at column 102.

Health Service Funding

38. Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements he has made to ensure that services are not affected in the present financial year by the deficits in health authority and health trust budgets. [7981]

Mr. Milburn: We are under no illusions about the legacy we inherited. We know that the national health service is under considerable pressure this year. The first duty of the NHS is to respond to those in greatest need, ensuring capacity to respond to emergencies. This it must do. We are also actively taking steps to ensure full co-operation between local social services and the health service to help cope with winter pressures.

Efficiency Savings (Lichfield)

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to visit the Premier Health NHS trust headquarters in Lichfield to discuss efficiency savings in the national health service. [7967]

Mr. Milburn: We have no plans to visit the Premier Health National Health Service Trust, but are aware of the trust's improving efficiency and its streamlined management structure. The Government welcome this, given our firm commitment to reducing bureaucracy in the NHS.

NHS Sale and Lease Arrangements

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the applicability of sale and lease arrangements to the NHS. [6790]

Mr. Milburn: Sale and leaseback may be appropriate where value for money to the national health service can be clearly demonstrated. However, the consequences of any such arrangements need to be carefully considered to ensure they are to the long term benefit of the NHS.

Private Finance Initiative (Hospital Projects)

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will consider hospital PFI proposals which include the provision by the contracting body of any form of clinical support services. [7418]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 10 July 1997, Offical Report, at column 578.

Private finance initiative schemes which come forward for approval before the announcement at the end of the year will not be approved if they include services which Ministers consider, in the interests of the national health service, to be inappropriate.

Immunisation Campaigns

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent by his Department on mumps, measles and rubella vaccination campaigns for each of the last five years for which figures are available; and what is the amount of expenditure planned for (a) 1997; (b) 1998 and (c) 1999. [7838]

Ms Jowell: It is not possible to identify expenditure on measles, mumps and rubella immunisation separately within the childhood immunisation programme.

Immunisation expenditure is made up of three components: the cost of buying the vaccines; the cost of giving the vaccines; and the cost of the accompanying information materials. Only vaccine purchase expenditure can be identified for each vaccine, and is shown in the table.

Expenditure on giving measles, mumps and rubella immunisations cannot be separately identified since general practitioners receive a target payment for immunisation based on the percentage of children on their list who are immunised against diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis, polio, haemophilus influenzae type B, and measles, mumps and rubella. Similarly information expenditure, through the Health Education Authority and the Department of Health's own immunisation materials for parents, covers the whole immunisation programme: as such it is not possible to identify expenditure which might be attributable to measles, mumps and rubella immunisation.

The cost of purchasing measles, mumps and rubella vaccines in each of the last five financial years is in the table:

1992–93: £4.3 million

1993–94: £5.3 million

1994–95: £16.8 million

1995–96: £6.8 million

1996–97: £9.7 million

The figures include:

(i) all years: a single dose of measles, mumps and rubella—(MMR)—vaccine offered to all children at age 12 to 15 months;

(ii) all years: rubella vaccine offered to sero-negative women;

(iii) 1994–95: measles and rubella vaccine offered to all children aged between 5 and 16 during a nationwide campaign to avert a predicted epidemic;

(iv) until October 1996: rubella immunisation offered to all girls at age 10-14;

(v) from October 1996: a second dose of MMR vaccine offered to all children at the time they receive their pre-school immunisations.

(vi) a catch-up second dose MMR programme also initiated from October 1996. Full details are in EL(96)61, copies of which are available in the Library.

The estimated cost of measles, mumps and rubella vaccines purchased over the next three years is:

1997–98: £7.9 million

1998–99: £7.9 million

1999–2000: £7.8 million

Note: includes the forecast of two doses of MMR vaccine offered to all children before school entry; and rubella vaccine offered to sero-negative women.

Care Homes (Wiltshire)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultation Wiltshire social services undertakes with a referred patient before placing that patient in (a) a local authority home and (b) a private sector home. [8424]

Mr. Boateng: Wiltshire social services department has informed the Department of Health that it will first assess the needs of the person. If it decides that the person requires to be placed in a residential home, it encourages the person to consider at least three homes, two of which it would expect to be within the independent sector.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many formal notifications were made to Wiltshire's director of social services and chief executive in the last five years as a result of requirements set at inspections of care homes which have not been complied with against specified time scales. [8414]

Mr. Boateng: The Department does not specifically collect this information. However, registration authorities should return to the Department details of those home owners whose registration they refuse or cancel. This is compiled on the national list of refused and cancelled registrations which is then circulated to all local authorities in England. For Wiltshire in this period we have been notified of only one cancellation. In addition, for this period, the registration of one further home owner in Wiltshire was cancelled following appeal to the registered homes tribunal.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much he estimates could be saved if Wiltshire county council moved its residential homes into private sector management. [8415]

Mr. Boateng: We have not made such an estimate because centrally available information does not include sufficient detail. In particular, the routine statistics do not distinguish the expenditure on placements in private care homes from those in the voluntary sector.

It is for each local authority to decide how best to arrange their community care services to meet the needs of their population. We have made it clear that it is not important whether services are provided by the public, private or voluntary sector. What is important, and what the Government are committed to, is that people will receive services which are of high quality, are responsive to their needs and wishes, and which deliver value for money.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) local authority and (b) private sector homes have block bookings by Wiltshire social services. [8417]

Mr. Boateng: Wiltshire social services has informed the Department that it gives its in-house residential homes an annual budget. The majority of the places that it purchases from the independent sector are "spot purchased".

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) county council run and (b) private sector care homes have (i) opened and (b) closed in Wiltshire in each of the last five years. [8419]

Mr. Boateng: Information on the number of residential care homes opened and closed in the former county of Wiltshire in the years 1993–94 to 1995–96, together with the total number of residential care homes at 31 March 1996, is given in the following table. Reliable information is not available for earlier years. Comparable information is not available centrally for nursing care homes.

Residential care homes in Wiltshire, 1993–94 to 1995–96 [1]

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96

Department of Health Annual Statistical return (RAC5).
Note:
1 April to 31 March of the following year in each case.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what projections his Department has evaluated of the number of council-run care places and private sector care places which will be needed in the future in Wiltshire. [8422]

Mr. Boateng: The Department has not made any such evaluation. It is for each local authority to plan its community care services to meet the needs of its population.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the names by sector of the nursing home and residential care providers used by Wiltshire health authority indicating the percentage of clients funded by Wiltshire social services at each and the average weekly cost to Wiltshire county council per resident at each home. [8426]

Mr. Boateng: At 31 March 1996, there were 32 local authority care homes, 66 voluntary sector residential care homes and 118 private sector residential care homes in former county of Wiltshire. In addition there were a further 85 private nursing homes within the Wiltshire and Bath health authority area at the same date. A list of the names of all these homes has been placed in the Library.

Information is not collected centrally on the numbers of residents in each home who are supported financially by the local authority nor on expenditure related to such placements, so costs cannot be calculated at the level of individual homes. Such expenditure information as has been provided in respect of the former Wiltshire is of total, rather than the usual gross, expenditure by sector. Weekly costs based on this measure of expenditure could not take account of income received from other local authorities in respect of residential provision in Wiltshire of clients normally resident outside the county boundary and would not be comparable with weekly costs produced for other local authorities.

Information on the numbers of residents financially supported by Wiltshire social services at 31 March 1996 in homes within Wiltshire, by sector, is shown in the table.

Residents financially supported by Wiltshire social services, 31 March 1996

	Local authority	Voluntary sector residential care	Private sector residential care	Private nursing care
Number of financially supported residents supported in homes in Wiltshire	963	78	681	611
Percentage of all residents in homes in Wiltshire	91	13	35	27
Number of financially supported residents supported in homes outside Wiltshire	—	16	94	120

Department of Health Annual Statistical returns (RAC5, SR1).

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nursing home patients have been placed in council-run residential homes in Wiltshire in the last five years. [8423]

Mr. Boateng: Local authorities are required to provide services which meet the assessed needs of the individual. If a person has been assessed as needing care in a nursing home the local authority cannot place them in a residential home.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much Wiltshire social services has spent on places in (a) council and (b) private care homes in each year since 1991. [8425]

Mr. Boateng: Routine financial statistics returned by the former Wiltshire county council have wrongly included expenditure on independent sector provision along with that on local authority homes and therefore do not provide the information requested. The following breakdown of the statistics has been obtained specially from the authority but the figures are of total expenditure rather than the usual gross expenditure and so take no account of any income received by the authority from other local authorities in respect of residential provision in Wiltshire of clients normally resident outside the county boundary.

Total expenditure on residential provision for adults (excluding nursing provision), Wiltshire, 1993–94 to 1995–96

£ million

Sector of home	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
(a) Local authority	17	16	16
(b) Independent sector	5	15	20
(c) Total	22	31	35

Comparable figures for earlier years are not available from the authority.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much he estimates needs to be spent on Wiltshire county council care homes to bring them up to (a) 1984 Government minimum standard and (b) 1997 Government standards. [8413]

Mr. Boateng: The information needed to make such an estimate is not available centrally. The Government have made no changes to the Registered Homes Act 1984 and associated regulations which sets out the requirements which care homes must meet to obtain and retain registration under the Act.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the patient/staff ratio in (a) local authority and (b) private nursing and residential homes in Wiltshire. [8420]

Mr. Boateng: Latest centrally available information for 1995–96 shows that the ratio of residents to directly employed staff in local authority residential homes for adults in the former county of Wiltshire was 1.36 to 1 and the ratio of residents to nursing staff in private nursing homes in the Wiltshire and Bath health authority area was 1.08 to 1. Staffing information is not collected centrally in respect of private residential homes.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the Pannell Kerr Forster review of services for the elderly commissioned by Wiltshire county council. [8416]

Mr. Boateng: The Department has not assessed the Pannell Kerr Forster Review of Services report. This review was commissioned by Wiltshire county council, and it is for them to consider its findings.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the present number of vacancies in (a) council-run and (b) private nursing and residential homes in Wiltshire. [8418]

Mr. Boateng: Information on the number of vacancies in residential and nursing care homes in the former county of Wiltshire as at 31 March 1996, the latest date for which information is available centrally, is given in the table.

Vacancies in care homes in Wiltshire at 31 March 1996

Sector and type of care home	Number of vacancies	As percentage of total places
Local authority care homes	114	9.7
Private residential care homes	449	18.6
Voluntary residential care homes	79	11.3
Private nursing homes[1]	454	16.7

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the (a) average and (b) the longest stay in hospital of a patient awaiting placement in long-term care by Wiltshire social services. [8421]

Mr. Boateng: The Department does not have this information. Wiltshire has informed the Department that their policy on this issue is that they aim to place people in a care home as soon as possible after the assessment has taken place, and the person has decided on a care home of his/her choice.

Missed Appointments

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what cost is incurred by the NHS through the failure of patients to turn up for scheduled operations; how this figure is calculated; and if he will make a statement. [8740]

Mr. Milburn: Information is not available on the costs incurred by the national health service for patients who miss their operations. Hospitals may be able to redirect resources, for example for the treatment of emergency cases that need to be fitted in during the day. In 1996–97 223,000 patients failed to turn-up for in-patient treatment. The average cost for a finished consultant episode in 1995–96—the latest figure available—was £1,103.

Aricept

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance his Department has issued regarding protocols for the use of the drug Aricept; [8782]

(2) if he will list the health authorities in England and Wales which have agreed to fund the use of Aricept by (a) general practitioners and (b) hospital consultants; [8783]

(3) if he will list the hospitals in England and Wales whose hospital formulary includes Aricept. [8781]

Mr. Milburn: Guidance has been prepared by the Royal College of Psychiatrists and endorsed by the standing medical advisory committee. We are currently considering whether to issue management guidance to the NHS, together with the clinical guidance on the prescribing of Aricept. Many health authorities and hospitals are still in the process of determining their local policy on the use of this drug.

Asthma

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the NHS expenditure on the treatment of asthma in the latest year for which figures are available; and what proportion of the total NHS budget this represents; [8863]

(2) what was the cost to the NHS of providing acute care to adults suffering from occupational asthma attacks in the last five financial years; [8859]

(3) what was the cost to the NHS of treating adult occupational asthma sufferers, in each year since 1989–90; [8864]

(4) if he will list NHS expenditure on treatment for asthma broken down by sub-head in the latest year for which information is available; and what proportion of this expenditure was spent on prescriptions. [8862]

Mr. Boateng: The bulk of the costs of asthma to the national health service is attributable to prescriptions. Information on the cost of other NHS services is for individual conditions and is only available locally. However, the Department of Health's "Burdens of Disease" analysis estimated that the cost of services for asthma was £150 million in 1993. On this basis, asthma accounted for under 2 per cent. of NHS net expenditure—including drugs—in 1992–93. The net ingredient cost of national health service prescriptions for asthma medication in 1996 was £438 million, which is 11 per cent. of the total net ingredient cost of prescriptions in that year. It is not possible to separate out the costs to the NHS of occupational asthma.

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the net ingredient cost for preparations used in treatment of asthma (a) in total and (b) per health authority, in each of the last four years; [8861]

(2) how many prescriptions for the treatment of asthma (a) in total and (b) per health authority were issued in each of the last four years; [8860]

(3) what was the expenditure on general practitioner-prescribed anti-asthma medication and preparations in each health authority broken down by (a) net ingredient costs and (b) net ingredient costs per capita in England. [8856]

Mr. Milburn: The available information has been placed in the Library. Information on the use of specific drugs in hospitals is not available.

Hospital Waste

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to encourage hospitals to adopt sustainable waste policies; and if he will make a statement. [8737]

Mr. Milburn: Waste strategy in hospitals should reflect the policies of "Making Waste Work—a strategy for sustainable waste management in England and Wales" published by the Department of the Environment in December 1995. However, in view of the inherent nature of health care provision, the reuse and recycling elements of the waste hierarchy have to be considered particularly carefully to avoid any risk of cross-infection. National Health Service Estates, an executive agency of the Department of Health, is preparing health technical memorandum 2065 "Waste Guidance", due for publication in September, dealing with the minimisation and segregation of clinical waste.

Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many civil servants there are on each pay band in his Department. [8954]

Ms Jowell: The information requested is shown in the table:

Pay band	Total
Permanent secretary	3
Senior civil service pay band 8	7
SCSPB7	7
SCSPB6	3
SCSPB5	1
SCSPB4	36
SCSPB3	17
SCSPB2	24
SCSPB1	264
Integrated pay band 4	772
IP3	1,144
Fast stream	45
IP2	966
IP1	1,423
Total	4,712

1. There are also some 150 staff who have not yet been assimilated into the new pay band structure.
2. These above figures are a head count and exclude casual staff, and staff out on loan, secondment, or special leave without pay.

July 1997.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of employees in his private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [8952]

Ms Jowell: Of 47 staff working in the private office, five or 11 per cent. are of ethnic minority origin and there are three or 6 per cent. whose ethnic origin is not known. To protect the confidentiality of staff, we cannot provide a further breakdown.

Accident and Emergency Departments (North Thames Region)

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the average waiting times at accident and emergency departments for patient requiring admission at (a) Hillingdon, (b) Ealing, (c) Northwich Park and (d) West Middlesex hospitals. [9174]

Mr. Milburn: The Department collects information by health authority which shows the percentage of patients requiring hospital admission through accident and emergency who were admitted within two hours. This information for the quarter ending 31 March 1997 for health authorities in north-west London is set out in the following table:

Health authority	Patients admitted within 2 hours Percentage
Brent and Harrow HA[1]	84
Ealing, Hammersmith and Houslow HA[2]	50
Hillingdon HA[3]	84

[1] Covers Northwick Park and St. Mark's NHS trust.
[2] Covers Ealing Hospital NHS trust and West Middlesex University Hospital NHS Trust.
[3] Covers Hillingdon Hospital NHS trust.

Action is being taken within the NHS to ensure that the needs of the emergency patient are met as effectively as possible.

Hospital Admissions (North Thames Region)

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people aged over 60 years have been admitted to hospital for one or more nights in each of the last three years at (a) Hillingdon, (b) Mount Vernon, (c) West Middlesex, (d) Ealing and (e) Northwick Park hospitals. [9183]

Mr. Boateng: Because of the changes and amalgamations that have taken place in the trust during the period concerned, the information given is the best estimate the national health service executive has available. The most recent information held is as follows:

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Hillingdon Hospital NHS trust	6,073	6,496	5,906
Mount Vernon and Watford Hospital NHS trust	6,352	5,963	12,632
West Middlesex University Hospital NHS trust	6,420	5,897	6,087
Ealing Hospital NHS trust	5,224	5,318	5,648
Northwick Park and St. Mark's NHS trust	6,370	5,875	6,368

The incorporation of Watford Trust into the Mount Vernon NHS Trust from 1994–95 explains the marked increase in cases recorded for the 1994–95 year.

School Nurses (North Thames Region)

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of school nurses employed by each community health trust within .the (a) Hillingdon, (b) Brent and Harrow, (c) Ealing, (d) Hammersmith and (e) Hounslow health authorities. [9175]

Mr. Milburn: Up to date information is not available centrally because from 1994 the Department of Health's non-medical work force census ceased to distinguish school nurses from other qualified nurses working in community services, excluding health visitors and district nurses. My hon. Friend may wish to contact the chairman of the individual health authorities for the information.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what code of practice and treatment recommendations are issued by his Department for the treatment of sufferers from Alzheimer's disease. [9493]

Mr. Boateng: Decisions about the treatment of Alzheimer's disease are a matter for the judgment of the medical practitioners in consultation with other members of the multi-disciplinary team.

Nye Bevan Anniversary

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to mark the 100th anniversary of the birth of Nye Bevan. [9182]

Mr. Milburn: Although there are no national plans to mark the centenary of Nye Bevan's birth, there will be events and initiatives throughout the country during 1998 to mark the 50th anniversary of the founding of the national health service—Nye Bevan's greatest achievement.

Employment Advertisements

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how often since 1992 his Department has been responsible for employment advertisements which contained age restrictions upon those who could apply. [9503]

Ms Jowell: Information on the wording of all advertisements since 1992 is not available except at disproportionate cost, but it is not normal practice to have age restrictions for posts in the Department of Health.

Dentists' Pay

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the levels of pay for salaried dentists working in the national health service; what other benefits are available to such dentists; and if he will make a statement. [9192]

Mr. Milburn: The salary scale for salaried dentists currently ranges from £21,360 to £31,080. Benefits available to salaried dentists are removal expenses, the same sick leave entitlements as community dental staff, paid annual leave discretionary additional leave to enable them to attend appropriate postgraduate refresher courses, and eligibility for the national health service superannuation scheme.

Recovered Memory Therapy

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has made to the Royal College of Psychiatrists on the Brandon report on recovered memory therapy. [9867]

Mr. Boateng: We understand that the Brandon report has not yet been published and look forward to reading it in due course.

Prescription Fraud

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the annual cost of prescription fraud in (a) Tamworth, (b) Staffordshire and (c) the west midlands. [9777]

Mr. Milburn: The report of the efficiency scrutiny into prescription fraud, published last month, estimated levels of prescription fraud in England and Wales as £85 million–£115 million per year. Based on the six-monthly exemption checking exercise carried out by family health services authorities, it is estimated that in 1995–96 the loss of revenue from patient charge evasion was about £0.4 million in Staffordshire family health services authority and about £5 million in West Midlands regional health authority. The total loss of revenue from patient charge evasion for that year, calculated on a different basis to that used by the efficiency scrutiny, was an estimated £34.5 million. It is not possible to estimate the loss in Tamworth alone.

Medicines Control Agency

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the revised framework document for the Medicines Control Agency. [10346]

Mr. Milburn: We have today published the revised Medicines Control Agency framework documents and copies have been placed in the Library.

NHS Pensions Agency

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the annual report and accounts of the NHS Pensions Agency. [10347]

Mr. Milburn: We have approved the report and accounts which have today been laid before both Houses of Parliament in accordance with the requirements of section 5(2) and 5(3) of the Exchequer and Audit Departments Acts 1921. Copies have also been placed in the Library.

Palliative Care

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he is taking to increase access to palliative care; [7902]

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on the development of palliative care. [8179]

Ms Jowell: The Government are aware of the valuable work of hospices and specialist palliative care units in this country. The development of palliative care has done much to change our attitude to death and the process of dying, demonstrating the positive aspects of good management of the patient up to the point of death. With appropriate palliative care, pain and other distressing symptoms can be greatly reduced and people helped to cope. We are committed to expanding palliative care for the dying in all settings. It is our policy that specialist palliative care should be available to all those in need of it, wherever they may live, as is recognised in the report "A Policy Framework for commissioning cancer services"—the "Calman/Hine" report—and the associated guidance in Executive Letter EL(96)85 "A Policy Framework for Commissioning Cancer Services: Palliative Care Services". Copies of both these documents are available in the Library. We look to all health authorities to ensure that they have a strategy in place to achieve this and we are encouraging increasing provision throughout the national health service.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure that the Government's review of the NHS takes full account of the relationship between the NHS and the independent hospice movement; and if he will make a statement. [8181]

Mr. Milburn: The comprehensive spending review will review all aspects of Government spending in the context of the Government's election manifesto commitment:

"if you are ill or injured there will be a National Health Service there to help; and access to it will be based on need and need alone—and not on your ability to pay, or on who your general practitioner happens to be or where you live".

We welcome any contributions from interested parties such as the independent hospice movement.

Oral Contraceptives

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received alleging that prescription charges for oral contraception would be discriminatory. [8354]

Mr. Milburn: None.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce prescription charges for oral contraceptives. [8355]

Mr. Milburn: We shall be examining prescription charges as part of the Government's comprehensive spending review. The Government remain committed to the historic principle of the national health service that health services will be available to all and access will be based on need, not on ability to pay.

Foster Care

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review foster care, with special reference to the views of young people in care and foster carers. [8484]

Mr. Boateng: There have been a number of departmental initiatives to review the foster care service. The Social Services Inspectorate recently carried out a national inspection to review foster care services. This included interviewing children in foster care and their carers. Their report, "Inspection of Local Authority Fostering 1995–96, National Summary Report", was published in December 1996. In addition, the Department has funded three other research reports. They were: a study undertaken by the National Foster Care Association into "The Organisation of Fostering Services," published in March 1997; "Foster Care, A Research Review", published in March 1997; and "Private Fostering: Development of Policy and Practice", published in March 1997 by the Save the Children Fund. Copies of all these reports were placed in the Library.

The review of safeguards for children living away from home, currently being conducted by Sir William Utting, has also looked at children in foster care. Consultation with young people formed part of the review process.

In 1995, the Department launched the "Looking After Children: Good Parenting, Good Outcomes" materials. They provide the opportunity to engage children, wherever they are placed, in their own care plans and encourage communications between all those involved in the care of the child. In the light of this, we do not consider a further review is necessary.

Embryos

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many frozen embryos have been destroyed to date (a) under the provisions of the Human Embryology and Fertilisation Act 1990 and (b) under other authority. [9705]

Ms Jowell: The figures requested are not routinely collected.

The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990 regulates, among other things, the storage of embryos. The Act requires embryos to be removed from storage and allowed to perish if the consent of the patients whose eggs and sperm created the embryos is withdrawn, or if the period of storage permitted under the Act comes to an end. For embryos stored on or before 1 August 1991, when the Act came into force, the maximum period for storage was five years, that is, until 31 July 1996.

Regulations came into effect on 1 May 1996 which extended the maximum storage period for embryos from five to 10 years, or longer in particular circumstances, if certain conditions were met. Effective consent under the Act for the extended storage period must be obtained in all cases.

Embryos stored on or before 31 July 1991 for which the required consent for extended storage was not given had, under the terms of the 1990 Act, to be allowed to perish on 1 August 1996. Information provided by licensed clinics to the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority shows that 4,402 embryos were removed from storage on or about that date.

Licensed Drugs

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the differences between health authorities regarding funding for the prescribing of certain licensed drugs; to what extent health authorities are free to refuse to prescribe certain drugs on the grounds of cost; and if he will review the disparities. [10106]

Mr. Milburn: Purchasers are responsible for funding those services which are clinically effective and meet the needs of local people in the light of the resources available.

Policy Reviews

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each departmental policy review presently in progress or scheduled, (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10186]

Ms Jowell: The Department of Health has set up the following reviews:

A review of the law relating to surrogacy, which is expected to report at the end of this year or at the start of next.

A review of the evidence relating to possible health risks associated with silicone breast implants, which is expected to report to the chief medical officer in late 1997.

A review of the breast cancer screening service in Devon and its implications for the breast cancer screening programme as a whole, which is expected to report in the next few weeks.

The independent advisory panel for the review of London's health services, the main elements of whose work are due to be completed by October 1997.

A review by Sir Donald Acheson into inequalities of health and life expectancy, which is expected to report during 1998.

An independent review of some key lessons to be drawn from experience of the "Health of the Nation", which is expected to report in the second quarter of 1998.

Health Promotion in Schools

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what improvements he proposes to promote good health in schools. [7956]

Ms Jowell: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Warrington, South (Ms Southworth) earlier today.

Cross-departmental Co-operation

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to promote cross-departmental co-operation in the development of the Government's public health strategy. [7950]

Ms Jowell: There is a commitment across Government to improve the overall health of the nation and to share responsibility for the new health strategy for England. We have set up a Cabinet Sub-committee to oversee the new strategy which is chaired by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council and will be attended by Ministers from 13 Government Departments, including myself and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. I shall also be meeting a range of ministerial colleagues from other Departments as we develop "Our Healthier Nation".

SOCIAL SECURITY

Mortgage Benefit

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the cost of introducing a mortgage benefit equivalent to housing benefit for low income owner occupiers in work. [5442]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Our objective is to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives. We will develop a system that supports work, savings and honesty, whilst keeping to our commitment to work within announced spending totals for the first two years of the Government.

Various forms of mortgage benefit for low-income owner-occupiers in employment have been suggested. The cost could be up to £1 billion per year, if the benefit was fully taken up.

Pensions Review

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what timetable has been set for her Department's review of pensions; what areas will be covered in this review; and if she will make a statement. [6846]

Mr. Denham: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, to my right hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Pollock (Mr. Davidson) on 17 July, Official Report, columns 239–41.

Asthma

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many registered days of certified incapacity due to sickness and invalidity caused by asthma there were in 1995; and how much this cost in benefits payments. [8858]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

	[1]4 April 1994 to 12 April 1995
Number of days of certified incapacity due to asthma, excluding days for which statutory sick pay is payable.	[2]17,061,000
Estimated cost of sickness and invalidity benefit	[3]£179 million

[1] The year ending April 1995 is the latest period for which figures are available.
[2] Source: 1 per cent. sample of all claims in Great Britain. Diagnosis taken from the International Classification of Diseases [1975 edition].
[3] It is not possible to provide figures for other benefits, such as income support which may be payable in addition to or in place of incapacity benefit.

Policy Reviews

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list for each departmental policy review presently in progress or scheduled, (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10184]

Ms Harman: The major components of this Department's programme are being reviewed as part of the comprehensive spending review, the terms of reference of which will be announced shortly.

As my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary said in answer to a question from the hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Mr. Forth) on 14 July, Official Report, column 3, we expect the comprehensive spending review to last approximately 12 months.

On 17 July I also announced a view of the central areas of insecurity for elderly people including all aspects of the basic pension and its value and second pensions including SERPS. The purpose of the review is to build a sustainable consensus for the long-term future of pensions. It will enable the Government to publish an initial framework for change in the first part of 1998. There will then be a period of further consultation before firm proposals are developed.

Child Support

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will give a breakdown of the compensation applications and awards made to Child Support Agency clients in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [5272]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We expect the Child Support Agency to provide an efficient and effective service to all its clients throughout the child support assessment process. We are looking for substantial and sustained operational improvements from the agency, in particular on getting more maintenance paid, reducing the backlog and improving customer service.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 21 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency compensatory applications and awards. These are referred to as special payments.

The table attached indicates the number of applications and awards made to customers during the requested periods, against the Agency's live and assessed caseload of over half-a-million.

I hope this is helpful.

Child Support Agency live and assessed caseload 579,200

	Special payments applications made	Total awards made Number of cases	Total amount paid
1995–96	1,013	186	£115,000
1996–97	2,177	983	£656,000

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if she will list for each financial year since the establishment of the Child Support Agency (a) how much the agency has paid out in compensatory payments, (b) in how many case compensatory payments have been made, (c) the average amount paid out in compensatory payments, (d) in what proportion of cases dealt with by the CSA compensatory payments have been made and (e) the total number of maintenance assessments carried out by the CSA in each of these periods; [7213]

(2) if she will list for each financial year since the establishment of the Child Support Agency in how many instances the CSA has made compensatory payments between (a) £0 and £100, (b) £100 and £500, (c) £500 and £1,000 and £5,000 and (e) in excess of £5,000. [7212]

Mr. Bradley [holding answer 9 July 1997]: We expect the Child Support Agency to provide an efficient and effective service to all its clients throughout the child support assessment process. We are looking for substantial and sustained operational improvements from the agency, in particular on getting more maintenance paid, reducing the backlong and improving customer service.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mrs Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 21 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency compensatory payments.

The tables attached provide all the available information regarding compensatory payments. A breakdown of payments into monetary values is not available for 1994/95 or 1995/96 and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

I hope this is helpful.

Child Support Agency compensatory payments—miscellaneous

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Amount paid	£100	£10,200	£115,000	£656,000
Number of payments made	1	77	186	983

Executive Agencies

Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she will make available the 1996–97 annual reports and accounts for each of her next steps agencies. [10330]

Ms Harman: The 1996–97 annual reports and accounts have been laid before Parliament today for the Benefits, Child Support, Contributions, Information Technology Services, and War Pensions Agencies.

Family Credit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the new level of child care costs disregard proposed for family credit will come into effect; and if (a) new and (b) existing claimants, will have access to the higher level of disregard from that date. [9560]

Mr. Keith Bradley: This measure forms part of the Government's commitment to develop a national child care strategy. Within that strategy, the Government will plan provision to match requirements of the modern labour market and provide the help needed by parents to balance the demands of family and working life.

The proposed improvements to the child care disregard will be brought in at the earliest opportunity, in the summer of 1998. Following the date of introduction, all new awards, for both new and existing claimants, will take account of the new level of disregard. Family credit is awarded at a fixed rate for 26 weeks and existing recipients will be eligible from the first renewal claim following the date of introduction.

Pension Review Cases

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will give for the Review of Pension cases (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8251]

Mrs. Liddell: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Gentleman to my answer of 24 June, Official Report, column 454, in which I repeated the Government's challenge to the 24 firms which are together responsible for nearly three-quarters of the cases requiring review, that they should better the targets set by the Securities and Investments Board and the Personal Investment Authority. It is the Government's view that all firms should endeavour to meet, if not better, the targets set by their regulators. The costs of conducting the review are a matter for the firms.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 23 July 1997

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Drugs Co-ordinator

Mr. Beith: To ask the President of the Council what is to be the official title of the person described as the "Drugs Tsar". [10107]

Mrs. Ann Taylor [holding answer 23 July 1997]: The official title for this post, which is to be advertised shortly, will be "UK Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator".

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Council how many civil servants there are in total on each pay band in her Department. [9588]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The information for members of the senior civil service is as follows:

Pay Band 4: 1

Pay Band 2: 1

Pay Band 1: 2.

Remaining staff, save for support grades, are in grades rather than pay bands. The numbers of staff in each grade are as follows:

Grade 7: 4

Senior Executive Officer: 1

Higher Executive Officer: 3

Senior Personal Secretary: 4

Executive Officer: 8

Personal Secretary: 3

Administration Officer: 5

Administrative Assistant: 2

Support Grade Band 1: 1

Support Grade Band 2: 3.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Council how many and what percentage of employees, in each pay band, in the quangos for which her Department is responsible, are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [9587]

Mrs. Taylor: I am responsible for no such organisations.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Council how many and what percentage of employees in her private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [9586]

Mrs. Taylor: None.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Members' Staff (Pensions)

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the President of the Council, pursuant to her answer of 15 July, Official Report, column 152, concerning pensions of hon. Members' staff, if she will increase the 10 per cent. contributed by the Finance Office to compensate for falls in the final value of pensions due to withdrawal of advance corporation tax. [10082]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: As I said in my previous answer, the final value of the pension in respect of any individual on an hon. Member's staff will depend on a wide range of factors. I have no plans to change the present arrangements.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departmental Documents

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster for what reason documents relating to a meeting of the Cabinet's Defence Committee on 29 October 1952 in the classmark CAB 131/12 at the Public Record Office are currently retained by his Department; and if he will consider releasing these papers. [9471]

Dr. David Clark: The documents relating to this meeting had been retained by my Department on grounds of national security. They have recently been re-reviewed to see whether they could be released. As a result, one item recording the committee's discussion about the deployment in the United Kingdom of a United States army intercept station and the paper relating to this part of the discussion are being prepared for transfer to the Public Record Office. The review has confirmed that another item, and the papers related to it, need to continue to be withheld on grounds of national security. These documents will be re-reviewed at regular intervals and when no longer sensitive will be released.

Property Advisers to the Civil Estate

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he has set performance targets for Property Advisers to the Civil Estate. [10512]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The performance targets are as follows:

(i) to identify savings from proposals to be agreed with departments for the co-ordination of property activities on the civil estate which in net present value terms should be at least 10 times the agency's related running costs;

(ii) to deliver on time at least 85 per cent. of the central advice unit's annual work plan;

(iii) to recover 100 per cent. of the costs of providing intelligent client services and to increase the percentage of all PACE's running costs recovered;

(iv) to dispose of 110 freeholds and leaseholds within a annual net provision of £95 million;

(v) to achieve 75 per cent. overall customer satisfaction for the agency's services.

Regulations

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on how he proposes to help businesses understand and comply with regulations. [10513]

Mr. Kilfoyle: As part of this Government's better regulation programme, we are determined to make central and local government's regulatory advice and service more transparent, accessible and helpful. The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster has therefore asked me to lead a new initiative called access business, which will co-ordinate and modernise a wide range of regulatory advice, forms and guidance for business into a simpler, more unified service. We have set up an access business group, whose first meeting I am chairing today, which consists of the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, my hon. Friend the Member for Wallasey (Angela Eagle); the Minister for SMall Firms, Trade and Industry; Teresa Graham from the Institute of Chartered Accountants; and Councillor John Ryan, chair of the Local Government Association's public protection committee. I look forward to the access business group announcing the first fruits of its work in the autumn.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement about his Department's policy in relation to the previous Government's consultation on proposals to apply to enforcement provisions in section 5 of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 to trading standards, environment health and care services legislation. [10514]

Mr. Kilfoyle: A number of those who responded to the earlier consultation expressed significant concerns about the inflexibility and potential bureaucracy that would arise from the strict application of section 5 in these areas. There was, none the less, broad support from business, local authorities and enforcement bodies for the principles of good enforcement. This Government are committed to the fair, open and consistent enforcement of regulations. One of the first tasks, therefore, of the access business group, referred to in my previous answer, will be to build on the consensus about the principles of good enforcement while avoiding the inflexibility and expense in the last Government's proposals to legislate in these areas. I hope that we shall be able to agree a new joint approach later this year.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many and what percentage of employees in his private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [8946]

Mr. Hoon: Information relating to ethnicity in the Lord Chancellor's Department is not usually given where numbers are small enough to enable identification of individuals. This practice complies with an agreement between the trade unions and the Department, and assurances given to staff when they are asked to provide the information. However, all staff in my private office, irrespective of ethnic origin, have consented to provision of this information, and the trade unions have consented to publication.

The information is set out in the table.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many and what percentage of employees, in each payband, in the quangos for which his Department is responsible, are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [8947]

Mr. Hoon: My Department is responsible for only one active executive non-departmental public body: the Legal Aid Board.

The latest ethnic monitoring figures available for the Legal Aid Board are as at 31 March 1996, and are in the table.

The board's survey is conducted by grade rather than salary bands. The salary bands used overlap as they range from the minimum of the lowest grade to the maximum of the highest grade in each band. The salaries exclude London weighting/recruitment and retention allowance where applicable.

Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many civil servants there are on each pay band in his Department. [8948]

Mr. Hoon: For the Lord Chancellor's Department, including the Court Service and the Public Trust Office, the information is set out in the table. A separate table provides information on the Northern Ireland Court Service. Below the senior civil service, staff are paid on the basis of grades, with a separate pay band or pay range for each grade. I have asked the chief executives of the Land Registry and of the Public Record Office to reply separately.

Letter from Stuart Hill to Mr. Keith Vaz, dated July 1997:

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, to reply to you recent question concerning the number of staff in each payband.

Following a Grading and Pay Review the Land Registry has moved to a system of ten paybands. Staff with the Senior Civil Service are in paybands common to all departments. The numbers as at 15th July are as follows:

SOCIAL SECURITY

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what review of cold weather payments she has made; when she expects to report on the review's conclusions; and if the review has considered the possible incorporation of the wind chill factor in the calculation of cold weather payments. [4726]

Mr. Bradley: The annual review of the cold weather payments scheme is currently in progress. Announcements on its conclusions will be made in due course.

War Pensions

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress has been made on the recently promised independent review of the science of the assessment of noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss for the purposes of claims to war pensions. [10554]

Mr. Denham: The Government are pledged to an independent review of the medical evidence behind the approach to the assessment of noise-induced hearing loss in war pensions. We hope that the review will provide a conclusion which is clear and unambiguous.

The review will be chaired by Sir Kenneth Calman, the chief medical officer. The other members of the review team will be Professor Adrian Davis of the Medical Research Council Institute of Hearing Research, Professor Mark Lutman of the Institute of Sound and Vibration Research, Professor Linda Luxon of the Institute of Laryngology and Otology at the University college London medical school and Dr. Guy Lightfoot of the department of clinical engineering at the Royal Liverpool university hospital. Dr. Anne Braidwood of this Department will serve on the team and act as secretary.

The review team is expected to meet in September.

Housing Benefit

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to change the rules on housing benefit to ensure that local authority tenants are not subsidising, through rent levels, the housing benefit of other tenants. [8348]

Mr. Raynsford: I have been asked to reply.

Under the housing revenue account subsidy system, an authority's entitlement to subsidy for its council housing is based upon various assumptions about its relative income and expenditure. If the cost of rent rebates is excluded from the subsidy calculation, most local authorities have a notional surplus of income over expenditure. These surpluses are used to offset the cost of rent rebates.

We have some sympathy with local authorities' concerns about this aspect of the subsidy system and have embarked on a review of the HRA subsidy system as part of the comprehensive spending review of housing.

TREASURY

Fraud

Mr. Key: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list each of the central Government bodies which reported fraud cases in the 1995–96 fraud report, indicating for each (a) the number of cases, (b) the number of staff involved in each case and (c) the total value of frauds; and if he will list for each body the percentage change in (i) the number of cases and (ii) the value over (1) 1994–95 and (2) 1993–94. [7477]

Mr. Darling: The number of internal cases, number of staff involved and value of fraud cases to the 1995–96 fraud report are shown by Department together with the percentage changes in the number and value of cases over 1994–95 and 1993–94.

[1] The table excludes Departments which reported a nil return in 1995–96.

[2] The notation '—' indicates that the Department recorded a nil return in the year concerned and there is therefore no basis for comparison with the base year 1995–96.

[3] The reduction in the 480 cases referred to in the 1995–96 report reflects the subsequent correction of a database error.

1. Some large percentage changes in value and case numbers are based on relatively small changes in actual values. The overall pattern shows a gradual increase year on year in the numbers of cases being reported. This increase may be due in part to better reporting arrangements and improved fraud awareness in departments.

2. Levels of fraud reported in previous years cannot easily be inferred from reductions in percentage changes of 100 per cent. since the maximum reduction is 100 per cent.

National Lottery

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of Treasury receipts resulting from national lottery grants to fund capital building projects; and if he will make a statement. [7999]

Mr. Darling: The Treasury has not received any grants from the national lottery and no estimate has been made of tax paid by other recipients of lottery grants. It would be difficult to identify those receipts that arose purely from lottery grants. Receipts of lottery duty from November 1994 to date, however, total £1,446,434,000.

Sickle Cell Anaemia

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of detected cases of sickle cell anaemia by each London health authority. [9184]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. John McDonnell, dated 23 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to your recent parliamentary question on the number of detected cases of sickle cell anaemia in each London health authority.

I am afraid that no national register of patients having sickle cell anaemia is kept. The information is therefore unavailable centrally.

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the policy of his Department on the timely payment of debts; and what is his Department's record on the payment of debts in the current financial year. [9523]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 18 July 1997]: All Departments are required to pay all their bills within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of the goods or service or a valid invoice, whichever is the later, where no such terms exist. Information on payment performance for the current financial year could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Government will publish a league table of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the autumn.

Unemployment

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made in reviewing the methods by which the numbers of unemployed in the United Kingdom are quantified. [9772]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Roy Beggs, dated 23 July 1997.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), to your recent question on what progress has been made in reviewing the methods by which the number of unemployed in the United Kingdom are quantified.

The ONS produces two measures of unemployment. The first is derived from the quarterly Labour Force Survey, and is defined on a consistent and internationally recognised basis set out by the International Labour Organisation (ILO). It counts as unemployed those people who are a) without a paid job, b) available to start work within the next two weeks and c) have either looked for work in the last four weeks or are waiting to start a job already obtained.

The ONS also publishes the monthly claimant count, which is based on the administrative system and includes all people claiming unemployment-related benefits (i.e. Jobseekers Allowance or National Insurance credits) at Employment Service offices on the day of the monthly count, who on that day had signed on as unemployed and available to do any suitable work. Essentially, all people who attend an Employment Service office to sign on the designated day are counted.

The ONS consultation exercise on the future presentation and dissemination of labour market statistics has been completed. Responses are being collated and analysed, and the ONS hopes to announce its plans by the end of July.

Channel Island Trusts

Mr. Page: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated revenue loss from the use by British companies of Channel Island trusts to hold shares in long-term executive performance plans. [9762]

Dawn Primarolo: There are no special tax allowances or exemptions for executives who receive shares under long-term performance plans, whether or not such shares have been held under trust in the Channel Islands.

Tax Avoidance Schemes

Mr. Prior: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if his plans to legislate against tax avoidance schemes include action against shares held in offshore trusts as part of a managerial incentive or bonus scheme; [10109]

(2) what proposals he is assessing for legislation in respect of the holding of shares under management incentive schemes in an offshore trust in Jersey. [9787]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The Chancellor said in his Budget statement that he had asked the Inland Revenue to review all areas of tax avoidance. Specific measures arising from that review will be announced as necessary.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the costs to public funds in (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000 and (c) 2000–01 of the measures necessary to resolve the year 2000 problem in Government Departments. [9480]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 21 July 1997]: Government Departments are producing, by October 1997, fully costed plans for undertaking the work needed.

All computer systems are due to be modified and tested by 31 January 1998 subject, where appropriate, to a final check of end year financial systems by April 1999.

The cost of the work in 1998–99 will be met from within the published departmental expenditure plans.

Disposable Incomes

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the percentage change in the after-tax disposable income of United Kingdom households resulting from the changes announced in his recent Budget, broken down by each income decile; and if he will make a statement. [9484]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The estimates are given in the table. These show changes in disposable income—that is income, including benefits less direct tax. That means that the figures include the effects of the change in mortgage interest relief in the Budget, but not excise duty or other tax changes.

The estimates made do not reflect the effect of new deal expenditure, such as measures helping young people into work, and the increased child benefit disregard for lone parents. This will increase disposable income, especially for households in the lower income deciles.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were (a) average GDP per head and (b) 75 per cent. of average GDP per head in (i) the European Union and (ii) the United Kingdom during the last three years; and what was the average GDP per head in each region and nation of the United Kingdom during the last three years using (1) the former standard region boundaries and (2) the new Government office region boundaries. [10133]

Mr. Darling: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 23 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), to your recent parliamentary question on estimates of GDP per head for the European Union, the United Kingdom, and the regions of the United Kingdom.

Consistent information on GDP for the countries of the European Union is published by Eurostat in their annual "National Accounts ESA Aggregates". The latest edition gives figures up to 1993 as follows:

Gross domestic product per head of population, at market prices, current prices

Purchasing Power Parities

	United Kingdom		European Union 15
	GDP per head	75 per cent. of GDP per head	GDP per head	75 per cent. of GDP per head
1991	14,739	11,055	15,204	11,403
1992	15,448	11,586	15,753	11,815
1993	15,717	11,788	15,850	11,888

The ONS publishes estimates of regions' GDP in £ millions and £ per head valued at Factor cost and current prices. Latest estimates are for 1995. Estimates for Standard Statistical Regions were published in the January/February 1997 issue of Economic Trends, whilst those for Government Office regions were published in Regional Trends, 1997.

These publications are available in the House of Commons Library.

Unemployment (Bolton)

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people aged 25 years or over have been unemployed for two years or more in the Bolton, West constituency. [9684]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Ruth Kelly, dated 23 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), to your recent parliamentary question asking how many people aged 25 years or over have been unemployed for two years or more in the Bolton West constituency.

The ONS produces two measures of unemployment. The first is derived from the quarterly Labour Force Survey, and is defined on a consistent and internationally recognised basis set out by the International Labour Organisation (ILO). It counts as unemployed those people who are a) without a paid job, b) available to start work within the next two weeks, and c) have either looked for work in the last four weeks or are waiting to start a job already obtained.

The ONS also publishes the monthly claimant count, which is based on the administrative system and includes all people claiming unemployment-related benefits (i.e. Jobseekers Allowance or National Insurance credits) at Employment Service offices on the day of the monthly count, who on that day had signed on as unemployed and available to do any suitable work. Essentially, all people who attend an Employment Service office to sign on the designated day are counted.

The information requested can only be derived from the claimant count, as the labour force survey does not give detail on duration of unemployment below county level. In April 1997, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 112 people aged 25 years or over who had been claiming unemployment-related benefits for more than two years in the Bolton West constituency.

Economic and Monetary Union

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchquer which statistical sources will be used to identify the fulfilment of the criteria for EMU convergence. [10015]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 22 July 1997]: Protocol (No. 6) on the convergence criteria referred to in article 109j of the treaty establishing the European Community states

"The statistical data to be used for the application of this Protocol shall be provided by the Commission".

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the redenomination of Government debt from sterling into euros under a single currency; and if he will make a statement. [10205]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 22 July 1997]: The report of the working group on the gilt market after EMU recommended, if the United Kingdom joins EMU,

"complete and simultaneous redenomination of existing gilts from sterling into euro by law; this should take place early in 1999 if the UK joins EMU at the outset or as soon as possible after it joins if it participates at a later date".

HM Treasury was represented at the working group, which was convened by the Bank of England, and included a wide range of market participants. The report does not necessarily represent the views of the Government. The report was published in the Bank's "Practical Issues Arising from the Introduction of the Euro"—No. 3, December 1996.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will commission research into the potential effects on the world gold price of the sale of excess reserves by states participating in the single currency; and if he will make a statement. [10197]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 22 July 1997]: Developments in the world gold market are kept under continuous review as part of the normal process of managing the official reserves.

Civil Servants (Pay and Conditions)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if staff engaged in the labour force survey field teams organised by the social survey division of the Office of National Statistics are entitled to the protection, pay and working conditions available to other civil service employees; [9459]

(2) if he will list the car mileage expenses limits applicable to payment by Government Departments to civil servants' travel in the course of their paid employment; and if these rates differ for staff travel relating to work undertaken for Departments on a self-employed or fee-paying basis; [9460]

(3) in what circumstances the Government insist on Crown exemptions regarding car insurance being taken out by persons carrying out duties on behalf of the civil service, with special reference to the labour force survey. [9461]

(4) what guidance is given to civil service staff concerning when travel by car can be legitimately claimed as expenses by civil servants or others involved in labour force survey field work. [9462]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 22 July 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 23 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) to your recent parliamentary questions (9459, 9460, 9461, 9462) on Civil Servants travelling by car when involved in field work.

The Social Survey is a division of the ONS and carries out social and economic surveys commissioned by government departments and other public bodies. The Labour Force Survey provides independent, accurate and reliable information about people's intentions in the area of employment.

Labour Force Survey Interviewer contracts of employment are fundamentally different from main stream ONS employees and reflect the unique nature of their work. Terms and conditions of service and rates of pay are negotiated directly with the Institution of Professionals, Managers and Specialists (IPMS), the civil service union recognised for collective bargaining purposes.

The Labour Force survey is continuous throughout the year but the amount of work available for field interviewers fluctuates each week. Employment is therefore paid at an hourly rate. The hourly rates have been calculated to include an additional supplement for bank holidays, privilege days and annual leave days which are not paid at the time they are taken, Interviewer appointments are not pensionable, and for periods of sickness absence only payments due under statutory entitlement are made. To compensate for this, the hourly rate for pay has been further enhanced.

Interviewers are paid for time spent travelling to and from working area, and for time spent calling on people and interviewing in the area. Study, planning and administration time are also paid. Payment is not made for periods when interviewers are unavailable for work or when there is no suitable work available. Labour Force Interviewers contact and interview informants by calling on them at home. The use of a car is essential and a motor mileage allowance is payable for use of a private vehicle on official business.

Since 1994 government departments and agencies have been free to set their own rates of motor mileage allowance, which are payable to employees travelling necessarily in the course of their paid employment. Motor mileage rates therefore differ from department to department according to prevailing circumstances.

The ONS operates a single rate of motor mileage allowance for all private motor vehicles. The rate for the first 4,000 miles is 37 pence per mile. The rate for mileage in excess of 4,000 miles is 24 pence per mile. This rate of motor mileage allowance currently applies to all ONS employees irrespective of type of appointment.

Guidance for Labour Force Survey field workers, relating to the use of private vehicles on official business, is available in the Pay and Expenses Handbook for Labour Force Survey Interviewers.

Expenses claims for mileage are only allowed when field workers have used a car which has been specifically authorised for official use. For a vehicle to be authorised it must satisfy certain insurance conditions. The insurance policy must include:

cover for damage to or loss of the vehicle, cover for bodily injury to or death of third parties or any passenger, and of damage to the property of third parties, cover for the use of the car either in connection with the employee's business or the business of the employing department.

In addition, the insurers must undertake to indemnify the Crown (in the event of a claim against the Crown as the driver's employer) to the same extent as the insured is covered under the policy, on the understanding that the insurers are allowed to retain control of the claim.

Pensioners (Fuel Costs)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amory) of 16 July, Official Report, column 169, concerning the effect on pensioners of the reduction in VAT on domestic fuel, on what assumption in respect of the uprating of the basic pension the answer was based; and for what reason that assumption was used. [10149]

Dawn Primarolo: No assumption was used in respect of the uprating of the basic pension. The uprating for 1998–99 benefit levels will depend upon the retail prices index increase in September 1997. This reflects the prices paid for goods and services and will take account of the reduction in VAT on fuel and power. So the real value of the pension is not affected by the change.

International Development White Paper

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what new policies are being developed by his Department to promote international development and poverty eradication; and if they will be included in the proposed White Paper on international development. [8999]

Mrs. Liddell: The Secretary of State for International Development is responsible for Government policy on development. She will publish the White Paper. The Treasury is one of a number of Government Departments consulted by the Department for International Development on the White Paper, and our contributions will be set out in that document.

Financial Regulation

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the future of (a) the Building Societies Commission, (b) the Friendly Societies Commission and (c) the Registry of Friendly Societies. [10553]

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to review the structure, powers and scope of operation of the Securities and Investments Board; and if he will make a statement. [9693]

Mrs. Liddell: My right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced on 20 May, Official Report, columns 508–11, that the Government will be bringing forward legislation to reform the structure of financial regulation and to create a single enhanced financial services regulatory body. The legislation to establish this regulatory body will provide for the transfer to the new body of all the functions currently carried out by the Building Societies Commission, the Friendly Societies Commission, and the central office of the Registry of Friendly Societies. These arrangements will further enhance the existing high standards of supervision and regulation in this area by integrating it with the regulation of all financial sectors, including banking, insurance, and other financial services.

Stock Exchange

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the proposed trade publication régime for the London stock exchange's new electronic trading system. [10552]

Mrs. Liddell: I have now received advice from the Securities and Investments Board on the London stock exchange's proposed trade publication arrangements for its new stock exchange electronic trading service.

I endorse the advice from the SIB that the exchange's proposed trade publication rules for SETS should enhance the price formation process, improve the quality of transparency and so make for a fairer market. The Treasury has also received advice on this matter from the Director General of Fair Trading. This concludes that, although there is a potential competition issue here, none of the proposed rules—which will be kept under review by the DGFT—is significantly anti-competitive at present.

I welcome the stock exchange's plans to move to a more transparent trading system on the introduction of its electronic order book. In my view, the proposed new rules strike a sensible balance between the need to maximise the transparency of the UK equity market, so that investors can be confident that they are trading on an equal basis with other market participants; and the need to maintain arrangements which enable risk principle trading to continue for those investors wishing to obtain competitive prices for large trades. The result should be to enhance the liquidity of the UK equity market and make it even more attractive to international investors.

The Treasury is today submitting a memorandum to the Treasury Committee in response to the Committee's recent reports on the London stock exchange. Apart from trade publication, one of the other issues raised by the Committee was the exchange's corporate governance arrangements. The exchange's planned move to a new trading system this autumn demonstrates that it is capable of taking and implementing strategic decisions about its market in the light of commercial and competitive factors. However, I agree with the Committee that the effectiveness of the exchange's corporate governance arrangements is an important issue and one which will need to be kept under review. In this context, the Treasury fully supports the governance principles espoused by the SIB—that a recognised investment exchange should avoid any conflict between its regulatory role and the pursuit of its commercial interests, and that an exchange should be run in the interests of the full range of its users and members.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Training and Enterprise Councils

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has for the future of TECs. [7912]

Dr. Howells: The Government value the work of TECs and the commitment given by so many business and community leaders through their involvement with the TEC movement. As strong employer-led strategic bodies TECs are well placed to play an important role in supporting the Government's objectives. Over the summer, we will be working with them through our Government offices for the regions to see how they may best re-focus their activities in line with the Government's priorities.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the amount of reserves held by TECs. [7911]

Dr. Howells: At the end of the financial year 1995–96, total reserves held by training and enterprise councils were almost £260 million. That is the most recent year for which information is available. TECs have provided further information which reports that the total reserves comprised £51 million for investment in capital assets, £86 million for working capital and £123 million for discretionary expenditure. Of the sum available for discretionary expenditure, TECs report that £102 million was committed for planned expenditure in 1996–97 and beyond for training, enterprise and economic regeneration activities. TEC reserves are already being used extensively to support local labour market needs. I am confident that TECs will now be able to contribute with their reserves to the challenging agenda set out in our manifesto for education, training and lifelong learning.

Learning Accounts

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to fund individual learning accounts. [8015]

Dr. Howells: The Government will publish their plans on individual learning accounts in their White Paper on lifelong learning to be published in the autumn.

Work Experience

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is Her Majesty's Government's policy in respect of work experience for 16 to 17-year-olds; and if he will make a statement. [9083]

Dr. Howells: Work experience has an important contribution to make in preparing young people for adult and working life, whichever learning route they choose at 16.

Animal Experimentation

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to enable students studying for science degrees and doctorates to avoid taking part in animal experiments they do not wish to participate in. [9988]

Dr. Howells: Under the terms of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has no powers to influence particular courses of study or programmes of research carried out in higher education institutions.

It should be clear to students before they start a particular course of study whether or not it will involve animal experimentation. In some cases, it would be possible for students to opt for alternative modules if they so wished. However, a student's decision as to whether or not to participate in animal experimentation is a matter between the individual student and the relevant institution.

Asthma

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the estimated loss of time from work caused by asthma. [8857]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by the Under-Secretary of State for Social Security on Tuesday 22 July 1997, Official Report columns 576–77, which estimates 17 million days per year of certified incapacity due to sickness and invalidity caused by asthma. This estimate includes all causes of asthma and does not specifically relate to occupational causes.

HEALTH

NHS (Fundholding Practices) Amendment Regulations

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review regulation 11 of the NHS (Fundholding Practices) Amendment Regulations; and if he will make a statement. [9889]

Mr. Milburn: The national health service executive will keep the operation of this measure, like all other elements of the general practitioner fundholding scheme, under careful review.

False Memory Syndrome

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice his Department has issued to national health psychiatrists on false memory syndrome and recovered memories. [9861]

Mr. Boateng: Guidance on false memory syndrome was published last October in the Department of Health document entitled "NHS Psychotherapy Services in England—Review of Strategic Policy", copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Births (Chorley and South Ribble)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pregnant women living in the Chorley and South Ribble health area had their babies delivered (a) in Preston and neighbouring districts and (b) at Chorley general hospital in the last year for which figures are available; and what criteria relate to the transfer of women in labour from Chorley general hospital to Preston royal infirmary. [9855]

Ms Jowell: The last year for which figures for Chorley and South Ribble district health authority were available was 1993–94. In 1994–95, Chorley and South Ribble formed part of South Lancashire DHA, which means that the following figures are not consistent between the two years. The source of the data is "Hospital Episode Statistics (Maternity)".

Pregnant women resident in Chorley and South Ribble DHA in 1993–94

Percentage of women whose babies were delivered in:	Per cent.
Preston and neighbouring districts	93
Chorley and South Ribble NHS Trust	7

Pregnant women resident in South Lancashire DHA in 1994–95

Percentage of women whose babies were delivered in:	Per cent.
Preston and neighbouring districts	96
Chorley and South Ribble NHS Trust	4

Women are transferred from Chorley to Preston for clinical reasons, where there are maternal or foetal complications.

Medical Devices Agency

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the 1996–97 annual report and accounts of the Medical Devices Agency. [10431]

Ms Jowell: We have received the report and accounts of the Medical Devices Agency and copies have today been laid before both Houses of Parliament in accordance with the requirements of section 5(2) and 5(3) of the Exchequer and Audit Departments Act 1921. Copies have also been placed in the Library.

Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for the quinquennial review of the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work; and if he will make a statement. [10587]

Mr. Boateng: The Department will conduct a thorough review of the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work on behalf of the United Kingdom sponsoring Departments. The review, which is now due as part of the regular five-yearly examination of non-departmental public bodies, will take the form of a prior options study. It will assess the extent to which the functions of the council are necessary for the achievement of the Government's policies and whether there is scope for rationalisation, market testing, privatising, contracting out or transferring all, or part, of its functions to another body. We will consult widely with all parties who have an interest in the work of the council.

The review will have regard to and take account of:

- the implications of the Government's National Training Organisation initiative for the personal social services sector;
- the recommendations of the report of the Dearing inquiry into higher education;
- the Government's proposals for devolution in Scotland and Wales, and
- the Government's intention to establish a general social services council.

To minimise uncertainty, we expect this fundamental review to be completed by the end of October. Throughout, the Government's objective remains to ensure that quality services are delivered through a work force trained and qualified to appropriate levels of competence. Nothing must get in the way of achieving that objective.

Incontinence

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to implement minimum mandatory standards for incontinence care provided throughout the NHS. [8981]

Mr. Boateng: Ministers have made a manifesto commitment to a long-term care charter to define standards for health, housing and social services. Additionally, the Government are planning to review the patients charter. Both of these charters are likely to provide an opportunity to develop, in liaison with a wide range of health and social care professionals and members of the public, standards which will improve not only the quality and delivery of incontinence care but other services which are aimed at the rehabilitative and long-term care needs of individuals.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department plans to make of the implementation by health authorities of its guidelines on incontinence care. [8982]

Mr. Boateng: The Department of Health issued its guidelines, "An Agenda for Action on Continence Services" in 1991. Since 1991, the Department has continued to concentrate on the implementation of these guidelines through the funding of research; the setting up of a national resource centre and the promotion of annual public awareness campaigns on issues of prevention and early intervention.

"The NHS Priorities and Planning Guidelines for 1994–95" required health authorities to ensure that their continence services conformed to the good practice guidelines in "An Agenda for Action on Continence Services". In addition, health authorities were required to set targets for reducing the prevalence of incontinence in their local population. The Department of Health is currently examining the findings and recommendations of several reports it commissioned in response to the recommendations set out in the guidelines to determine the measures necessary to ensure the continual improvement of incontinence services.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's estimate of the incidence of incontinence among people below the age of 60 years. [8983]

Mr. Boateng: Information is not available on the incidence of incontinence. Information on prevalence is that 7 per cent. of adults aged under 60 living in private households reported having bladder problems in the 1995 "Health Survey for England". Further information is available on pages 134 to 137 of the publication "Health Survey for England 1995", copies of which are available in the Library.

Measles, Mumps and Rubella Vaccination

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies he has evaluated which have compared the incidence of side effects suffered as a result of MMR vaccination in different countries. [9489]

Ms Jowell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health is advised on immunisation matters by the independent expert advisory committee, the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation and on matters concerning the quality, safety and efficacy of vaccines by the Committee on Safety of Medicines.

Assessment of vaccine safety and efficacy can be based on experience in any country using an appropriate population, so long as the vaccine constituents are the same. Studies of vaccine use in other countries can form the basis for authorisation of the product in the United Kingdom. The Department's independent expert advisory committees, on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health, have considered a large number of studies looking at the incidence of purported side effects both in the UK and other countries. Information on the safety of single antigen measles and rubella vaccines is also relevant where these components are identical to those in the combined measles, mumps and rubella vaccine. Safety studies have therefore been available from the 1960s for these vaccine components.

A list of the published studies considered by the expert advisory committees and by the Department on the incidence of side effects associated with, or suggested to be associated with, MMR vaccination in different countries has been placed in the Library.

Students

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to provide free dental checks for students. [9820]

Mr. Milburn: Dental charges and all other aspects of Government spending are being reviewed as part of the Government's comprehensive spending review.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Government will provide financial assistance to students who incur chiropractor bills for treatment to serious injuries; and if he will make a statement. [9819]

Mr. Milburn: The national health service does not reimburse patients for the cost of treatment obtained privately. Where chiropractic services are provided through the NHS, they are free of charge.

Hearing Checks

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those health authorities which screen children's hearing at or shortly after birth. [9917]

Mr. Boateng: Most health authorities screen children who are at risk of permanent childhood hearing impairment soon after birth. We are currently considering ways in which the screening system for children with hearing impairment can be improved and extended, so that more children with PCHI can be identified and treated earlier in life. The Medical Research Council's Institute of Hearing Research recently published a report on the national provision of neonatal screening for hearing impairment, which we shall take into account. The report, entitled, "Critical Review of the Role of Neonatal Screening in the Identification of Childhood Hearing Impairment", will be placed in the Library shortly.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Employment Advertisements

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how often since 1992 his Department has been responsible for employment advertisements which contained age restrictions on those who could apply. [9499]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Since 1992, this Department has been responsible for five employment advertisements which contained age restrictions and six others which gave preferred age ranges.

Bletchley Park Spy

Mr. Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent actions have been taken to identify the Soviet spy at Bletchley Park codenamed Baron; and if he will make a statement. [9766]

Mr. Robin Cook: It is long-standing practice not to disclose the detail of such operations by the security and intelligence agencies.

Mr. Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reason the Venona intercept of 3 April 1941, recently released to the Public Record Office, has been redacted to eliminate annotations referring to the Soviet source codenamed Baron. [9765]

Mr. Cook: There was no such redaction. When the decrypt in question was issued, the identity of Baron was unknown. Practice in such cases at the time was either to confirm in footnotes that an identity was unknown or simply to leave a cover name with no explanation; the latter course was taken in the case of the 3 April 1941 message.

Contentin Peninsula

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs is he will issue guidance to British holidaymakers going to the Cotentin peninsula in Normandy, following the announcement by the French Environment Minister on 10 July banning fishing and swimming near the La Hague nuclear reprocessing plant. [9932]

Mr. Fatchett: I am grateful to my hon. Friend for bringing this matter to my attention.

We have amended our travel advice notice to include a warning on the restrictions imposed by the French authorities.

Construction Sites (Germany)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to encourage the German Government to ensure that construction sites employing British labourers conform to the necessary safety standards. [9781]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Building sites in Germany are covered by the requirements of EU health and safety directives. Detailed arrangements for enforcement of the directives are a matter for member states themselves. But both the UK and the Commission try to promote effective enforcement. In 1995, the Commission formalised a senior labour inspectors committee to look at these issues, and the UK has had some success in using this committee to promote the development of common principles of inspection.

International Financial Stability

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role the European Commission played in establishing an agreement on international financial stability at Denver; what discussions were held on economic and monetary union; and if he will make a statement. [9646]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: President Santer and Commissioner de Silguy took part in discussions of a range of economic subjects with Heads of State and Government and Finance Ministers at the Denver summit. I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 24 June, Official Report, columns 671-89.

UN Trusteeship Council

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the role of the UN Trusteeship Council. [8369]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We believe that the UN Trusteeship Council has served a useful purpose, and has completed the task entrusted to it under the UN charter. We are considering the UN Secretary-General's proposals to reconstitute it as an environmental forum.

Dependencies

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will convene a meeting of the Chief Ministers or representatives of elected members on the legislative councils of the dependencies during the forthcoming year. [8384]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Chief Ministers of the dependent territories met in London in 1995 and they will be coming to a conference here next year.

Illicit Weapons Transfers

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response the United Kingdom Government have made to the note verbale of the Secretary-General of the United Nations of 23 January 1996, pursuant to UNGA 49/75M of 15 December 1994, which sought the views of member states on effective ways and means of collecting weapons transferred illicitly. [8997]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The then Government submitted their reply on 30 April 1996 to the Secretary-General's note verbale of 23 January 1996 which referred to UNGA 50/70J. This resolution, dated 12 December 1995, superseded resolution 49/75M of 15 December 1994.

We are fully committed to helping to tackle problems caused by illicit arms transfers. To this end, we strongly support the EU programme for the prevention and combating of illicit trafficking in conventional arms which was agreed on 26 June 1997 and intend to take it forward during our presidency of the EU in the first half of 1998.

Indonesia

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he intends to report to the house the findings of his Department's internal investigation announced on 12 February into the use of British-supplied water cannon in Indonesia. [9115]

Mr. Fatchett: One of our first acts on taking office was to call for an early report on the alleged use of UK-supplied water cannon in summer 1996. We are now studying the information available. No firm conclusions have yet been drawn.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library the legal opinion his Department obtained on the sale of Hawk aircraft to Indonesia and the possible cost of revoking licences previously given. [10259]

Mr. Fatchett: No. It has not been the usual practice of successive Governments to make available to the House legal advice received in any area.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has evaluated on the use of Hawk aircraft in East Timor since 1994; and if he will make a statement. [10261]

Mr. Fatchett: We are currently studying all the information available to us. No firm conclusions have yet been drawn.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received in respect of external legal opinions on the cost of revoking licences previously given for the export of Hawk aircraft to Indonesia; and if he will make a statement. [10263]

Mr. Fatchett: We have received representations from hon. Members and non-governmental organisations about revocation which have included legal opinions. Any decision to revoke an export licence issued before 1 May would be announced to the House.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the compliance of the sale of Hawk aircraft to Indonesia with the Government's policy of taking account of human rights in respect of the export of arms and equipment. [10269]

Mr. Fatchett: We have serious concerns about the human rights situation in both Indonesia and East Timor. We are currently studying all the information available to us in relation to allegations about the use of Hawk in East Timor. No firm conclusions have yet been drawn.

Bosnia

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe mission to Bosnia regarding the registration of housebound and disabled citizens for the forthcoming municipal elections; and if he will make a statement. [9602]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We discussed this issue with the OSCE mission in Sarajevo on 23 June, and subsequently wrote to it to ask that further thought be given to enabling housebound and disabled citizens to register during the appeals period, and to vote at home under international supervision.

Government Communications Headquarters

Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to review the GCHQ nationality rules requiring parents, step-parents or guardians of applicants for employment to have been Commonwealth citizens or Irish citizens resident in the United Kingdom. [9824]

Mr. Robin Cook: GCHQ is in the process of revising its nationality rules, including the rule dealing with the nationality of a prospective employee's parents, and will be submitting its proposals to Ministers shortly.

Kalahari Bushmen

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports his Department has received in respect of plans by the Botswanan authorities to move Kalahari bushmen out of the central Kalahari game reserve; and if he will make a statement. [9920]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Botswana Government have outlined plans for the bushmen who live on and off the central Kalahari game reserve. They have assured us that no one would be evicted from the reserve. Our high commissioner visited the central Kalahari area earlier this month and found no evidence that bushmen had been forced away from the reserve. He is consulting the Minister of Local Government in Botswana with responsibility for the bushmen, to ensure that plans for managing the move of those bushmen who have elected to leave are adequate.

Hungary

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what studies have been made of the practical problems that arise from Hungary's accession to NATO; what discussions have been undertaken with non-NATO countries in the region to establish (a) a land or air corridor and (b) a pipe transit; and if he will make a statement. [9624]

Dr. Reid: I have been asked to reply on behalf of the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

Geographical location was one of the factors addressed in the NATO studies which preceded the decision to invite Hungary, with Poland and the Czech Republic, to begin accession talks. The process of preparing for their accession will include continuing work within NATO on the military implications of enlargement. This work will reflect the Alliance's intention of carrying out its collective defence and other missions by ensuring the necessary levels of interoperability, integration and capability for reinforcement. I am not aware that any formal discussions have so far taken place with non-NATO countries on these issues.

DEFENCE

Defence Evaluation and Research Agency

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in which scientific journals and other open publications and on what dates staff from the sea systems sector site of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency at Alverstoke have published papers since January 1993. [9470]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive, DERA, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 23 July 1997:

I am replying to your letter to the Secretary of State for Defence about open publications by staff from the Sea Systems Sector at Alverstoke as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency.

Since January 1993 staff from Diving and Life Support Systems and the Submarine Group based at Alverstoke have published papers in the following scientific journals and other open publications.

I hope this information is helpful.

Equipment

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those weapons and terms of defence equipment costing in excess of £100 million which have been delivered on time and within the original budget since 1990. [8131]

Mr. Spellar: Information on the largest defence equipment projects, including comparisons between original and present estimates of costs and time scales, is given annually to Parliament in the Comptroller and Auditor General's reports on the Ministry of Defence "Major Projects Report", known before 1993 as the "Major Projects Statement". Copies of these are in the Library of the House.

Eurofighter

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the design of the software for the Eurofighter. [8654]

Mr. Spellar: The software element in the Eurofighter is fully assessed at key stages in its development and during integration to ensure that performance and flight safety requirements are met. The development programme is proceeding satisfactorily.

Royal Yacht

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the advantages of the proposals for a replacement royal yacht wholly financed by the private sector; and if this would include maintenance, staffing and other running costs. [9089]

Dr. Reid: The Government are currently considering the requirement for a replacement royal yacht and will announce their decision in due course.

Sea Harrier Replacements

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Sea Harrier replacement study; and when he expects the study to be completed. [9419]

Mr. Spellar: Work is under way to consider whether and how to replace the capability currently provided by the Sea Harrier when these aircraft reach the end of their service lives early next century. As part of this work, we are participating in the four-year concept demonstration phase of the US joint strike fighter programme which began last November and is aimed at developing a family of advanced combat aircraft in approximately the right time scale. This phase is expected to be completed around the turn of the century. We are also investigating other possible options.

Policy Reviews

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for each departmental policy review presently in progress or scheduled, (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10194]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 22 July 1997]: The purpose of the Strategic Defence Review is to reassess our essential security interests and defence needs, to ensure that the United Kingdom's defence capabilities are matched to the changed strategic setting. Work on the review is envisaged to be completed around the turn of the year.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Commercial Lobbyists

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have met commercial lobbyists to discuss matters relating to the business of his Department; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings; [8075]

(2) on what dates since 1 May (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have attended meetings with organisations representing (i) commercial and (ii) non-commercial interests organised by commercial lobbying firms; and if he will introduce a register of such meetings. [8076]

Mr. Chris Smith: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained in response to my hon. Friend the Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 2 June 1997, Official Report, column 99, Ministers and officials in the Department receive deputations from many groups who are concerned to press their own interests or those of their clients, which Ministers and officials take due care to consider within the wider public interest and Government policy. As it is not practicable to distinguish particular groups as lobbyists, the Department cannot keep a register of such meetings.

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department refuse requests from hon. Members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8074]

Mr. Chris Smith: The first report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life—Cm 2850—recognised the value of enabling Members to retain interests outside the House, provided these were properly declared, both in the Register of Members' Interests and on other occasions. Subject to these requirements, and to the rules of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, Members are free to seek meetings with Ministers and officials, who will consider such requests alongside the many other approaches from individuals and organisations concerned to press their own interests or those of others.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on what occasions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have refused to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings with hon. Members to discuss matters relating to interests registered by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8077]

Mr. Smith: The first report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life—Cm 2850—made it clear that, when Members are meeting Ministers or others on topics in which they have na interest, the onus is on the Member to declare that interest not the Minister to know—paragraph 63 of Cm 2850. It is not practicable for Ministers and officials, amongst their other duties, to vet requests for meetings against the Register of Members' Interests. Should evidence of non-declaration emerge, or contravention of the resolution of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, the matter would be brought to the attention of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards.

National Lottery

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list for each local authority area the number of awards made, the percentage they represent of the total sums, and the number of applications that were (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful, for each category of national lottery funding; and if he will make a statement. [8855]

Mr. Banks: To date, over £3.75 billion has been awarded to 24,561 projects throughout the United Kingdom. Each distributing body has provided the information on successful and unsuccessful applications by local authority area and these figures are summarised in the following table.

A complete list, including percentages, by local authority area will be placed in the Libraries of the House, as soon as the information is available.

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is the policy of his Department on the timely payment of debts; and what is his Department's record on the payment of debts in the current financial year. [9527]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 18 July 1997]: All Departments are required to pay all their bills within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of the goods or service or a valid invoice, whichever is later, where no such terms exist. Information on payment performance for the current financial year could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Government will publish a league table of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the autumn.

Bicycle Parking Spaces

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will arrange for bicycle parking spaces to be provided outside his Ministry. [9980]

Mr. Tom Clarke: My Department has existing secure storage for bicycles in an underground car park at one of our headquarters buildings for use by all staff.

SCOTLAND

Parliamentary Constituencies (Data)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what categories of information and statistics his Department collects in relation to each parliamentary constituency. [8246]

Mr. Wilson: Currently, the only information which is specifically collected for each parliamentary constituency relates to electoral statistics. In addition, the Scottish Office compiles, and has access to, a wide range of statistical databases which hold information with a geographical reference allowing analyses by parliamentary constituency, from which summary information is available upon request. I will write to my hon. Friend with a list of the statistical information that is published by the Scottish Office for each parliamentary constituency. I shall arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of Scottish local authorities (a) savings and (b) additional expenditure arising from local government reorganisation in the years 1995–96, 1996–97, 1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000. [8196]

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The previous Administration made certain assumptions in setting the last three local government finance settlements and the planned figures for the next two years. The Government do not endorse those assumptions, but we are committed to live within the existing public expenditure control totals for this year and next. Within those totals we have, however, allocated an additional £89 million for schools in 1998–99 to reflect the priority we attach to education. My right hon. Friend has made it clear that this will be the only change of substance to the forward expenditure plans for local government current expenditure in 1998–99.

Erskine Bridge

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the final cost of the repairs to the Erskine bridge following the accident involving an off-shore installation under towage; what contributions to the cost of repairs have been (a) sought and (b) obtained from those deemed to be at fault; and if he will make a statement. [9090]

Mr. Chisholm: The final cost of the repairs to the Erskine bridge together with other ancillary costs related to the closure of the bridge is in the region of £3.85 million excluding VAT. Letters intimating claims in principle had previously been issued to those parties who appear to be responsible for the incident. None of the parties has admitted liability and no costs have been recovered. The next steps in the process of recovering the costs, including legal action if necessary, will commence in August 1997.

Press Releases

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department spends on biking press releases to (a) hon. Members and (b) other individuals or groups, each time his Department issues a press release; how many such press releases were issued by his Department (i) in the period 1 May to 1 July and (ii) in the period 1 January to 1 March; and if he will review his Department's use of couriers to deliver press releases and investigate the possibility of using fax or e-mail [8814]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 17 July 1997]: My Department does not use couriers to deliver press releases to hon. Members or to other individuals or groups. Any such press releases are sent by electronic or surface mail. With effect from 1 October 1997, the routine use of surface mail will cease and all press releases will be issued by electronic mail.

Employment Advertisements

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how often since 1992 his Department has been responsible for employment advertisements which contained age restrictions upon those who could apply. [9508]

Mr. Dewar: Complete records of recruitment activity are not available before April 1993, when the Scottish Office centralised its recruitment function. In the period 1 April 1993 to 30 June 1997, the Scottish Office ran 254 advertisements, none of which contained age restrictions.

Public Defender Service

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has determined the criteria by which the pilot scheme for a Public Defender Service is to be judged. [9859]

Mr. McLeish: The criteria will cover cost effectiveness, quality of services, client satisfaction and contribution to the efficiency of the criminal justice system. These criteria will be subject to discussion with the Scottish Legal Aid Board and the Law Society of Scotland.

Rural Local Authorities (Fuel Costs)

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to compensate rural local authorities for the increase in the price of vehicle fuel announced in the Budget statement. [9617]

Mr. Chisholm: The increase in the price of vehicle fuel forms a significant part of the Government's environmental strategy and aims to reduce carbon dioxide emissions by encouraging lower fuel consumption. Local government has its part to play and my right hon. Friend has no plans to compensate rural local authorities beyond the benefit they already gain in the distribution of grant for rural factors such as population sparsity and weighted road length. In addition, local authorities will benefit directly from the other measures announced in the Budget: the additional £89 million current expenditure for schools next year; and the £8.9 million of capital resources this year with a further £26.7 million in each of the four subsequent years, also for education.

Travel to London

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the annual cost of travel of Ministers and civil servants between Scotland and London. [10171]

Mr. Dewar: From January to December 1996, the annual cost of travel of Scottish Office Ministers and civil servants between Scotland and London was £1,869,218.

Children (Scotland) Act 1995

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimates he has received from each council of the additional costs to it of giving full effect to the Children (Scotland) Act 1995; and what funds each council has allocated to give effect to the Act. [9618]

Mr. Galbraith: The information is not available in the form requested but the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities has estimated that £27 million is required to implement the Act's provisions.

Rented Housing

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many houses for (a) social rent and (b) market rent have been completed in each council area in each of the last five years by (i) local authorities, (ii) housing associations and (iii) other sources. [9619]

Mr. Chisholm: Information on new house building by local authorities and the private sector is collected centrally from local authorities. Scottish Homes provides similar information in respect of housing associations.

The table gives the information available on the number of dwellings completed for (a) social rent by (i) local authorities and (ii) housing associations over the period 1991–92 to 1995–96.

Reliable information on new dwellings completed by other sources for both social and market rent is not available.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the Government's target for the number of houses to be built in Scotland for social rent (a) in 1997 and (b) in 1998. [9621]

Mr. Chisholm: The Government do not set targets for the number of houses to be built in Scotland. We have, however, approved a target for Scottish Homes to provide 2,400 houses for rent by housing associations in 1997–98. Local authorities also plan to build a total of 402 houses in 1997–98 for social rent.

EU Afforestation Budget

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was allocated to the United Kingdom out of the European Union afforestation budget for 1993 to 1997; what are the criteria for such funding; which types of trees are subsidised; over what period the funds are paid; what percentage of the estates concerned are (a) privately owned and (b) public parks; and if he will list them. [10210]

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 22 July 1997]: The United Kingdom has been allocated 61.6 million ECU from the European Union's afforestation budget for the period 1993 to 1997 to co-finance work carried out to establish and manage conifer and broadleaf woodlands on former agricultural land. Such work is approved under the woodland grant scheme and the farm woodland premium scheme; grants under the former are paid over a period of five years while annual payments under the latter cover a period of 10 to 15 years. Several thousand payments are made each year under these schemes and a list of all the cases involved could only be produced at disproportionate cost.

As the EU funding is for work carried out on former agricultural land, woodlands in public parks are not generally eligible. Further details of the woodland grant scheme and farm woodland premium scheme are given in explanatory booklets which are held in the Library of the House.

Juveniles

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received in the last year from outside bodies in respect of the treatment of juveniles in detention. [9345]

Mr. McLeish: The Department has not received representations from outside bodies on the treatment of young people aged 17 or under who have been placed in secure accommodation or detained in young offenders institutions or prisons.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many deaths of juveniles in detention have been recorded in the last year; what method of inquiry was instigated into the deaths; and what were the causes of the deaths. [9262]

Mr. McLeish: There were no deaths of young people under the age of 17 while living in secure units, or when detained in young offenders institutions or prison.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many institutions hold juvenile detainees; and if he will list these indicating their type and the number of juveniles admitted to each in the last year for which figures are available. [9244]

Mr. McLeish: The number of young people placed in secure accommodation for the year ending 31 December 1996 and the number of receptions of young prisoners under 16 to the Scottish penal system in the year ended 31 March 1997 is given in the table.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the inspection and supervision systems for juvenile institutions. [9246]

Mr. McLeish: All local authority secure units for young people are inspected twice a year by local authority inspection units. All secure accommodation for young people, whether run by local authorities or by voluntary organisations are inspected on a rolling programme by the social work services inspectorate.

All prisons, young offenders institutions and legalised police cells may be inspected by Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons in Scotland.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children currently accompany mothers in detention. [9248]

Mr. McLeish: On 11 July 1997 there was one mother in detention accompanied by her baby, at HM institution Cornton Vale.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many juveniles are detained in each institution by (a) age and (b) gender. [9250]

Mr. McLeish: The tables contain the age and gender profiles of those young people placed in secure accommodation and in the Scottish penal establishment on 31 March 1996—provisional figures—and 11 July 1996 respectively.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of malnutrition have been recorded in respect of juveniles in detention in the last year. [9252]

Mr. McLeish: There were no cases of malnutrition recorded in respect of young people placed in secure accommodation or detained in young offenders institutions or prison.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what screening, preventive care and medical care is provided for juveniles in detention. [9254]

Mr. McLeish: Young people have a medical examination at admission to secure accommodation and medical treatment as required thereafter either from their own general practitioner or a local doctor. Young people are referred for specialist treatment when appropriate. The care and placement of young people is subject to regular statutory review procedures and their health and development are considered during these reviews.

Rule 23 of the Prisons and Young Offenders Institutions (Scotland) Rules 1994 provides that the prison medical officer will have responsibility for the general care of the health of every prisoner. Appropriate medical services and facilities for the prevention of illness and their aftercare are provided for the very small number of young prisoners under 16 detained from time to time in prison.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what social and educational assistance is provided for juveniles in detention. [9256]

Mr. McLeish: Each secure unit has education facilities either on site or available to it. The larger units have education on the premises and can offer full educational programmes. Her Majesty's inspectors of schools inspect the provision of education in secure units. A variety of activities are run outside the school programme as part of the young person's social education.

Young prisoners under 16 in Scottish penal establishments have access to education, counselling, and a range of social work services during the generally short time they are held by the Scottish Prison Service.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list each incident where juveniles have been detained for reasons other than suspicion or guilt of criminal offences in the last five years. [9305]

Mr. McLeish: Young people of 17 or under may be placed in secure accommodation because they are a risk either to others or to themselves. The majority of those in secure accommodation have committed offences but figures are not available centrally.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement on the different prison regimes for juveniles; [9245]

(2) what types of prison work are (a) available and (b) compulsory for juveniles in detention; [9257]

(3) what is the ratio of prison staff to children in detention; [9260]

(4) in what circumstances (a) juveniles in detention may be detained in the same cell as adults, (b) juveniles on remand may share the small cell as sentenced juveniles, (c) juvenile first offenders may share the same cell with persistent offenders and (d) juvenile females may share the same cell with male prisoners. [9289]

Mr. McLeish: The term "juvenile" is not used in the legislation regulating Scottish penal establishments. The Criminal Justice (Scotland) Act 1963 provided for the detention in young offenders institutions of persons of or over 17 years of age but under 21. The lower age limit was reduced to 16 in the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968.

Very few young prisoners under 16 are accommodated in the prison system. On 11 July 1997, there were three young male prisoners under 16 in separate accommodation at HM prison Longriggend in a hall which normally holds roughly 50 young male persons aged 16 to 21 on remand. The staffing complement for the hall is nine.

The average period of time spent by young prisoners under 16 in the prison system is very short, and they are not required to work. They do have access to education, counselling, recreation, physical education and library facilities. There are close links with social work services.

Rule 14 of the Prisons and Young Offenders Institutions (Scotland) Rules 1994 requires the governor of an establishment, so far as is reasonably practicable, to keep civil prisoners, untried prisoners and young prisoners apart from other categories. Every effort is made to ensure that a young prisoner under 16 would not share a cell with a prisoner of a different category.

Rule 114 provides that females shall be accommodated in rooms or cells which are entirely separate from rooms or cells used for the accommodation of males. No female would share a cell with a male.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many juveniles are in preventive detention. [9247]

Mr. McLeish: There are no young people held in within the prison system on preventive detention. Of those young people under 16 who are placed in secure accommodation, a proportion are placed there to prevent further offending. The number of young people placed in secure accommodation for this reason is not held centrally.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the minimum age for the detention of juveniles. [9249]

Mr. McLeish: The age of criminal responsibility in Scotland is eight so a young person may be placed by the courts in a secure unit from this age. However, in practice the minimum age of those placed in secure accommodation is 11. The minimum age for the detention of young people in the Scottish penal system is 14.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of juveniles in detention are accommodated in individual cells. [9251]

Mr. McLeish: No young person who is placed in secure accommodation is required to share a room. At 11 July, there were three young prisoners under 16 in the custody of the Scottish Prison Service, one in single cell accommodation, two sharing.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in what circumstances juveniles in detention (a) have free access to drinking water and (b) are able to shave themselves each day. [9253]

Mr. McLeish: Drinking water is freely available in secure accommodation. Young people are able to shave themselves each day.

In penal establishments during out-of-cell hours, drinking water is freely available in residential halls, work and recreational areas. At other times drinking water is available where there are in-cell facilities, or by the provision of water bottles. Shaving materials are provided as required.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many visits juveniles in detention may receive each week. [9255]

Mr. McLeish: Visits to young people in secure accommodation are encouraged. The number varies and may be up to several visits in any week, including visits from relatives, friends, social workers and others.

The minimum visit entitlement for a convicted young prisoner under 16—who is also not untried—in a Scottish penal establishment is not fewer than two visits, each of not less than 30 minutes, in any period of seven consecutive days. The minimum entitlement for untried prisoners, including young prisoners under 16, is (a) a visit of at least 30 minutes duration on any day of the week other than a Saturday or Sunday; (b) where a person has not received a visit on every day of the preceding Monday to Friday, a visit of at least 30 minutes duration on a Saturday or a Sunday; and (c) at the discretion of the governor a visit of such duration as he thinks fit on a Saturday or Sunday.

Rights of the Child Convention

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the consultation process involved in the UK fulfilling the reporting requirement relating to the UN convention on the rights of the child; and if he will make a statement on the impact on UK policy of adopting the convention and the practical measures necessary to implement it. [9263]

Mr. Galbraith: The United Kingdom's first report to the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child was published in February 1994. The Scottish Office and associated Departments contributed to the report co-ordinated by the Department of Health. In addition, a Scottish Office official attended the examination of the report by the UN committee in January 1995 in Geneva as part of the UK delegation of officials.

The convention has had an important impact on shaping policy in Scotland. The influence of the convention is particularly apparent in the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 which came fully into operation on 1 April 1997 and the secondary legislation which flowed from that. It has influenced my appointment as Minister for Children's Issues in Scotland. The first step in discharging this remit will be to have a fully comprehensive child-proofing policy for all Scottish Office Departments to ensure that they take into account the effects on children when developing policy.

Urban Regeneration Schemes

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will allow urban regeneration schemes to be eligible for grants from the national lottery. [9828]

Mr. Banks: I have been asked to reply.

A large number of the awards already announced by the lottery distributing bodies will be made a valuable contribution to urban regeneration. The White Paper "The People's Lottery", published on 21 July, makes clear the Government's objective that lottery funding within the existing good causes should contribute to regional and local strategies to encourage regeneration.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Local Government Finance

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what restrictions apply to the use by a local authority of capital receipts obtained from the large-scale voluntary transfer of its housing stock to housing companies; and if he will make a statement; [9093]

(2) what percentage of the total capital receipts from the large-scale voluntary transfer of its housing stock to housing companies is available to a local authority; and if he will make a statement. [9121]

Mr. Raynsford: Twenty-five per cent. of any capital receipt from a large-scale voluntary transfer is available immediately to spend on housing. If a local authority becomes debt free, at a later date, the remainder of the receipt then also becomes available to it to spend as it wishes. Currently this is subject to one restriction: that it may not be used to support local authority social housing grant. This is being reviewed.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in what circumstances a local authority is permitted to use moneys in its housing capital account to reduce its council tax; and if he will make a statement. [9122]

Mr. Raynsford: Capital resources can be used only to fund spending for capital purposes. However, the Secretary of State has powers, under section 40(6) of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 to issue a direction to capitalise revenue expenditure. Where revenue expenditure is capitalised, there can be a saving to the local authority's revenue account which may enable it to reduce its council tax, or—for spending within the housing revenue account—reduce its council house rents.

Under the capital receipts initiative the Government will issue supplementary credit approvals to enable authorities to invest additional sums in housing. Where authorities incur additional spending under this initiative, they will receive revenue support in the normal way. There should be no effect on the level of council rents or council taxes.

Climate Change

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Government support the European Union's objective in respect of the maintenance of world average temperatures. [8924]

Angela Eagle: The Government take the threat of climate change very seriously. We support the draft protocol to the climate change convention which the European Union has proposed. This includes a longer-term objective that global average temperatures do not exceed 2 deg C above the pre-industrial level.

Wind Farms

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what applications are currently being processed for wind farm developments in England and Wales. [9072]

Mr. Raynsford: Applications for planning permission for wind farms with a capacity of 50 MW or less are normally made to and determined by local planning authorities. Planning applications for developments exceeding 50 MW require the consent of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989. I have been informed that she has one such application under consideration for a proposed wind farm at Keilder in Northumberland.

Housing Waiting Lists

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many people are on the housing waiting list of each local authority in Hampshire because they (a) are waiting for a transfer, (b) are homeless, (c) are waiting for elderly persons' accommodation and (d) live in unfit houses. [9402]

(2) how many people are on the housing waiting list in each local authority in the United Kingdom because they (a) are waiting for a transfer, (b) are homeless, (c) waiting for elderly persons accommodation and (d) live in unfit houses. [9688]

Mr. Raynsford: Local authorities in England report the numbers of households on their housing registers at 1 April each year in their annual housing investment programme—HIP1—returns. The latest available figures for the district councils in England and in Hampshire relate to the position on 1 April 1996 and are given in the 1996 "HIP1 All Items Print", a copy of which is in the Library.

These data do not include households on housing registers for transfer within an authority's stock, nor do they separately identify households who are homeless or are living in unfit houses. The information on households requiring specialised dwellings covers both the elderly and disabled.

For information about other parts of the United Kingdom, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland.

Hostels (Planning Applications)

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance his Department has given to local authorities on planning applications for change of use from class C1 properties to houses in multiple occupation hostels. [9492]

Mr. Raynsford: This Department wrote to chief planning officers in March 1994 explaining the provisions of the Town and Country Planning (Use Classes) (Amendment) Order 1994. The letter advised that planning permission would, in future, be required for a material change of use from a hotel, boarding or guest house to a hostel and vice versa. Copies of the letter and related press notice have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Council House Sales

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many council houses have been sold under the right-to-buy legislation since 1979 in each district council area in Hampshire; [9318]

(2) how many council houses have been sold under the right to buy since 1979 in each district council area in the United Kingdom. [9689]

Mr. Raynsford: Tables showing the available information on total right-to-buy sales in each English local authority for each financial year from 1979–80 are in the Library. The next quarterly update, including data for sales in the period January to March 1997, will be placed in the Library during August.

For information on sales elsewhere in the United Kingdom, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland.

Right to Buy

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will amend right-to-buy legislation to include all housing association tenants; and if he will make a statement. [9799]

Mr. Raynsford: The Housing Act 1996 introduced the right to acquire for housing association tenants. It applies to tenants of housing newly provided by registered social landlords with social housing grant on or after 1 April 1997, and to tenants of stock transferred from other public landlords on or after that date. The scheme is similar to the right-to-buy.

For tenants of existing stock, the voluntary purchase grant scheme, introduced on 1 April 1996, enables them to buy their home at a discount. Associations opt into this scheme at their discretion.

Secure tenants of non-charitable housing associations, that is those who took up their tenancies before 1989, generally have the right to buy their homes under part V of the Housing Act 1985.

We have no plans to change this position.

Nuclear Discharges

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell), of 1 July, Official Report, column 128, when he expects the review of policy in respect of the Ospar—Oslo and Paris—convention meeting in September will be completed; and if he will place in the Library a summary of the conclusions of the review on its completion. [9943]

Angela Eagle: The review of the UK positions on the issues to be discussed within the Ospar commission is to provide guidance for the UK representatives in those negotiations. I shall write to my hon. Friend outlining any major changes on which we decide, and will place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House. I do not expect such conclusions to be reached until shortly before the meeting.

Planning Process

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will assess the advantages of imposing a moratorium on local authorities approving new developments at any stage of a local plan process between consultation and public inquiry; and if he will make a statement; [10110]

(2) if he will assess the advantages of imposing a moratorium on planning decisions pertinent to district-wide local plans at any stage prior to public inquiry; and if he will make a statement. [10111]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 22 July 1997]: No. The recently revised planning policy guidance note 1—"General Policy and Principles"—already contains guidelines which are designed to prevent decisions on major planning applications pre-empting decisions that are to be made in the course of an emerging development plan. In particular, it states that, where proposals for a development plan have been published for consultation, it may be justifiable to refuse planning permission on the grounds of prematurity where the proposed development is significant enough to predetermine decisions that are more properly taken in the context of the development plan.

During the development plan process, planning applications should continue to be considered in the light of current policies. However, account can also be taken of policies in emerging development plans which are going through statutory procedures towards adoption. The weight to be attached to such policies depends upon the stage of plan preparation or review, increasing as successive stages are reached. When planning permission is refused on the grounds of prematurity, the planning authority will need to demonstrate clearly how the grant of planning permission would have prejudiced the outcome of the development plan process.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each local authority the (a) rate support grant for 1997–98 and (b) rate support grant for 1998–99 as set out in the 1996 Red Book, HC90, Session 1996–97, and adjusted by the Budget statement of 2 July applying the distribution methodology used in the 1997–98 settlement and showing the percentage change between (a) and (b). [9595]

Mr. Raynsford: Revenue support grant for each local authority for 1997–98 was set out in tables published by my Department on 27 January this year; they are available in the Library. No decision has yet been made on the level of revenue support grant for 1998–99.

EU Landfill Directive

Miss Melanie Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his Department's policy towards the EU landfill directive, EC draft 6692/97; and when he expects the explanatory memorandum will be published. [9916]

Angela Eagle: A draft directive was published on 5 March. An interim explanatory memorandum was produced on 15 April. A full explanatory memorandum will be supplied to the scrutiny committees in the next few days.

The Government welcome the draft directive's main objectives: the stringent application of high environmental standards across Europe, and a reduction in methane emissions from landfill sites. However, the draft directive also contains proposals, including one for limits on the landfilling of biodegradable waste, which imply a substantial change in UK waste management practice. It is of particular concern, therefore, that there has been no detailed assessment by the Commission of the cost implications for those member states which, like the UK, have a heavy reliance at present on landfill as a means of disposal.

The Government would prefer that the directive focus more on the shared objective of reduction of greenhouse gas emissions, and less on prescribing detailed means to achieve that end. The Government will also be keen to ensure that rules on landfill management are stringent and are evenly applied across Europe, and that the directive does not hamper efforts to improve sustainability of waste management in this country.

Consultation Documents

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure that copies of future consultation documents from his Department are distributed to all (a) county, (b) district, (c) borough and (d) town council offices and to all public libraries. [10242]

Angela Eagle: Copies of consultation documents from my Department are distributed to authorities, organisations and individuals which are most appropriate to the policy issues involved. The aim is to achieve the widest consultation while minimising the administrative burden and potential waste which would arise from automatic distribution to some 1,800 locations.

Consultation documents are, however, also publicised by press notice, on the Internet, through the publications lists of the departmental library and, for Command Papers, The Stationery Office. Individual copies are available on request from the Department's dispatch centres and, where appropriate, the Stationery Office bookshops.

English Partnerships

Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the progress of English Partnerships. [10478]

Mr. Caborn: I have today laid before Parliament English Partnerships' annual report and accounts for 1996–97, which set out their achievements last year. The report provides details of the agency's £235 million development programme and illustrates, from the 2,700 currently in progress, 40 projects spread across the English regions. The agency's key outputs for 1996–97 are as follows:

	Number
Jobs created/safeguarded	24,200
Land regenerated (hectares)	1,100
Housing units facilitated	5,200
Commercial/industrial floorspace developed (sq m)	910,000
Private finance attracted (£ million)	630
Lettings to new tenants	925

Copies of the annual report will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Air Services

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the estimated overspill of passenger demand in relation to runway and terminal capacity at (a) Heathrow, (b) Gatwick and (c) Stansted in (i) 2005, (ii) 2010 and (iii) 2015 on the basis of his Department's forecasts of air traffic. [10069]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department's air traffic forecasts for the United Kingdom 1997 estimate passenger demand at London area airports as a whole to be 124 million in 2005, 153 million in 2010 and 184 million in 2015. The forecasts show that the London area airports taken together do not reach their assumed capacity until 2015. My Department does not produce forecasts for individual airports.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the proportion of scheduled passengers arriving at Heathrow and Gatwick in (a) 1986 and (b) 1996 who were making immediate onward connections by air. [10081]

Ms Jackson: Figures are not available for 1986, but are for 1987. The proportion of total passengers making immediate onward connections by air at Heathrow airport in 1987 was 22.1 per cent. In 1996, it was 32.8 per cent. Of total passengers at Gatwick in 1987, 8.8 per cent. were making onward connections by air. In 1996, this proportion had risen to 17.3 per cent.

Birmingham Airport

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the ownership and value of the local authorities' 49 per cent. shareholding in Birmingham airport; and if he will encourage the local authorities concerned to reduce their stake. [9603]

Dr. Strang: No. This Government do not have a doctrinaire approach to the ownership of airports, and we see no reason to interfere with the arrangements which were entered into by the west midlands local authorities in March.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the future roads programme with particular reference to the M6 Birmingham northern relief road. [9604]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Minister Transport on 19 June 1997, Official Report, column 278-79.

Oil Exploration

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures the Government are taking to protect the marine environment of the Atlantic frontier from contamination from oil drill cuttings and muds during current and future offshore oil exploration and production. [8988]

Mr. Battle: We are committed to reduce the discharge of oil-contaminated drill cuttings from offshore installations. From 1 January this year, an effective ban was imposed upon the discharge of these cuttings where oil-based mud is used. A phased reduction of discharges of most "synthetic" oil-based muds should result in their elimination from the UK continental shelf by the end of 2000.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Street Children

10. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the Government are doing to promote schemes to help solve the problems of street children. [8365]

Mr. Foulkes: We are deeply concerned by the severe problems faced by street children who are often abused and made to work in appalling conditions or forced into prostitution. In addition to tackling the root cause, namely poverty, we support practical initiatives, providing viable alternatives to their existing means of survival. In addition to support through our bilateral programmes, the Department for International Development is supporting non-governmental organisation projects such as the Consortium for Street Children UK.

Women's Education

11. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary for State for International Development what steps she is taking to widen educational opportunity for women in developing countries. [8366]

Mr. Foulkes: All our basic education projects aim to improve access for girls to education and to raise the levels of female literacy. We will increase the proportion of the aid budget spent on poverty-focused projects which include education projects such as our increase in aid to Africa in these areas by 50 per cent. over the next three years.

Strategic Defence Review

12. Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her Department's contribution to the strategic defence review. [8367]

13. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what role her Department will play in the strategic defence review. [8370]

Clare Short: We are contributing to the review. Conflict prevention is an important part of the work of my Department and is clearly relevant to the review.

Global Free Trade

14. Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is her Department's policy towards the goal of global free trade. [8371]

Clare Short: I have already made it clear, and spelled out in a recent speech at the Institute of Directors, that we will work for an international trading environment that facilities the full integration of developing countries into the world trading system.

Indebted Poor Countries Initiative

15. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the heavily indebted poor countries initiative. [8372]

Clare Short: It is, of course, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer who leads on these issues. The Chancellor and I are strongly committed to working together to achieve speedy implementation of the heavily indebted poor countries initiative. Uganda has already qualified and we expect several other countries to be considered in the coming months. We believe the debt initiative to be an important element in our strategy to eradicate poverty.

Cambodia

16. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is her Department's current policy on aid to Cambodia; and if she will make a statement. [8373]

Mr. Foulkes: We are continuing our programme, while keeping political developments under careful review. Our programme aims to reduce poverty and promote human development by supporting projects in health education, urban poverty and land mine clearance.

Bosnia

17. Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had regarding the progress of her Department's work in Bosnia. [8374]

Clare Short: I have had many discussions about my Department's work in Bosnia, with my representations of other government and international organised officials. We are determined to do all we can to achieve full implementation of Dayton and to make our assistance strictly conditioned on co-operation with Dayton.

UK Dependent Territories

18. Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the priority to be given to future assistance to the United Kingdom's dependent territories. [8375]

Clare Short: The future assistance needs of the dependent territories will continue to be a priority for the Government. We are currently reviewing our policy and will set out our conclusions in the forthcoming White Paper.

Commonwealth Initiatives

19. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what policies she plans to initiate or develop on a Commonwealth-wide basis. [8376]

Clare Short: The Government believe that the Commonwealth has the potential to play an important role in tackling a wide range of global issues. The forthcoming Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Edinburgh will provide an opportunity to develop Commonwealth-wide initiatives in areas such as economic reform, trade, investment and human rights. Work has already begun in these areas as part of the preparation for this meeting.

China (Population Control)

20. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what reports she has received concerning the number of women compulsorily sterilised or forced to undergo abortions in China through population control programmes supported by her Department. [8377]

Clare Short: I am aware of reports of compulsory sterilisation and abolition in China. The Department for International Development does not provide aid in support of China's population programmes. It does contribute—along with all other major donors—to the United Nations Population Fund and the International Planned Parenthood Federation, both of which work in China. Both conduct their programmes on principles opposed to any form of coercion in family planning. These organisations play an important role in promoting positive change in the implementation of population programmes in China.

UNESCO Membership

21. Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what will be the annual cost of UNESCO membership. [8378]

Clare Short: Our contribution for the period 1 July to 31 December 1997 will be around £5 million, to be met from the contingency reserve. Future annual contributions are estimated at £11 million and will be considered in the next resources round.

Land Mines

22. Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support her Department is giving to demining organisations. [8379]

23. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support her Department gives to organisations clearing mines. [8380]

Clare Short: The UK has committed over £31 million—including our share of European Community programmes—to humanitarian mine clearance activities since 1991.

Our current projects focus on the needs of vulnerable communities in the poorest and most severely affected countries. Resources are channelled through specialised non-governmental organisations and UN agencies. We are supporting efforts to speed up detection and clearance through improved technology but maintaining the high standards of reliability and safety required for humanitarian demining.

We also support capacity building for national and community-based demining activities to increase levels of participation in affected countries.

West Bank and Gaza Strip

24. Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the prospects for social and economic development in the west bank and Gaza strip. [8381]

Clare Short: Palestinian living standards have fallen substantially since the Oslo process began, largely due to the effects of border closures. The west bank and Gaza has the potential for rapid economic growth, but its social and economic development will continue to be constrained until there is an equitable settlement of the peace process.

Civil Service Development

25. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the level of resources committed by her Department to strengthening the civil service in developing countries. [8382]

Clare Short: The United Kingdom committed £14 million of aid in 1996–97 in support of civil service reform in developing and transitional countries. I plan to work in partnership with countries to support and complement their policies of reform where their objectives are to ensure that government is efficient and to use savings for programmes of poverty elimination.

Know-how Fund

26. Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the scope and role of the know-how fund. [8383]

Clare Short: The know-how fund has been and remains a provider of flexible and timely technical assistance to central and eastern Europe and central Asia. I am reviewing its activities as part of the process leading up to the publication of a White Paper in the autumn, to ensure that it is fully consistent with my Department's objectives.

Policy Changes

27. Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aspects of the former Government's policies on international development she has altered. [8385]

Clare Short: I am currently reviewing all of our programmes to ensure that resources are used efficiently and effectively and are targeted on our overriding objective of poverty elimination. We will issue a White Paper in the autumn setting out how, through more coherent policies, we will tackle global poverty and promote sustainable development.

Developing Countries (Investment)

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what projects her Department is carrying out to support British investment in developing countries. [8368]

Clare Short: My Department supports a wide range of projects in developing countries which aim to create a favourable environment for investment. One of our key aims is to help develop conditions which attract private sector investment to the least developed countries. For instance, in South Africa—and in central and eastern Europe—we have projects which aim to build alliances between UK businesses and their counterparts, to help reduce the cost of investment appraisal for small British firms, and to assist in the transfer of skills. We also sponsor the Commonwealth Development Corporation, whose statutory purpose is to contribute to economic development in the poorest countries by investing in, and supporting private sector operations.

White Paper

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what mechanisms are in place to co-ordinate contributions to the Government's White Paper on international development between Government Departments. [9025]

Clare Short: A range of mechanisms to co-ordinate contributions to the White Paper, both from within and outside government, have been established. We have established a steering group comprising officials from the Department for International Development and other Whitehall Departments. I am currently consulting with ministerial colleagues on the contribution of their Departments to the White Paper.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Botanic Gardens, Belfast and Armagh County Museum

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons are employed by the Ulster museum at (a) Botanic gardens, Belfast and (b) Armagh county museum; how many persons are required to be employed at a location before it is required to establish the work force composition by religious affiliation; and if she will make a statement. [5484]

Mr. Worthington: The Ulster museum employs (a) 169 persons at Botanic gardens, Belfast; and (b) six persons at Armagh county museum.

The trustees of the Ulster museum are specified in the Fair Employment (Specification of Public Authorities) Order (Northern Ireland) 1980 and are registered under the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989. All registered employers are required by the Act to monitor the composition of their work force.

For employers who are not public authorities, from 1 January 1992 a concern satisfies the condition for registration at the end of any week if in that week more than 10 employees have been employed.

Deprived Schools

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will withdraw the document recently circulated by the Department of Education relating to proposals from Coopers and Lybrand concerning deprived schools; and if she will make a statement. [9002]

Mr. Worthington: No. It is an independent report which is intended to provide a framework for discussion on the main issues in the LMS formulae. Policy will be determined in the light of these discussions and consultation with schools. With regard to funding for deprived schools, the objective is to target funds more effectively at such schools and there is no intention to cut back on the total level of funding.

Welfare-to-work Scheme

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will issue a statement concerning the composition of the Northern Ireland task force to oversee the welfare-to-work scheme. [9014]

Mr. Worthington: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Chris Thompson to Mr. Norman A. Godman, dated 18 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked the Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency to reply to your question concerning the composition of the Northern Ireland Task Force to oversee the Welfare to Work scheme. In his absence, I am replying.

Following the model of the National Task Force, it is proposed that the Northern Ireland Task Force should be a small high-level body with representation from business, trade unions, the voluntary sector, environmental groups, the education sector and youth groups.

Nominations for the Northern Ireland Task Force are under active consideration and an announcement on the Task Force will be made in the near future by the Secretary of State.

Juveniles

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received from outside bodies in the last year in respect of the treatment of juveniles in detention. [9344]

Mr. Ingram: Representations from a wide range of interests were received following publication earlier this year of a proposal for a draft Order in Council dealing with juveniles in the criminal justice system. Most were supportive of the proposed changes to the legislation.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many incidents of (a) protest movements, (b) mutinies or rebellions, (c) hunger strikes, (d) self-mutilation, (e) suicide and (f) prison escapes or attempted escapes affecting (i) male and (ii) female juveniles in detention have been recorded in the past year [9285]

Mr. Ingram: The following is the information:

(a) Protest movements: None

(b) Mutinies or rebellions: None

(c) Hunger strikes: None

(d) Cases of self-mutilation: The incidents of self-injurious behaviour in each of the training schools during the past year are:

St. Patrick's training school: None

Middletown juvenile justice centre: None

Lisnevin: None

Rathgael juvenile justice services:

Boys: 3

Girls: 2

Total: 5

(e) Case of Suicide: None

(f) Prison escapes or attempted escapes: None

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many institutions hold juvenile detainees; and if she will list these indicating their type and the number of juveniles admitted to each in the last year for which figures are available. [9223]

Mr. Ingram: There are four training schools which hold both remands and committals. In the year ended 31 December 1995, the last year for which figures are available, the number of admissions was as follows:

	Type	Number
Rathgael Juvenile Justice Services	Non-secure accommodation	88
Lisnevin	Secure accommodation for boys	229
St. Patrick's Training School	Non-secure accommodation for Catholic boys	50
Middletown Juvenile Justice Centres	Non-secure accommodation for Catholic girls	7

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the different prison regimes for juveniles. [9224]

Mr. Ingram: Children under the age of 17 may be remanded in custody or, if found guilty of an offence punishable in the case of an adult with imprisonment, may be sent to a training school. Only one of the four training schools is a secure unit and this is for boys only.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the inspection and supervision systems for juvenile institutions. [9225]

Mr. Ingram: The training schools are inspected regularly by the social services inspectorate which has independent advisers from the Department of Health and Social Services.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many juveniles are in preventive detention. [9226]

Mr. Ingram: The number of juveniles held in the four training schools at 19 June 1997 both in secure and other accommodation was 73.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children currently accompany mothers in detention. [9227]

Mr. Ingram: None.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the minimum age for the detention of juveniles. [9228]

Mr. Ingram: The minimum age for the detention of juveniles is 10, which is the same as the minimum age of criminal responsibility. There are no plans to change this at present.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many juveniles are detained in each institution by (a) age and (b) gender. [9229]

Mr. Ingram: The number held in each school by gender and age on 19 June 1997 was:

		Male						Female
	Number	12 years	13 years	14 years	15 years	16 years	17 years	18 years	14 years	15 years	16 years
Rathgael	27	1	4	6	3	8	1	1	1	1	1
St. Patricks	10	—	1	2	1	6	—	—	—	—	—
Middletown	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Lisnevin	36	—	—	3	17	15	1	—	—	—	—
Total	73	1	5	11	21	29	2	1	1	1	1

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of juveniles in detention are accommodated in individual cells. [9230]

Mr. Ingram: All children in the training schools have individual rooms.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many complaints have been made alleging ill-treatment of juveniles in detention; and if she will make a statement on the outcomes of these complaints. [9241]

Mr. Ingram: There have been no complaints of ill-treatment of juveniles held in the training schools in the past year.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list each incident where juveniles have been detained for reasons other than suspicion or guilt of criminal offences in the last five years. [9239]

Mr. Ingram: None.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of malnutrition have been recorded in respect of juveniles in detention in the last year. [9231]

Mr. Ingram: None.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what circumstances juveniles in detention (a) have free access to drinking water and (b) are able to shave themselves each day. [9232]

Mr. Ingram: (a) during the day, the children have free access to drinking water and during the night, they have access via a call system and a night supervisor; (b) those boys old enough to shave are free to do so each day.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what screening, preventive care and medical care is provided for juveniles in detention. [9233]

Mr. Ingram: All children in the training schools undergo regular medical and dental checks. Drug awareness and sex education are also available as part of the general programme of education.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many visits juveniles in detention may receive each week. [9234]

Mr. Ingram: There are no limits on the number of visits a child may receive each week.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what social and educational assistance is provided for juveniles in detention. [9235]

Mr. Ingram: An extensive range of vocational and educational training is provided in the training schools as well as access to physical and recreational facilities.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what types of prison work are (a) available and (b) compulsory for juveniles in detention. [9236]

Mr. Ingram: Children in the training schools are not required to do manual work. Some engage in horticultural or other activities as part of vocational training.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of prostitution have been recorded among juveniles in detention in the past year. [9237]

Mr. Ingram: None.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will estimate the incidence of physical and sexual abuse by inmates in respect of juveniles in detention in the last year. [9238]

Mr. Ingram: There are no recorded incidences of sexual or serious physical abuse in the training schools in the past year.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many deaths of juveniles in detention have been recorded in the last year; what method of inquiry was instigated into the deaths; and what were the causes of the deaths. [9242]

Mr. Ingram: None.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what circumstances (a) juveniles in detention may be detained in the same cell as adults, (b) juveniles on remand may share the same cell as sentenced juveniles, (c) juvenile first offenders may share the same cell with persistent offenders and (d) juvenile females may share the same cell with male prisoners. [9288]

Mr. Ingram: None.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the ratio of prison staff to children in detention. [9240]

Mr. Ingram: Staff in the training schools are mainly social workers. The ratio of staff to children range from 1:4 in some units, to 1:2 in the secure units.

WALES

Taff-Ely Site of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he plans to ensure that the United Kingdom complies with its obligations under the European wild birds directive in respect of the Taff-Ely site of special scientific interest. [8784]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The European Commission has accepted that the implementation of a range of measures agreed with the United Kingdom Government to compensate for the loss of part of the Taff-Ely SSSI, would constitute compliance with the UK's obligations under the wild birds and habitats directives.

Housing

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his policies to improve the availability and standard of housing in Wales. [8932]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Our capital receipts initiative will enable local authorities to make further improvements in the public and private stock and to assist the provision of extra social housing in partnership with registered social landlords. We have announced that a total of £43 million is to be made available under the initiative in 1997–98 to 1998–99.

In line with our manifesto, we shall support effective schemes which involve private finance to improve the public housing stock and introduce greater diversity and choice. In particular, local authorities are encouraged to consider stock transfer to local housing companies or other registered social landlords in consultation with tenants, where approval for such transfer will be essential.

I have set up a working group to look at ways of helping local authorities to carry out assessments of housing need on a standard basis so that they can identify and tackle the real priorities. We shall complete the Welsh house condition survey next year to assist the targeting of investment in the housing stock.

I have asked Tai Cymru to increase the number of new homes it will start this financial year to at least 2,000. I am reviewing planned provision in future years.

The quality of the environment is a major theme in our manifesto and housing has an important part to play through energy efficiency. We shall be considering practical measures for improving energy efficiency in housing based on reports that we require authorities to submit by 30 November 1997.

We want to ensure that local authorities provide high quality and cost-effective housing services. We are taking forward our commitment to place a new duty on local authorities to achieve best value. This will provide authorities with the demanding challenge of continuous improvement in service costs and quality.

Community Hospitals

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what plans he has to give admitting rights to acute trusts into community hospitals; and if he will make a statement; [9939]

(2) what guidance he gives health authorities concerning relationships between acute trusts and community trusts. [9938]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Department issued guidance in October 1996 entitled "Community Hospitals Wales—The Future", a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. This included much useful advice about relationships with the acute sector. Arrangements for individual hospitals are a matter for local determination but all trusts in Wales are expected to collaborate to ensure that patients receive the best possible health care.

Acute and Community Trusts

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is his policy concerning the merging of acute trusts and community trusts; [9937]

(2) if he will ensure that acute and community trusts are not merged. [9940]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Department wrote to chairmen and chief executives of NHS trusts and health authorities on 17 July 1997 with a draft project plan of the proposed process for trust reconfiguration in Wales. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning fundholding practices. [9936]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I met the Welsh Association of Fundholding Practices and the General Medical Services Council (Wales) on 7 July as part of the process for determining the direction of health care in Wales. I have made clear our commitment to a comprehensive and equitable service and the abolition of the two-tier system and internal market. It will take time to develop the alternative commissioning models that I announced on 26 June and it is important to ensure that the right changes are made and to build on current good practice.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library the details of (a) his costings for the Welsh Assembly and (b) the statistical basis for his claims of savings that can be made from quangos. [9882]

Mr. Ron Davies: Our White Paper, "A Voice for Wales", outlines the Government's estimates of the establishment and running costs of a Welsh Assembly. I have today placed in the Library of the House a detailed breakdown of the estimates and the assumptions used to make them.

I have made no quantified estimate of the savings that will result from the Government's and the Assembly's reform of Welsh quangos, as it is not possible to do so accurately at this early stage.

PRIME MINISTER

Electoral Populations

18. Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to correct the disparity between the electorates of constituencies in England and Scotland. [8403]

The Prime Minister: The House will continue after devolution to have responsibility for the interests of the United Kingdom as a whole and it is therefore essential that it should have the benefit of contributions from all the UK's constituent parts.

Special Advisers

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Prime Minister how many Ministerial advisers with special responsibilities for media matters involving party political issues have been appointed; and if he will list them and their sources of remuneration. [7735]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 10 July 1997]: Only Mr. David Mathieson, who has been appointed by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, has that job description. He is paid by the Labour party.

Intelligence and Security Committee

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister if the meetings of the Intelligence and Security Committee will be based in the Palace of Westminster; and who will clerk the Committee. [9118]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 17 July 1997]: It is for the Intelligence and Security Committee to determine its own procedures. But it is necessary that security requirements are met, and these are currently fulfilled by the provision of secure accommodation in 70 Whitehall and a secretariat consisting of Cabinet Office staff who have security clearance.

Royal Family

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister what arrangements are in place to ensure that Her Majesty's Government are informed of the holiday plans of members of the royal family. [9314]

The Prime Minister: None.

NATO

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Prime Minister what will be the cost to the United Kingdom of the admission of Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic to NATO; and from which Department's budget the funds will be found. [9929]

The Prime Minister: The NATO summit commissioned a full analysis of costs following our decision to invite Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic to negotiate accession. That work continues. However, as I made clear in my statement of 9 July, Official Report, column 937, there is no reason why Britain's contribution to NATO budgets should rise significantly in real terms.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Wednesday 23 July. [9027]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I had ministerial meetings with colleagues. I attended a meeting of the parliamentary Labour party and later on today I will have an audience of Her Majesty.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many and what percentage of employees, in each pay band, in the quangos for which his Department is responsible, are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [8968]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is not held by the Department.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals Her Majesty's Government have made to the review of the common agricultural policy (a) before and (b) since 1 May; and what research his Department has commissioned into the use of set-aside land for the production of vegetable oils suitable for heating, automotive or other purposes. [9622]

Mr. Rooker: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food wrote to Commissioner Fischler on 1 July setting out the Government's views on the future of the common agricultural policy. A copy of his letter has been placed in the Library of the House. I do not propose to comment on proposals put forward by the previous Government.

The Department is funding a range of research into industrial use of vegetable oils. This includes examining a range of industrially relevant oils, improving the efficiency of oil-bearing crops and assessing the environmental impact of plant sourced oils. These crops and the related research are not restricted to set-aside land.

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information his Department collates about the transport of live calves from Ireland to England for slaughter. [9545]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The Animo—animal movements—computer system is used by all EU member states to provide advance notification of consignments of certain live animals, including calves, certified for export to other member states. We are able to collate statistical and other information from the computer messages transmitted by the Animo system.

Veterinary Medicines Directorate

Mrs. Organ: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the 1996–97 annual report and accounts for the Veterinary Medicines Directorate are due to be published. [10480]

Mr. Rooker: I am pleased to announce that the Veterinary Medicines Directorate's annual report and accounts for 1996–97 were published yesterday. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

The report charts the continuing success of the directorate as a next steps agency and I would like to congratulate the chief executive, Dr. Rutter, and his staff on their considerable achievements during the year.

The Veterinary Medicines Directorate has also published a second report on surveillance for veterinary residues. The report sets out the results of the testing for residues of veterinary medicines in meat and other animal products. Copies of this report are also available in the Library of the House.

BSE

Mrs. Organ: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make available the latest report evaluated by his Department on bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [10481]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: A further report on BSE in Great Britain was placed in the Library of the House today.

The report outlines the measures which have been taken to protect public health since November 1996, including the Government proposals for a new food standards agency and the consultation on new proposals for legislation on specified materials from sheep and goats, specified bovine materials in imported beef and scrapie. It summarises the results of action to enforce existing public health measures, and outlines the action which has been taken on cattle traceability. An update on the number of cases of new variant Creutzfeldt–Jakob disease is included.

There is a section on the protection of animal health covering the controls on animal feed and the selective cull.

The European perspective is reported in a section covering progress towards lifting the export ban, the European Parliament temporary committee of inquiry, Commission proposals on specified risk materials and recent Commission reports.

The epidemiology section shows that the epidemic of BSE in the UK continues to decline. The number of clinically suspect cases of BSE reported in Great Britain has continued to fall and at 30 June 1997 was 56 per cent.

less than at the same time in 1996 and 70 per cent. less than at same time in 1995. A continued improvement is expected for the future.

Food Standards Agency

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the (a) names and (b) organisations of those who responded to the consultation on the report by Professor James of a food standards agency; and if he will make a statement. [9848]

Mr. Rooker: A list of the individuals and organisations who responded to public consultation on Professor James's proposal has been placed in the Library of the House. My right hon. Friend will shortly be making a statement on the response to consultation.

Vitamin Supplements

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy in respect of the (a) production and (b) sale of vitamin B6 high dose supplements; and if he will make a statement. [9458]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The Government recently accepted the advice of the independent Food Advisory Committee that the level of vitamin B6 in dietary supplements classed as foods should not exceed more than 10 mg per daily dose and that such supplements should carry a warning label about the risks of harmful effects at intakes above 10 mg. I have instructed officials to draw up legislation under the Food Safety Act 1990 to implement these requirements. The scope of the legislation, which will be subject to consultation, is still being considered, but it is likely to apply both to the production and to the sale of these products.

The legislation will apply only to supplements sold under food law: higher dose products licensed as medicines for the treatment of specific clinical conditions will continue to be available from pharmacies and on prescription.

Agriculture Council

Mrs. Organ: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 22 to 23 July; and if he will make a statment. [10479]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of EU Agriculture Ministers held in Brussels on 22 July. I was accompanied at the meeting by Lord Dubs, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

The principal business of this Council was to consider the Commission's proposal introducing, as a measure to protect public health, an EU-wide prohibition on the use of specified risk materials from cattle, sheep or goats. The Council was called upon to consider this proposal since it had failed to secure a qualified majority at the Standing Veterinary Committee held on 16 July. Following prolonged negotiations in the Council, the Luxembourg presidency was able to establish that a simple majority of member states supported the Commission's proposal. Those member states were Sweden, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal, Finland, Ireland, France and the United Kingdom. The way is now open for the Commission to act on its own competence and give effect to this measure, which will come into force on 1 January 1998. I very much welcome the fact that a majority of member states was able to support a measure that will bring the EU broadly into line with UK practice in respect of the removal of specified risk materials from bovine carcases and extend that practice to sheep and goats.

The Commissioner gave a full report to the Council on the recent discovery of illegal exports of beef from the United Kingdom to other EU member states. I emphasised to the Council the importance the United Kingdom attaches to the prevention of fraud and to maintaining strict controls in slaughterhouses and meat plants.

The Agriculture Council also heard Commissioner Fischler give a full account of the recently published approach to further reform of the common agricultural policy in the framework of the Commission's Agenda 2000 proposals. The Commissioner emphasised the importance of proceeding urgently with changes to the arable, dairy and beef sectors in particular, as well as certain Mediterranean products, in order to prepare the EU for the next round of World Trade Organisation agricultural negotiations and to facilitate the enlargement of the EU. I welcomed the Commission's initiative and urged the Council to engage in detailed discussions as quickly as possible. The Council will revert to this important subject in the early autumn.

The Council also had reports from the Commission on progress in the veterinary equivalence negotiations with the United States and the Czech Republic and from the presidency on progress in attaching animal welfare conditions to the payment of beef export refunds, a proposal I welcome. The Council adopted by qualified majority a proposal setting rates of aid for hops producers for a five-year period, the United Kingdom voting against the proposal on the grounds that the aid rate of 480 ecu per hectare was unnecessarily high.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Probation Service

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many serious incident reports for each probation service in England and Wales during 1996 which involved murder were alleged to have been perpetrated by offenders on (a) community supervision and (b) parole of after-care. [8901]

Ms Quin: The information available is given in the following table.

Number of alleged murders committed by offenders under probation supervision about whom a management review has been received

Probation area	Community penalties	Post-release supervision	Family court welfare contact
Northumbria	5	3	—
Greater Manchester	5	2	—

Total	55	12	2

1. These figures do not include charges of: death by dangerous driving; unlawful killing; child death (neglect); manslaughter; conspiracy to murder; aid and abet murder; arson with intent; attempted murder.

2. Cases where more than one offender were jointly charged with one offence have been counted as one incident; multiple offences alleged to have been committed by one offender have been counted as multiple incidents.

3. Some charges may have been reduced or dropped before or at trial.

4. These figures relate to incidents that were notified to the Home Office between 16 November 1995 and 17 December 1996 about which a management review was subsequently received.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many probation officers were (a) sacked and (b) disciplined in respect of a serious incident report during 1996. [8906]

Ms Quin: The information is not currently available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Immigration

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 30 June, Official Report, column 4, how many persons who had been detained under Immigration Act powers were granted (a) asylum, (b) exceptional leave to remain and (c) leave to enter or remain on another basis in (i) 1995, (ii) 1996 and (iii) 1997 to date. [8925]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Further analysis of the information given in the reply of 30 June has shown that the number of people who were held in detention, solely under Immigration Act powers, and then subsequently granted leave to enter or remain was previously overestimated. The revised totals, with the breakdown requested, are given in the table. I apologise if this has caused any inconvenience.

Number[1] of persons granted leave to enter or remain who had been detained under Immigration Act powers[2, 3] by date of outcome, 1995, 1996 and January to June 1997

	1995	1996	1997[4]
Granted asylum	30	90	115
Granted exceptional leave to remain/enter	60	110	55
Granted other leave to enter or remain[5]	95	95	65
Total	185	295	235

[1] Estimated and rounded to nearest 5.

[2] Persons detained solely under the powers contained in Schedule 2 or 3 of the Immigration Act 1971.

[3] Information relates to year of outcome, which does not necessarily correspond with detention period.

[4] For January to 30 June 1997.

[5] Includes—leave to enter as a spouse, leave to enter—other, indefinite leave to remain, limited leave to remain, cases conceded, Court recommendation over-turned, entry regarded as lawful.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of employees in his private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [8949]

Mr. Straw: A voluntary self-classification system is used to record the ethnic origin of staff in the Home Office. Of the staff serving in the Home Office ministerial secretariat on 6 July 1997 (a) 7.4 per cent. had classified themselves as being of Asian origin and (b) 2.9 per cent. had classified themselves as being of Afro-Caribbean origin. The ministerial secretariat consists of staff serving all the Home Office Ministers and the permanent secretary. Given the small size of the ministerial secretariat, the information requested on numbers cannot be provided as this might result in the identification of individuals. This would be contrary to the Home Office code of practice on the use and disclosure of ethnic data, which has been agreed with the trade union side.

In connection with this question, I regret that some of the information provided in my reply to the hon. Member on 22 May 1997, Official Report, column 110, was incorrect in that the figures given were those for black staff and not for staff of Asian origin. The correct figures are as follows:

Grade level	Asian staff	Afro-caribbean staff
Administrative Assistants	175	109
Administrative Officers	314	142
Executive Officers	175	67
Higher Executive Officers	17	14
Senior Executive Officer and above	11	7
Total	692	339

Immigration (Same-sex Partnerships)

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review immigration policy in respect of same-sex partnerships. [9598]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We are examining how we wish to develop all aspects of immigration policy, including such issues.

Tote Direct

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many outlets there are for the Tote Direct; and if he will compare the number of such outlets with those for the national lottery. [9902]

Mr. George Howarth: Approximately 3,400 betting shops currently have Tote Direct terminals. The Tote expects there to be 4,500 by the end of the coming year.

There are about 35,000 retail outlets for national lottery products—24,000 for the on-line game and 10,800 for instant games.

Police (Ethnic Origin)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of the ethnic origin of police officers in each rank in England and Wales. [9888]

Mr. Michael: The latest available information is given in the table.

Police strength, England and Wales, 31 March 1996 (excluding secondments)

Rank	White	Black	Asian	Other	Total
Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) Ranks	194	0	0	0	194
Superintendent	1,308	1	0	1	1,310
Chief Inspector	1,711	3	2	4	1,720
Inspector	6,251	8	14	7	6,280
Sergeant	18,610	60	77	29	18,776
Constable	94,513	977	—	333	96,532
Total	122,587	1,049	802	374	124,812

Although we do not yet have firm information for 1997, we do know that there is one ethnic minority officer (Asian) at ACPO rank.

Racehorses

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has evaluated in respect of the overall returns to racehorse owners in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Ireland, (c) France, (d) German, (e) Japan and (f) Australia. [9898]

Mr. George Howarth: The most recent figures are for 1995.

Country	Total prize money £	Percentage of training expenses covered
United Kingdom	58,160,788	21
Ireland	13,548,480	20
France	92,312,632	49
Germany	23,151,375	45
Japan	655,428,126	95
Australia	112,848,577	34

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the overall returns to racehorse owners for each year since 1986. [9897]

Mr. Howarth: The only available information is as follows:

	Percentage of training expenses covered by prize money
United Kingdom
1993	21
1994	22
1995	21

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which EU member states provide extra prize money to winning racehorses trained or bred in the member state. [9899]

Mr. Howarth: We understand that some prize money comes from public sources in all European Union member states except Luxembourg.

Prisoners' Families (Travel Costs)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost to public funds of reimbursing travel costs and providing travel for prisoners' families to visit their incarcerated relatives (a) nationally and (b) in Channings Wood; and what percentage in each case is represented by (i) taxi costs and (ii) overnight accommodation. [9857]

Ms Quin: The most recent figures are for 1996–97.

The total travel cost plus overnight accommodation for visits to prisons in England and Wales was £2,540,578 and to Channings Wood prison, £65,833. Overnight accommodation represents 4.35 per cent. nationally and 3.94 per cent. for Channings Wood.

It is not possible to specify as a percentage the cost of taxis against total travel cost, either nationally or for Channings Wood prison, as the assisted prison visits unit computer system does not differentiate between different modes of travel such as taxi, private motor vehicle, bus, etc.

Drivers (Drug Tests)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress is being made by the police scientific development branch on developing reliable equipment to test for drugs in relation to driving ability. [9845]

Mr. Michael: The project is progressing on time and I was able to discuss the project when I visited the police scientific development branch on 22 July. Prototype equipment is planned for March to April 1998. A methodology for testing prototypes is being developed in parallel.

Passports

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many British passports were applied for in (a) the year beginning January 1993,

(b) the year beginning January 1994, (c) the year beginning January 1995, (d) the year beginning January 1996, (e) the third quarter of 1996, (f) the last quarter of 1996, (g) the first quarter of 1997 and (h) the second quarter of 1997. [9778]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested on the numbers of passports applied for is as follows:

Year/months	Number of British passports applied for
1993	3,251,596
1994	3,707,162
1995	4,235,737
1996	5,306,723
July–September 1996	1,333,086
October–December 1996	724,602
January–March 1997	1,337,769
April—June 1997	1,467,841

Police (Sponsorship)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the amount of sponsorship received by each police force from companies in the private sector. [9851]

Mr. Michael: This information is not collected centrally. I understand that the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Association of Police Authorities have estimated that police forces in England and Wales could receive up to £30 million in 1997–98 in agreements involving gifts, loans and sponsorship. Some information on the value of police authority sponsorship agreements can be found in "Police Statistics 1994–95 and 1995–96 Actuals" and "Police Statistics 1996–97 Estimates" published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy, copies of which are in the Library.

Inquests

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the inquest system, with special reference to major disasters in respect of which public inquiries are held; and if he will make a statement. [10140]

Mr. George Howarth: The report of the disasters and inquests working group, published in March, recommended legislation to relieve coroners of the need to resume their inquest after the public inquiry had been completed, and invited comments. There is no current legislative opportunity to give effect to the recommendations, but the position is kept under review.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have completed the sex offender treatment programme to date; and how many are currently on such courses. [10097]

Ms Quin: A total of 2,247 prisoners had completed the sex offender treatment programme by 31 March 1997.

The number of prisoners on the programme at any one time during the course of a year could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the Prison Service has planned for a further 742 prisoners to have completed accredited versions of the programme by 31 March 1998. By this date, an additional 42 prisoners will have completed a version of the programme which it is hoped will be accredited later in the year.

Postal Votes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 2 July, Official Report, column 161, on postal votes before the last general election, what was the amount spent on (a) television and (b) newspaper advertisements; and what measures were taken to inform blind and partially sighted people of the availability of postal votes. [9163]

Mr. George Howarth: (a) £305,000 and (b) £395,000. Advice on absent voting provisions for blind and partially sighted electors at the general election were provided to the editors of talking newspaper services through the offices of the Royal National Institute for the Blind.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 2 July, Official Report, column 161, on postal votes before the last general election, for what reasons his Department did not use radio advertisements. [9162]

Mr. Howarth: The publicity campaign about absent voting on television and in the newspapers was considered to be the most cost-effective way to reach as large an audience as possible within the period available after the general election was announced for applications to be made. Because there are so many very different radio stations, it would not have been possible to achieve such wide coverage through radio advertisements. The Government monitor the effectiveness of their advertising and we are of course prepared to consider using a different medium if that would be more suitable.

Juveniles

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many juveniles are in the preventive detention. [9267]

Ms Quin: On 18 July, the number of juveniles[1] held in Prison Service establishments was:

	Number
Sentenced juveniles	1,816
Remanded juveniles	263
Total	2,079

[1] The term juvenile is defined by the 1991 Criminal Justice Act as remanded 15 and 16-year-olds and sentenced 15 to 17-year-olds. Unsentenced 17-year-olds are classed as young male remands.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what proportion of juveniles in detention are accommodated in individual cells; [9271]

(2) in what circumstances (a) juveniles in detention may be detained in the same cell as adults, (b) juveniles on remand may share the same cell as sentenced juveniles, (c) juvenile first offenders may share the same cell with persistent offenders and (d) juvenile females may share the same cell with male prisoners. [9287]

Ms Quin: Information is not held centrally on the number of juveniles accommodated in individual cells and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

(a) Governors may exceptionally allow the sharing of a cell by a male juvenile and an adult male prisoner in circumstances where it would be reasonable and practicable to permit this, for example where a son and a father or brothers are in custody in the same establishment and wish to be accommodated together. This must be in the interests of the young prisoner. Selected adult female prisoners can be located in accommodation designated for convicted young female prisoners.

(b) In accordance with prison rule 3(2), unconvicted prisoners may not be required under any circumstances to share a cell with a convicted prisoner.

(c) Subject to the need to maintain good order and discipline and to safeguard the interests of the individuals concerned, there is no restriction on juvenile first offenders sharing a cell with persistent offenders.

(d) In accordance with prison rule 9(1), women prisoners are kept entirely separate from male prisoners.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visits juveniles in detention may receive each week. [9275]

Ms Quin: The statutory entitlement to visits by juveniles, which is the same as that for adult prisoners and young offenders, is set out in the young offender institution rules and standing order 5, copies of which are in the Library. In accordance with these, all convicted prisoners, including juveniles, are entitled to at least one visit after reception on conviction and every two weeks thereafter. Unconvicted prisoners, again including juveniles, are entitled to visits lasting at least one and a half hours each week but, where circumstances permit, governors should allow more. In addition to this, governors have discretion to allow special visits and prisoners may earn additional visits under the incentives and earned privileges scheme.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the ratio of prison staff to children in detention. [9306]

Ms Quin: The majority of juveniles are held in establishments which also hold young offenders and/or adult prisoners. Therefore, it is not possible to say what the ratio of prison staff to juveniles is. The staff to prisoner ratio for all Prison Service establishments at 30 June 1997 was 1: 1.51.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many complaints have been made alleging ill-treatment of juveniles in detention; and if he will make a statement on the outcomes of these complaints; [9281]

(2) what representations he has received from outside bodies in the last year in respect of the treatment of juveniles in detention. [9343]

Ms Quin: The Prison Service has received no representations from outside bodies in the last year on the treatment of juveniles whilst they are in detention. However, representations have been received from a range of organisations and agencies on the implementation of the provisions in the Criminal Justice Act 1991 for court-ordered secure remands and ending prison remands for juveniles. The Government remain committed to ending prison remands for 15 and 16-year-old boys as quickly as possible and hope that the planned review of secure accommodation will help in this regard.

Separate records of the total number of complaints made on behalf of juveniles, including those made by third parties, are not held centrally. Individual establishments, however, keep records of formal complaints made by juvenile prisoners, and the Director General of the Prison Service will write to my hon. Friend with details of the number of complaints received.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the different prison regimes for juveniles; [9265]

(2) what types of prison work are (a) available and (b) compulsory for juveniles in detention; [9277]

(3) what social and educational assistance is provided for juveniles in detention. [9276]

Ms Quin: The nature of a prison regime for juveniles is for the governor to determine, within young offender institution rules, budget and on advice from his management team. The area manager must approve the regime for each establishment. This produces regimes which reflect local needs and recognise the specific needs of juvenile prisoners.

The work available for juveniles varies between establishments. Subject to limitations through legal restrictions on the operation of certain machinery by juveniles, and the requirement that young offenders under the age of 17 must undertake 15 hours per week compulsory education, the work is the same as provided for adult offenders.

Juveniles may be required to work as part of a balanced regime of education, training and work designed to assist them to acquire or develop personal responsibility, self-discipline, physical fitness, interests and skills and to obtain suitable employment after release. Where possible, they are given a choice of work.

The young offender institution consolidated rules 1996 require that prisoners aged less than 17 be provided with at least 15 hours a week of education or training. The education provided is focused on remedial eduation in basic skills, combined with a wider variety of experience and training to equip young offenders to deal more effectively with life after imprisonment.

Education provision for those under 17 years of age is linked to the national curriculum for schools in so far as facilities allow.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the minimum age for the detention of juveniles. [9269]

Mr. Michael: The following custodial sentences are currently available to the courts for convicted juveniles: from the age of 10, detention during Her Majesty's pleasure for murder under section 53(1) of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933; and detention, up to the adult maximum, under section 53(2) of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 for grave crimes including those which are punishable in the case of an adult by 14 years' imprisonment or more. For juveniles aged 15 to 17, detention in a young offender institution for a maximum of two years is available for any offence for which an adult may be sentenced to imprisonment.

Our aim is to provide the courts with a more coherent and flexible set of custodial powers than those left by the previous Government. In the meantime, we will press ahead with introducing the secure training order provided for in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994, to deal with 12 to 14-year-old persistent offenders who have not responded to punishment in the community. My right. hon. Friend announced on 3 July that he has commissioned a review of the secure accommodation currently available for young offenders and the youth justice task force will be advising Ministers on this issue. When the secure training order is implemented, the courts will have the following powers to impose custodial sentences:

10 to 17

detention during Her Majesty's pleasure for murder (section 53(1) Children and Young Persons Act 1993):

10 and 11-years-olds section 53(2) custody, up to the adult maximum, for grave offences;

12, 13 and 14-year-olds

section 53(2) custody, up to the adult maximum for grave offences, and the secure training order (STO) for up to two years, for less serious but persistent offending;

15, 16 and 17-year-olds

section 53(2) custody, up to the adult maximum for grave offences, and detention of up to two years in a young offender institution for any other impressionable offence.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances juveniles in detention (a) have free access to drinking water and (b) are able to shave themselves each day. [9273]

Ms Quin: Most juveniles in detention have a tap with drinkable water in their cell. Where the cell does not have integral sanitation, individuals will have access to drinking water outside the cell; or if they are confined to their cell during the day they will be provided with a jug of water.

The young offender institution rules (21. (3)) state that male juveniles in detention may be required by the governor to shave or be shaved for neatness or, as directed by the medical officer, for health or cleanliness. The circumstances will vary according to the inmate: those needing to shave and who are not considered a suicide risk may keep their own razors, and are encouraged to shave each day; where a juvenile is considered a suicide risk the razor is issued temporarily for shaving under supervision.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many institutions hold juvenile detainees; and if he will list these indicating their type and the number of juveniles admitted to each in the last year for which figures are available. [9264]

Ms Quin: Provisional information for 1996 is given in the table.

[1] Provisional figures.

[2] Total receptions cannot be calculated by adding together receptions in each category because there is double counting.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children currently accompany mothers in detention. [9268]

Ms Quin: On 16 July 1997, 52 women had their children with them in the four mother and baby units in the female prison estate.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of malnutrition have been recorded in respect of juveniles in detention in the last year. [9272]

Ms Quin: Information on malnutrition in prisoners is not recorded centrally. All new receptions to Prison Service establishments, including juveniles, are screened by a medical officer. Any cases of malnutrition would be noted and followed up as appropriate.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list each incident where juveniles have been detained for reasons other than suspicion or guilt of criminal offences in the last five years. [9280]

Ms Quin: Information for 1992 to 1996 is contained in the table. A list of each incident cannot be disclosed for reasons of confidentiality.

Juveniles[1] received into prison service establishments for non-criminal offences: 1992–96

Year	Reason for detention: Awaiting deportation	Other immigration offence	Contempt of court	Total

1994	1	11	2	14
1995	4	9	0	13
1996	1	11	0	12

[1] Aged 15–17.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of prostitution have been recorded among juveniles in detention in the past year. [9278]

Ms Quin: None.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of (a) protest movements, (b) mutinies or rebellions, (c) hunger strikes, (d) self-mutilation, (e) suicide and (f) prison escapes or attempted escapes affecting (i) male and (ii) female juveniles in detention have been recorded in the past year. [9284]

Ms Quin: The information is not available exactly in the form requested.

The table lists the number of reported incidents of concerted indiscipline, food refusal, attempted suicide, suicide, escapes and attempted escapes affecting male and female juveniles in the last financial year.

Reported incidents 1996–97 for juveniles in detention

Type of incident	Number of incidents: Male juveniles	Female juveniles
Concerted indiscipline[1]	4	3
Food refusal	0	0
Attempted suicide[2]	54	6
Suicide	2	0
Attempted escape	10	2
Escape	2	0

[1] For reporting purposes, the Prison Service does nto separately define protest movements and mutinies or rebellions. Any incident where two or more prisoners refuse to comply with a direct order is reported as concerted indiscipline.

[2] All instances of "self mutilation" are incorporated in the total number of attempted suicide incidents.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many deaths of juveniles in detention have been recorded in the last year; what method of inquiry was instigated into the deaths; and what were the causes of the deaths. [9282]

Ms Quin: In the last year, there were two self-inflicted deaths of juveniles by hanging in Prison Service establishments. Each death was investigated by the coroner and an inquest held. The Prison Service also conducts an internal investigation into every death in custody.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the inspection and supervision systems for juvenile institutions. [9266]

Ms Quin: Young offender institutions and local prisons containing juveniles are inspected by Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons for England and Wales with the same frequency as all other prisons. All reports are published.

Her Majesty's chief inspector has included inspectors from the inspectorate of probation services, the inspectorate of social service and the Office for Standards in Education on occasions, to take advantage of their particular knowledge of juveniles.

The supervision of juveniles in prison is the responsibility of the Prison Service.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many juveniles are detained in each institution by (a) age and (b) gender. [9270]

Ms Quin: Provisional information for 31 May is given in the table.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what screening, preventive care and medical care is provided for juveniles in detention. [9274]

Ms Quin: The Prison Service health care standards require establishments to provide reception screening, clinical and other health assessment, counselling and education, to treat inmates, promote healthier life styles and, generally, to enable them to take informed decisions regarding matters affecting their health. The standards apply to young offender institutions as well as adult prisons.

Identity Cards

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on Government policy towards identity cards. [10397]

Mr. George Howarth: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr.Blizzard) on 3 July, Official Report, column 237.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Assisted International Travel Scheme

Mr. Reed: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received about the reduction in value of the assisted international travel scheme; and if she will make a statement. [6176]

Mr. Battle: I have approved funding of £2.1 million for 1997–98 for the DTI-assisted international travel scheme which is administered for DTI by the British Standards Institution. This is £100,000 less than the scheme's 1996–97 budget and reflects spend under the scheme in that financial year.

The aim of the scheme is to facilitate the attendance of key UK business delegates at overseas standards development meetings through a contribution to the cost of their air fares. It has always been the Government's view that business, as the main beneficiary of standards, should pay the lion's share of costs. The allowances are calculated using the return economy air fares in the "OAG World Airways Supplement" because this is understood to be the only publication that lists such fares on a worldwide basis.

My officials became aware earlier this year that these fares were higher than return economy air fares generally available in the marketplace; and that, consequently, the level of the allowance was out of line with the scheme's objectives. After careful consideration with BSI, the Department therefore decided, in order to ensure that the allowance reflected the scheme's objectives and also to obtain better value for money for the taxpayer, that it should reduce the contribution to a maximum of 65 per cent. of the quoted return economy air fare from London to the relevant overseas airport, nearest to where the standards development meeting is held. This was given effect from 1 July 1997. About 4,500 claims a year are made under AITS. The President has received four representations, in writing, about this reduction.

I know how much the AITS is appreciated by British business. It helps business to secure European and international standards which are supportive of UK competitiveness. Although the administration of the scheme is kept under regular review by both DTI and BSI, we have for the time being no plans for further changes.

Observatories

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the level of grant given by the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council to (a) the Royal Greenwich observatory and (b) the royal observatory, Edinburgh, in real terms for each year since 1992. [7492]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 10 July 1997]: The Royal Greenwich observatory and the royal observatory, Edinburgh became establishments of the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council on 1 April 1994. At that time, the two observatories and the island sites operated as an integrated organisational entity under the control of a single director. Following the establishment of PPARC, the organisation was split into four independent establishments—RGO, ROE, joint astronomy centre, Hawaii, and Isaac Newton Group, La Palma, Canary Islands—each with a separate budget holder. The basis of funding was also changed in 1995–96 to one in which a more arm's-length customer-supplier relationship exists between the island directors and the Gemini Telescopes UK project manager as procurers of telescope instrumentation, and the UK directors of the UK observatories as suppliers.

Island directors and the Gemini Telescopes UK project manager each now receive separate allocations of funds reflecting their responsibility for procurement of instrumentation and telescope construction. Smaller sums are allocated to UK directors to finance core programmes, infrastructure and running costs. The UK directors are then expected to compete to win the available work from the island sites and any similar work that might become available from other sources. Similarly, the island directors and the Gemini project manager are expected to seek out the most cost-effective suppliers, but with the proviso that, where short-term changes to work load within the UK establishments would give rise to significant restructuring costs, restrictions will apply.

The allocations to UK establishments for each year are as follows:

Table 1: Formal allocations

£000

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98
ROE	[1]4,377	814	1,211	[2]1,044
RGO	[1]4,537	828	1,188	[2]603

[1] Estimated apportionment of the 1994–95 outturn.
[2] Provisional allocations.

Table 2: Total expenditure

£000

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
ROE	[1]4,377	[2]3,766	[2]3,778
RGO	[1]4,537	[2]4,284	[2]6,740

[1] Estimated apportionment of the 1994–95 outturn.
[2] Includes formal allocations.

Table 1 clearly demonstrates the substantial fall in baseline funding to UK directors at the time of the introduction of the new structure. Table 2 reflects the additional funding from work won from the customers of each observatory.

Departmental Budgets

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what new plans she has to introduce cuts and savings in her Department as a result of the effect on her Department's budgets for 1997–98 and 1998–99 of the upward revisions to the gross domestic product deflators in the Budget on 2 July; and if she will make a statement. [8297]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 14 July 1997]: All Departments are reallocating spending within their departmental ceilings as part of the comprehensive spending review.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if, following the recent Budget, she will give her estimate of the total real level of her Department's budget, in 1995–96 prices, in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99; if she will estimate what such figures were for (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1998–99 following the November 1996 Budget on the basis of the estimates of the GDP deflator contained in that Budget; and if she will make a statement. [8296]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 14 July 1997]: The figures requested for my Department's spending plans within the control total, and those of other bodies shown within the trade and industry section of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report", are as follows:

£million

	FSBR July 1997: REAL 1995–96 prices		FSBR November 1996: REAL 1995–96 prices
	1997–98	1998–99	1997–98	1998–99

The figures for 1997–98 have not been adjusted to take account of the summer supplementary estimates presented to Parliament on 8 July but not yet approved.

Exchange Rates

Mr. Letwin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received from exporters about the effects of the current sterling exchange rate. [8688]

Mrs. Beckett: I receive a number of representations on matters relating to exports, including the exchange rate.

Engineering

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans there are to follow up the Year of Engineering Success campaign within her Department's activities. [9409]

Mr. Battle: It has always been the intention that one of the major outputs of the Year of Engineering Success should be an on-going commitment by the engineering community to communicate both the importance of engineering to our society and the opportunities the profession offers. This will largely be the responsibility of the engineering professional institutions in partnership with the businesses, whose competitiveness relies on engineers. Additionally, my Department will consider proposals to support specific activities linked to public understanding activities, through the Office of Science and Technology.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what support she has pledged to the Year of Engineering Success campaign. [9408]

Mr. Battle: My Department has offered £435,000 to assist the Year of Engineering Success. Additional support from the Department for Education and Employment and the Department of the Environment take the total level of government support to £570,000.

In addition to this financial input, my Department will continue to provide ministerial and official support to the campaign, through attendance at relevant events and provision of advice and information to the campaign.

Travel Trade

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received on the statement by the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs in Athens on the rebranding of Lunn Poly travel shops; and if she will make a statement. [9428]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 July 1997]: Representations have only been made by Opposition Front-Bench Members and one participant in the travel trade.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer to the right hon. Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood) of 14 July, Official Report, column 69, for what reasons the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs decided to rule himself out of the consideration of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report into the travel trade. [9477]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 July 1997]: My hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths) decided to stand aside from consideration of the report, in order to avoid any question over whether he could approach the MMC report with an open mind.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she has discussed with the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs the content of his public responses during the Athens conference concerning the travel trade. [9429]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 July 1997]: Yes.

Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how, and to whom, the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs announced that he was stepping down from the consideration of the MMC report on the travel trade. [9951]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs first communicated this to me via official channels.

Consumer Issues

Mrs. May: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she intends to take in relation to the top three issues listed by hon. Members in responding to the questionnaire on consumer issues. [9443]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 18 July 1997]: The top three issues raised by hon. Members in responding to the consumer issues questionnaire were labelling—animal testing—food and drink and advertising standards.

My Department is working on a guidance document on the Cosmetics Regulations 1996 which will address the question of permissible use of animal testing claims on labels.

Food and drink issues are being considered vigorously by my colleagues in MAFF and DOH notably through preparation for the food standards agency, in which I have an input.

I have met the Advertising Standards Authority and the Advertising Association to discuss the concerns shared by parliamentary colleagues and the public.

I would be pleased to meet the hon. Member to discuss the concerns of her constituents.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will estimate the total number of employees and self-employed in the United Kingdom in each sector currently excluded from the working time directive, indicating the number in each sector estimated to be non-mobile workers. [9935]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The working time directive excludes certain sectors of activity. The tables provide a broad estimate of the number of workers, both employees and self-employed, in certain sectors and the number of mobile workers in transport sectors. There are, in addition to the numbers in the tables, an estimated 285,000 non-mobile workers in transport-related occupations.

UK employment in sectors excluded from the working time directive (employees and self-employed)

Other excluded sectors[1]	Total in employment
Other work at sea (i.e. offshore workers)	30,000
Junior doctors	27,000
Sea fishing	20,000

[1] Various sources.

Transport sector[1]	Mobile workers
Air	46,000
Road	674,000
Rail	38,000
Sea and inland waterway	45,000

[1] Source: LFS, Autumn 1996.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if she will estimate the cost to business in the United Kingdom of extending the full provisions of the working time directive to all non-mobile workers; [9934]

(2) if she will estimate the cost to business in the United Kingdom of extending to all mobile and off-shore workers the provisions of the working time directive regarding breaks, paid annual leave, health assessments for night workers and guarantees of adequate rest and maximum number of hours to be worked annually. [9933]

Mr. McCartney: It is not yet possible to make a meaningful estimate of the costs of extending the provisions of the working time directive to all sectors of activity currently excluded, because we do not have enough details on how any extension would operate. Responses to the proposals in the Commissions's recent White Paper on the subject may give us a better indication of potential costs and benefits.

Mr. Lock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to issue a further consultation document on the implications of the working time directive. [10085]

Mr. McCartney: We are currently finalising our implementation proposals which we aim to bring forward shortly.

Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for what reasons she informed the hon. Member for Wokingham (a) on 4 July that the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe had placed his non-British Petroleum shareholdings in a blind trust and (b) on 14 July, Official Report, column 68, that the Minister had not yet done so. [9591]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 July 1997]: My letter of 4 July explained in general terms how the Minister had complied with "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" in the light of discussions with the DTI permanent secretary. From his appointment on 7 May, he deliberately refrained from giving trading instructions to his bank in respect of any of his individual shareholding interests pending completion of the necessary trust arrangements. As that answer also made clear, the Minster put arrangements in place from the outset to match as closely as possible those of a blind trust until the blind trust arrangements could be completed, which they now have been.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what correspondence the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe has entered into in relation to (a) thionyl chloride, (b) ethyl succinyl chloride, (c) propane phosphoric dichloride and (d) other similar oil-based chemicals. [9197]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 July 1997]: None.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) when she first was notified that the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe planned to keep a substantial shareholding in BP for 1997; [9198]

(2) when she received notification from the office of the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe about which issues and papers the Minister could not deal with; [9199]

(3) when she was first notified that the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe had not placed his non-BP shares in a blind trust in compliance with "Questions of Procedure for Ministers". [9200]

Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she was first informed that the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe had not put all his shares into a blind trust. [9871]

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) when she was informed that the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe intended to place his non-BP investments in a blind trust; [9340]

(2) when she was first informed of the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe's continued shareholding in BP; [9337]

(3) when she was informed that the legal structure of the transfer of the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe's non-BP investments was proposed to take effect on 18 June; [9339]

(4) when she was informed that the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe's non-BP shareholdings had not been placed in a blind trust. [9341]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answers 18 July 1997]: "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" makes it clear that the means of compliance with the guidance on investments and avoidance of conflict of interest is for the judgment and decision of individual Ministers, in the light of advice from the relevant permanent secretary if they wish. There was therefore no need for special arrangements to inform me about these matters.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of trade on what occasions the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe sees papers or attends meetings on energy issues. [9328]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 July 1997]: The Minister sees papers or attends meetings on energy issues if they are relevant to his ministerial responsibilities and do not give rise to conflicts of interest.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what account was taken of the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe's shareholding in BP in respect of his signing European Community document CSE (97) 1 final 9000/97. [9651]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The single market is one of the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe's main areas of responsibility. That is why he signed EC document CSE (97) 1 final 9000/97. Arrangements are in place to ensure that the Minister is not involved in business which could give rise to a conflict of interest in relation to his BP shareholding.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on how many occasions policies which might affect BP's actual or potential competitors have been discussed with, or in the presence of, the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe. [9338]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 21 July 1997]: From his appointment, the Minister has ensured that he does not participate in discussions which could give rise to a conflict of interest between his ministerial responsibilities and his private interests.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on how many occasions, and on which dates, she has discussed with the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe his BP and non-BP shareholdings. [9336]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 21 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the right hon. Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood) on 14 July, Official Report, column 68.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for what reasons she stated in her letter to the right hon. Member for Wokingham that the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe had placed the generality of his investments in blind trusts. [9550]

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what arrangements have been put in place to ensure no conflict of interest arises for the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe in respect of his non-BP shareholdings. [9704]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answers 21 July 1997]: My letter of 4 July explained in general terms how the Minister had complied with "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" in the light of discussions with the DTI permanent secretary. From his appointment on 7 May, he deliberately refrained from giving trading instructions to his bank in respect of any of his individual shareholding interests pending completion of the necessary trust arrangements. As that answer also made clear, the Minister put arrangements in place from the outset to match as closely as possible those of a blind trust until the blind trust arrangements could be completed, which they now have been.

Mr. Flight: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in what circumstances the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe will renew his shareholding in BP next year. [9949]

Mr. Letwin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in what circumstances the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe will be allowed to hold his BP shares after the end of 1998. [9789]

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what factors the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe will be obliged to take into account when reviewing in January 1998 whether to sell his BP shares. [9649]

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe will be entitled to hold his BP shares beyond the next budget. [9798]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answers 21 July 1997]: The Minister will review the position before 1 January in the light of the guidance in "Questions of Procedures for Ministers", the circumstances at the time, and any advice he may obtain. He will continue to ensure that no conflict arises between his ministerial responsibilities and his private interests.

Mrs. May: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Minister of State for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe will handle (a) state aid and (b) gas liberalisation issues in Europe. [9831]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The Minister will handle such issues if they fall within his responsibilities and if they do not give rise to a conflict of interest with his private interest in BP.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what responsibility the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe has for determining (a) whether to (i) subscribe for rights issue shares, (ii) take cash or share dividends, (iii) accept bids and (iv) accept demerger proposals and (b) how to receive windfall distributors on the holdings in his non-BP share portfolio. [9650]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 21 July 1997]: None. The Minister has now completed the arrangements to place his non-BP share portfolio in a blind trust.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the oral answer from the Minister for Science, Energy and Industry, of 3 July, Official Report, column 404, if the possession of a shareholding in BP prohibits the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe from participation in departmental discussion of energy issues. [9558]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 22 July 1997]: The Minister sees papers or attends meetings on energy issues if they are relevant to his ministerial responsibilities and do not give rise to conflicts of interest.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Minister of Trade and Competitiveness in Europe will be taking part in the forthcoming discussions about competition and liberalisation in European gas markets. [9790]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The Minister for Science, Energy and Industry has primary responsibility for the UK's interest in liberalisation of EU gas markets. Lord Simon has responsibility for taking forward the UK's interests in completion of the single market. He is not involved in discussions or decisions which give rise to a conflict of interest.

Official Travel (Costs)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total cost of the visit by herself and officials to Japan. [9430]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 July 1997]: On my recent visit to Japan, I was accompanied by my parliamentary private secretary, principal private secretary, special adviser and three DTI officials. The total cost of travel and expenditure in Japan was around £40,000, excluding accommodation, which was provided by the British embassy.

Trade Missions

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what trade missions the Minister for Trade has undertaken since his appointment. [9455]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 July 1997]: The Minister for Trade had undertaken the following overseas visits since his appointment:

16–19 May: USA

25–27 May: OECD Ministerial in Paris

14–19 June: South Africa

21–27 June: Malaysia/Thailand.

Bank of Credit and Commerce International

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what sums have been recovered to date by the liquidators of BCCI; if she will provide a breakdown of the costs and legal fees incurred in the recovery of that sum; and how much of that sum was (a) derived from shareholders' contributions, (b) collected from financial institutions, (c) derived from loans and advances recovered from borrowers and (d) received from the USA. [9894]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Information on recoveries by the UK joint liquidators of BCCI together with details of the sources of those recoveries is given in the joint liquidators' report to the Secretary of State made pursuant to regulation 14 of the Insolvency Regulations 1994 and made up to 15 January 1997. Copies of this report have been placed in the Library of the House and a copy was sent to the hon. Member on 30 May 1997.

Biotechnology and Biological Science Research Council

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the key functions of the Biotechnology and Biological Science Research Council; when the council was established; by what authority; and if she will list the names of the chairman and secretary. [9627]

Mr. Battle: The Science and Technology Act 1965 makes provision for the establishment of research councils. The Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council was incorporated under royal charter on 1 April 1994. The council's mission is set out in the royal charter and is:

to promote and support, by any means, high-quality basic, strategic and applied research and related post-graduate training relating to the understanding and exploitation of biological systems; to advance knowledge and technology, and provide trained scientists and engineers, which meet the needs of users and beneficiaries—including the agriculture, bioprocessing, chemical, food, health care, pharmaceutical and other biotechnological-related industries—thereby contributing to the economic competitiveness of the United Kingdom and the quality of life; to provide advice, disseminate knowledge, and promote public understanding in the fields of biotechnology and the biological sciences.

The chairman of the council is Sir Alistair Grant, chairman of Scottish and Newcastle plc, and the chief executive is Professor Raymond Baker FRS.

Advisory Bodies

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the key functions of the Advisory Committee for the Joint Environmental Markets Unit; when the committee was established; by what authority; and if she will list the names of the chairman and the secretary. [9631]

Mr. Battle: The Advisory Committee for the Joint Environmental Markets Unit, which comprises officials and business representatives, provides guidance to the joint environmental markets unit in fulfilling its role of helping to promote the UK environmental industry, especially with regard to overseas markets.

The committee was established following consultation between officials in Whitehall and first met in March 1994. Its chairman is currently Mr. Bruce Tremayne and the officials of JEMU provide the secretariat.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the key functions of the fuel cells advisory panel; when the panel was established; by what authority; and if she will list the names of the chairman and the secretary. [9639]

Mr. Battle: The key function of the fuel cells advisory panel is to advise my Department on the strategies and plans for the advanced fuel cells programme—a sub-programme within the new and renewable energy programme. The panel was established in 1992 under ministerial authority. The chairman is Mr. Adrian Hyde of the energy technologies directorate, DTI, and the secretary is Mrs. Jackie Tagg of the energy technology support unit.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what are the key functions of the regional industrial development boards; when the boards were established; by what authority; and if she will list the names of the chairmen and the secretaries; [9629]

(2) what are the key functions of the Industrial Development Advisory Board; when the board was established; by what authority; and if she will list the names of the chairman and the secretary. [9636]

Mrs. Roche: The Industrial Development Advisory Board advises the Secretary of State on the exercise of her powers under sections 7 and 8 of the Industrial Development Act 1982, "the 1982 Act". Those sections empower the Secretary of State to provide selective assistance, respectively for industry in the assisted areas and for industry generally. IDAB is appointed under section 10 of the 1982 Act and was previously appointed under section 9 of the Industry Act 1972. The main work of IDAB is to advise on individual applications for regional selective assistance when the grant sought is over £2 million. The smaller English RSA cases are considered by the seven non-statutory English regional industrial development boards.

The Scottish Industrial Development Advisory Board advises the Secretary of State for Scotland on the exercise of his powers under section 7 of the 1982 Act. SIDAB is appointed under section 20 of the Scottish Development Agency Act 1975. The main work of SIDAB is to advise on individual applications for RSA when grant sought is more than £250,000.

The Welsh Industrial Development Advisory Board advises the Secretary of State for Wales on the exercise of his powers under section 7 of the 1982 Act. WIDAB is appointed under section 13 of the Welsh Development Agency Act 1975. The main work of WIDAB is to advise on individual applications for RSA when the grant sought is over £250, 000.

The names of the chairman and members are published in the Industrial Development Act 1982 annual report, which is laid before the House every year. The current chairmen of the boards are as follows:

Name	Board
Sir Anthony Cleaver	Industrial Development Advisory Board
Mr. D. J. MacLeod CBE CA	Scottish Industrial Development Advisory Board
Mr. K Hodge OBE	Welsh Industrial Development Advisory Board
Mr. P. J. Tizzard	South West Industrial Development Board
Mr. D. K. Wilkinson	Yorkshire and Humberside and East Midlands Industrial Development Board
Mr. R. J. Dickens CBE DL	West Midlands Industrial Development Board
Mr. C. J. Fleetwood	North East Industrial Development Board
Mr. E. E. Anstee	Eastern Industrial Development Board
Mr. G. N. Elliott CBE	North West Industrial Development Board
Mr. A. Willett	London and South East Industrial development Board

Officials of the regional assistance directorate of my Department act as the secretariat of IDAB. Officials of the government offices for England, and of the Scottish and Welsh Offices, act as the secretariats for their respective boards.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the key functions of the Welsh Consumer Council; when the council was established; by what authority; and if she will list the names of the chairman and the secretary. [9626]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The Welsh Consumer Council is a self-governing committee of the National Consumer Council, a company limited by guarantee established in 1975 to provide an independent, co-ordinated consumer voice. Establishment followed a 1974 White Paper, the statutory authority for Government funding of the NCC being section 20 of the Competition Act 1980. The WCC aims to further action to promote and safeguard the interests of consumers, to ensure that those who take decisions have a balanced and authoritative view of the interests of consumers before them and to insist that the interests of all consumers, including the inarticulate and disadvantaged, are taken into account. Although the WCC is particularly concerned with issues of relevance to consumers in Wales as part of the NCC, its work is also of UK-wide significance.

The chairman of the WCC is currently Miss Beata Brookes whose appointment term runs to 30 September 1997. Its director is Dr. Nick Pearson.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the key functions of the energy advisory panel; when the panel was established; by what authority; and if she will list the names of the chairman and the secretary. [9633]

Mr. Battle: The energy advisory panel was established in 1993, following a commitment by the then Government in their coal review to publish an annual energy report to provide information relevant to business and investment decisions. The panel was formed to advise on the interpretation of information in the report, and its implications for the way markets might develop in the future: and to advise on commissioning special studies, and offer advice on the exercise of responsibilities such as licensing. The panel has no statutory basis.

The current chairman is Sir Geoffrey Chipperfield; the secretary is Rob Potter, an official in DTI's energy policy and analysis unit.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the key functions of the Renewable Energy Advisory Committee; when the committee was established; by what authority; and if she will list the names of the chairman and the secretary. [9637]

Mr. Battle: The key function of the Renewable Energy Advisory Committee is to advise on the direction and priorities for my Department's new and renewable energy programme, including considerations of environmental appropriateness, economic applicability, and the relative priorities and value for money of those proposed projects within that programme.

The committee was established in 1985 under ministerial authority. The chairman is Mr. Godfrey Bevan, director, energy technologies directorate, DTI, and the secretary is Mrs. Grace Gordon of the energy technology support unit.

Model Trade Association Pamphlet

Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will add an environmental responsibility section to future issues of the model trade association pamphlet. [9827]

Mr. Battle: As currently framed, the model states that trade associations are expected to provide sound advice to their members on environmental issues. I will consider expanding on this guidance when the model is revised.

Working Hours

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 10 July, Official Report, column 593, regarding shorter working hours, if she will take steps to promote the benefit of shorter working hours. [9907]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I shall continue to emphasise the benefits of establishing fair and decent minimum standards at work. We shall implement the EC working time directive without any further unnecessary delay.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the 10 accountancy firms which received the highest amounts of payments from public funds in the last available year. [9863]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Biotechnology

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what relative weight the Minister for Science, Energy and Industry gave to (a) commercial interests, (b) animal welfare and (c) ethical considerations before deciding to write in the terms he did to Members of the European Parliament in respect of the biotechnology patents directive. [9537]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The Commission's proposal for a directive on the legal protection of biotechnological inventions and the report on this proposal by the European Parliament's Legal Affairs Committee are generally consistent with current United Kingdom legislation and practice—the Patents Act 1977—which already balances the needs of industry with ethical considerations, such as animal welfare. In particular, they do not extend or substantially reduce what may be patented, and they set out the same conditions that must be met by an invention if it is to be afforded patent rights. Furthermore, the proposal provides for refusal or revocation of patents relating to transgenic animals if the suffering or handicap to the animal outweighs the benefit pursued. This is the test which is already applied in the United Kingdom.

The Commission's proposal does not seek any change to the nature of the patents system which is currently in operation in the United Kingdom and elsewhere, whereby a patent assists researchers in recouping the costs of their efforts by allowing them to prevent others from using an invention for a limited period, but gives no positive right to use an invention as such. The patent holder must comply with all other legislation and regulations, for instance concerning health, animal welfare and the environment in the making and use of his invention.

British Nuclear Fuels

Helen Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions she has had with BNFL about the transfer of staff to wholly owned subsidiaries of that company. [9213]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The transfer of staff to wholly owned subsidiaries of BNFL is a matter for the company. The Department does maintain regular contact with BNFL on a wide range of issues and the Government are kept fully informed of BNFL's commercial developments.

Helen Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the Government's policy on the creation of new, wholly owned subsidiary companies by BNFL. [9214]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The creation of new, wholly owned subsidiary companies by BNFL is primarily a commercial decision for BNFL. My Department is involved in the approval of BNFL's overall corporate plan and is kept regularly and fully informed on BNFL's commercial developments.

Nuclear Power (Documents)

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 15 July, Official Report, column 140, under what categories of part 2 of the code of practice on access to government information she has decided not to release the 1952 Atomic Energy Board minutes and papers. [9954]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 22 July 1997]: The 1952 Atomic Energy Board minutes and papers are being retained under the provisions of section 3(4) of the Public Records Act 1958. The code of practice on access to government information provides access rights to official information. The code does not provide an access right to documents nor is it intended to override statutory provisions on access to public records. A request for information contained in many of the 1952 Atomic Energy Board minutes and papers would have to be refused under exemption 1 in part 2 of the code.

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 15 July, Official Report, column 140, if she will define the areas of sensitivity in the 1952 Atomic Energy Board minutes and papers. [9955]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 22 July 1997]: Defence and security considerations comprise the areas of sensitivity in the 1952 Atomic Energy Board minutes and papers.

Information Exchanges

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what mechanisms exist for the exchange of information between (a) her Department, (b) United Kingdom Atomic Energy Agency, (c) British Nuclear Fuels, (d) British Energy and (e) the Ministry of Defence. [9915]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 22 July 1997]: No institutionalised links exist for the exchange of information between all these parties, although the Department is in regular contact with UKAEA and BNFL as the sponsor of these organisations, and with the MOD, as necessary, through the normal channels of communication between Government Departments. UKAEA also has a statutory duty to report regularly to the Department, as part of the preparation of its published annual reports and accounts.

British Energy is, of course, a commercial organisation and has the same access to the Department as any other company.

Policy Reviews

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list for each departmental policy review presently in progress or scheduled, (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10189]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 22 July 1997]: The following policy reviews are presently in progress.

The Post Office Review

To examine the options for granting greater commercial freedom to the Post Office to enable it to meet new challenges and opportunities.

It is too early yet to say when the review will be completed.

The Foresight Audit

To establish the level of foresight activity currently under way and to formulate plans for improving co-ordination between Departments.

To report to Ministers by the summer recess.

Export Forum

To review the effectiveness of current official export promotion programmes and to make recommendations for a new export initiative.

To report to Ministers by the autumn.

The Utilities Review

To review the regulation of the utility industries to ensure that they deliver value, quality and choice to the consumers.

To be completed by the end of the year.

There are currently no further policy reviews scheduled.

Hawk Aircraft

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what assessment she has made of the compliance of the sale of Hawk aircraft to Indonesia with the Government's policy of taking account of human rights in respect of the export of arms and equipment; [10268]

(2) what representation she has received in respect of external legal opinions on the cost of revoking licences previously given for the export of Hawk aircraft to Indonesia; and if she will make as statement; [10264]

(3) what evidence she has evaluated on the use of Hawk aircraft in East Timor since 1994; and if she will make a statement; [10262]

(4) if she will place in the Library the legal opinion her Department obtained on the sale of Hawk aircraft to Indonesia and the possible cost of revoking licences previously given. [10260]

Mrs. Roche: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to her today by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett).

Insolvency

Miss Melanie Johnson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many insolvency practitioners are currently licensed by her Department; and what was the number five years ago. [9823]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The Secretary of State currently authorises 133 insolvency practitioners. In 1992, the corresponding figure was 148.

Miss Johnson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many practitioners appointed by the Insolvency Service have been discharged from Insolvency Service work over each of the last 10 years. [9822]

Mr. Griffiths: Practitioners may be appointed by the Secretary of State to act as liquidator in a compulsory liquidation or as trustee in a bankruptcy. In such cases, the practitioner may be removed either by an order of court or by a meeting of creditors summoned specially for that purpose or by the Secretary of State. Records of the number of cases where a practitioner has been removed are not maintained, but there have been few cases in the past 10 years where the Secretary of State has removed a liquidator or trustee.

Miss Johnson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what arrangements she has put in place to monitor the performance of insolvency practitioners appointed by the Insolvency Service; and on what basis their fees are (a) set and (b) regulated. [9821]

Mr. Griffiths: Insolvency practitioners appointed by the Secretary of State are, in common with all authorised insolvency practitioners, subject to a formal programme of monitoring visits by their authorising body. The visits are intended to assess whether a practitioner is fit and proper and to promote compliance with statutory obligations and best practice.

The fees of insolvency practitioners in liquidations and bankruptcies are subject to the approval of the liquidation committee or creditors committee respectively or by the creditors in general meetings. If there is no committee and no resolution of the creditors, the practitioner is entitled to be paid in accordance with the scale corresponding to what would have been paid to the official receiver if he were acting as liquidator or trustee. If either the liquidator or the creditors are dissatisfied with the level at which the remuneration has been fixed, there is provision for an application to be made to the court for the amount to be varied.

Research Councils

Mr. Miller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement about the framework within which the Office of Science and Technology and the research councils operate. [10588]

Mr. Battle: From 1 April this year, the partnership between the Department of Trade and Industry and the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council, the Economic and Social Research Council, the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council, the Natural Environment Research Council, the Medical Research Council and the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council was defined within new combined management statements and financial memoranda which set out clear and comprehensive frameworks of respective responsibilities and accountabilities. These documents combine the provisions of a management statement and a financial memorandum and replace:

the resource management arrangements (RMA) introduced in 1989;

the letters dated 19 May 1994 from the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to the chairman of councils; the existing financial memoranda.

Copies of these documents have been placed in the Library of the House.

The Council for the Central Laboratory of the Research Councils has operated under a combined management statement and financial memorandum since its formation on 1 April 1995. This document is currently under review and the revised version will be published in due course.

Insurance Industry

Mr. Radice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement about the future regulation of the insurance industry. [10589]

Mrs. Beckett: The insurance industry is a key—and highly successful—part of the United Kingdom's financial services sector. In 1995, it earned worldwide premium income of some £92 billion—equivalent to 14.3 per cent. of gross domestic product—and invisible earnings of £5.4 billion.

It has long been an anomaly that, alone among financial services, prudential supervision of the insurance industry, has been carried out by the ministerial Government Department rather than an arm's-length body. The announcement by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer that the Government will be bringing forward legislation to create a new enlarged financial services regulatory body is an opportunity to put this right. I have therefore agreed with my right hon. Friend that, when the new unified regulatory body has been established, it should assume responsibility for the insurance supervisory functions presently carried out by my Department. The Prime Minister has agreed that the Treasury will assume ministerial responsibility for insurance matters and a transfer of functions order will be brought forward as soon as possible.

Procurement Policy

Ms Shipley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement about the respective roles of her Department and Her Majesty's Treasury in procurement policy. [10590]

Mrs. Beckett: At present, the Treasury is responsible for all aspects of public procurement policy. This includes public spending and value for money, both core Treasury functions, as well as EU and World Trade Organisation public procurement policy in which DTI has the major interest because of its responsibilities for completion of the single market and for trade policy. In my view, and that of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the time has come to address this anomaly. He and I have agreed that our Departments should be jointly responsible for the procurement policy team, which is concerned primarily with UK procurement policy and the EC public procurement directives.

The team will report to senior officials and Ministers in DTI on EU and WTO public procurement policy and to Treasury officials and Ministers on other issues. Officials will agree a short memorandum of understanding setting out the respective responsibilities and arrangements for ensuring co-ordination with other units in both Departments. A similar model of joint responsibility with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office already operates successfully in DTI in respect of the Joint Export Promotion Directorate and the Invest in Britain Bureau.

Trade Policies

Dr. Tonge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what new trade policies her Department is developing to promote international development and poverty eradication; and if they will be included in the proposed White Paper on international development; [9000]

(2) what new investment policies her Department is developing to promote international development and poverty eradication; and if they will be included in the proposed White Paper on international development. [9026]

Mrs. Roche: A liberalised trade and investment climate is essential for international development and poverty alleviation and my Department will continue to develop policies that promote open markets. One of our key priorities is to facilitate the integration of developing countries into the multilateral trading system and to encourage these countries to maximise their potential to attract and retain investment. The Government's forthcoming White Paper on international development will set out the detail of policies designed to achieve these objectives.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the businesses visited by each Minister in her Department since their appointment indicating the date of each visit. [7668]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 10 July 1997]: My Ministers have, of course, met a wide range of business people at meetings in the office, on overseas visits, conferences, trade shows, luncheons, dinners, receptions and constituency engagements. In addition, my Ministers and I have visited the following businesses since being appointed.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 24 July 1997

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to share information on immigration matters with other EU states. [9835]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The participation of member states of the European Union in the work on immigration and asylum policy taken forward under the third pillar provides a framework for the sharing of information on immigration matters. The clearing houses, CIREA and CIREFI, have been established for this purpose. The United Kingdom participates fully in these arrangements. Additionally, we exchange information bilaterally with other European Union countries where there is a particular reason to do so.

Minimum Sentences

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to announce his decision as to whether or not to implement the provisions of the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997 relating to minimum sentences for persistent burglars and drug dealers. [10369]

Mr. Michael: An announcement will be made as soon as we have completed our consideration of the relevant provisions of the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997.

Lighter Fuel Products

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will undertake consultations with interested parties with regard to the prohibition of the sale and supply of cigarette lighter fuel products to persons under the age of 16 years. [10222]

Mr. George Howarth: Under the Intoxicating Substances (Supply) Act 1985 it is an offence to supply a substance to a person under 18 knowing or having reasonable cause to believe that the substance is, or its fumes are, likely to be inhaled for the purpose of causing intoxication. We agree with the view of the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs that amendment of this legislation would be unlikely to increase the level of protection of children, although work with the industry continues in order to reduce the extent to which lighter fuel refills can be abused.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to replace compulsory competitive tendering with a duty on police authorities to obtain best value. [10867]

Mr. Michael: The Government are keen to involve the police service in the development of best value, and it will be open to police authorities to bid to be included in the pilot scheme to run best value projects announced today by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Local Government.

As part of our proposals to drive forward best value in the police service, we will encourage all police authorities, whether or not they are selected for pilot status, to co-operate in the development of best value by building on work already under way to promote value for money initiatives.

At the same time, my hon. Friend's proposals to modify the current compulsory competitive tendering regulations and guidance, also announced today, will form the basis of discussions between my officials and representatives of the police service and police authorities.

Huntingdon Life Sciences

Ms Fiona Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken in response to the allegations against Huntingdon Life Sciences broadcast on television on 26 March. [10874]

Mr. George Howarth: We were extremely concerned about the events shown in the Channel 4 programme "Countryside Undercover: It's A Dog's Life", and we know that these concerns are shared by members of the public, and by scientists and animal technicians, the vast majority of whom are responsible and caring towards animals.

The Home Office took prompt and firm action. On the morning after the programme was broadcast, the Home Office asked the police to investigate possible offences under the Protection of Animals Act 1911 and, as a result, two individuals have been charged with such offences. In replying to this question, we cannot therefore comment, at this time, about these two individuals or their actions as this might prejudice the prosecutions.

The chief inspector, who heads the animals (scientific procedures) inspectorate, has also carried out a comprehensive and detailed investigation into the allegations arising from the programme and into the management and control of animal work at the establishment. We understand that in excess of 250 man-hours of time were spent in viewing more than 20 hours of unbroadcast video material, studying journals and company records, visiting the establishment and interviewing staff (both present and ex-employees). A report detailing his findings and recommendations was submitted to the Home Office last week and we commend the chief inspector for the speed and thoroughness of his investigation.

The investigation has shown breaches of two of the standard conditions which apply to all certificates of designation. Shortcomings relating to the care, treatment and handling of animals, and delegation of health checking to new staff of undetermined competence demonstrate that the establishment was not appropriately staffed and that animals were not at all times provided with adequate care.

My right hon. Friend therefore proposes to revoke the certificate of designation for this establishment, subject to the consideration of any representations made under section 12 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. However, if the proposed revocation took immediate effect, we estimate that up to 1,000 dogs; 10 baboons; 200 marmosets; 450 macaques; 13,000 mice; 35,000 rats; 2,000 rabbits; 4,000 guinea pigs; 3,000 birds; 4,000 fish; and smaller numbers of various other species undergoing scientific procedures would have to be destroyed. In addition, any ongoing work might need to be repeated; this would require the use of more laboratory animals. It is therefore proposed that the revocation will take effect on 30 November 1997.

Revocation would shut down the company with the consequent loss of 1,400 jobs. Whilst the failures and omissions at the establishment are extremely serious, this outcome would not necessarily be warranted. An application for a replacement certificate could, therefore, be considered if my right hon. Friend can be assured that measures have been put in place to prevent any recurrence of the events shown in the television programme. Sixteen stringent conditions have been set which must be met before any new application can be considered.

In addition to the two individuals facing prosecution, my right hon. Friend proposes to revoke the personal licence of a third animal technician—again, subject to the right to make representations—and it has been decided that letters of admonition should be sent to two other technicians.

The Home Office, and specifically the animals (scientific procedures) inspectorate, was criticised for having missed alleged mistreatment, for failure to implement the requirements of the "Code of Practice for the Housing and Care of Animals Used in Scientific Procedures", and for having conducted inspections during which no checks were made on the animals being cared for by the undercover investigator.

We are satisfied that any alleged mistreatment of animals would not have taken place in front of inspectors; that there was compliance with the code of practice; and that an appropriate proportion of inspectorate resources was directed at the establishment concerned. On each of the visits of inspection witnessed by the investigator, animals in other parts of the dog unit were checked and the performance of regulated procedures observed. The current inspection policy will, however, be reviewed and we have already announced that we will be considering ways of strengthening the inspectorate.

Whilst no breaches of the "Code of Practice for the Housing and Care of Animals Used in Scientific Procedures" were identified, we are aware of public concern about the conditions in which the dogs were kept. We have, therefore, decided that the inspectorate will audit all commercial dog facilities to identify best practice and innovations with respect to the housing and care of animals, and that this information will be used to inform national standards.

It has also been deduced that the need for a code of conduct for the control of dogs and other species in all establishments should be considered.

The Animal Procedures Committee is keen to consider and promulgate to establishments any other general lessons which can be learned in order to help prevent similar occurrences in the future. We welcome this.

The chief inspector's report contains information which was provided in confidence and which cannot, therefore, be disclosed under section 24 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. It cannot therefore be published in full.

Prison Service

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the resources available to the Prison Service. [10940]

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are his plans for budgetary adjustments within the Prison Service to reflect the forecast rise in the prison population in each of the next three years. [10098]

Mr. Straw: In order to ensure that the Prison Service can accommodate the projected numbers safely, it will be able to spend up to an extra £43 million during this year and next. This will create 290 new places on top of the existing building programme, and provide additional staffing and funding for regime activities to support the placing of an additional 1,830 prisoners in existing accommodation, 630 of whom are already being detained.

I will tomorrow place in the Library a report of the findings of the audit of Prison Service resources which has been carried out in accordance with our manifesto.

Operation Quantum

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what period the contract for Operation Quantum will be awarded. [10091]

Ms Quin: It is anticipated that any contract will be awarded for a period of up to 10 years from completion of implementation.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of posts remaining within the Prison Service at administrative and executive grades after the completion of Operation Quantum. [10096]

Ms Quin: I am not in a position to make an estimate of the number of posts which will remain within the Prison Service at this stage. Final decisions have not yet been made on the scope of the project, nor on whether the services in question should be contracted-out or remain in-house.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which companies have been invited to tender for Operation Quantum. [10089]

Ms Quin: The Prison Service has not yet issued invitations to tender for Quantum. Three suppliers have taken part in a study of the Prison Service's requirements. These are:

PRISM—a special vehicle company comprising Sema Group, Bull, Deloitte & Touche Consulting, Serco, Premier Prison Services Ltd. and CSL.

EDS—with A. T. Kearney, Lockheed Martin and Securicor Custodial Services.

Team Novus—Comprising ICL, Group 4 (Securitas), Perot Systems and Capita.

Geoffrey Thomas

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of the report of the Prison Service inquiry into the death of Geoffrey Thomas; [10094]

(2) if an offer of compensation to Mrs. Marina Davis, the mother of Geoffrey Thomas whose death was the subject of the Prison Service inquiry has been made; and what negotiations regarding the matter are in progress; [10093]

(3) for what reasons the disciplinary proceedings against five members of the staff of Cardiff prison arising out of the use of physical restraints upon Geoffrey Thomas whilst a patient in the University Hospital of Wales at Cardiff have commenced and been adjourned; and on what date the proceedings will re-commence. [10095]

Ms Quin: At present, the Prison Service does not publish investigation reports into the deaths of prisoners. The policy on the disclosure of such reports is currently being reviewed.

The Prison Service has not made an offer of compensation to Mrs. Marina Davis in respect of her son, Geoffrey Thomas, and no approach has been made to the service by her, or her representatives regarding compensation.

Disciplinary proceedings were instituted against five members of staff at Cardiff prison following the death of Geoffrey Thomas. The first hearing took place on 19 May. Three of the cases have been concluded: one case was proven and two were not.

The Prison Governor's Association has questioned the legality of the actions of the governor in the investigation of the cases. The disciplinary proceedings against the other two members of staff were suspended on 22 May, pending the resolution of these legal issues.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Barristers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many barristers were paid (a) £100,000 to £249,999 and (b) £250,000 or over out of public funds in the last available year. [9191]

Mr. Hoon: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Public Record Office

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department for what reasons officials from the Public Record Office are carrying out a review to estimate the cost of opening Government files after (a) 20 and (b) 25 years; what are the terms of reference of this review; when it began; when it is expected to end; and if copies of the report arising out of the review will be made available to the public. [9469]

Mr. Hoon: The work forms part of the preparation of the Government's White Paper on freedom of information, which will be published later in the year.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many and what percentage of civil servants in each of grades 1 to 7, SEO and HEO in his Department are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [9566]

Mr. Hoon: For the Lord Chancellor's Department, including the Court Service and the Public Trust Office, the information, as at 18 July 1997, is set out in the table. Figures and percentages are based upon a 91 per cent. response to a voluntary staff survey of ethnic origin. There is no legislative requirement to monitor the ethnic origin of Northern Ireland Court Service employees and no figures are available. I have asked the chief executives of the Land Registry and the Public Record Office to reply separately.

[1] In order to preserve the anonymity of individuals, figures of five or less are not specified.

Letter from Stuart Hill to Mr. Keith Vaz, dated 24 July 1997:

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, to reply to your recent question concerning the number of staff within two ethnic categories.

Following a Grading and Pay Review the Land Registry has moved to a new system of grades for staff below the Senior Civil Service. The new grades are shown against the Civil Service equivalents.

The information is as follows:

Grade	Civil Service equivalent	Asian origin		Afro-caribbean origin
		Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage
Senior Civil Service	—	1	5.56	0	—
Senior Registration Assistant 1	Grade 6	0	—	0	—
Senior Registration Assistant 2	Grade 2	0	—	0	—
Senior Registration Assistant (Lawyer)	Grade 6 or 7	2	1.83	0	—
Registration Executive 1	SEO	3	1.10	1	0.37
Registration Executive 2	HEO	6	1.20	1	0.20

The percentage figures are expressed as a percentage of staff within each grade who responded to the ethnic survey. The overall response rate is 94.4 per cent. within the Land Registry.

Letter from Sarah Tyacke to Mr. Keith Vaz, dated 24 July 1997:

The Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply for the Public Record Office to your question about the numbers and percentages of civil servants of Asian and of Afro-Caribbean origin.

The details are set out below. Most of our staff are covered by our own payband system and I have given the approximate civil service grade equivalents for guidance.

Grade/Band	Staff of Asian origin	Percentage of total	Staff of Afro-Caribbean origin	Percentage of total

Employment Advertisements

Ms Perham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how often since 1992 his Department has been responsible for employment advertisements which contained age restrictions upon those who could apply. [9501]

Mr. Hoon: This reply is given on behalf of the Court Service, the Land Registry, the Northern Ireland Court Service, the Public Record Office, Lord Chancellor's Department headquarters and its associated offices, and the Public Trust Office.

The Land Registry and the Public Record Office do not include age restrictions in their recruitment advertisements.

An advertisement for a combined recruitment scheme for direct entrant executive officers in the Court Service, Public Trust Office and LCD HQ in 1992 contained age restrictions; but there have been no instances since then when either the Public Trust Office or LCD HQ have included upper or lower age limits in their advertisements.

As regards the Court Service, all advertisements for usher and bailiff posts until July last year specified a lower age limit. As such advertisements were placed locally by the courts concerned, it would not be possible to identify how often they have appeared between 1992 and July 1996 without incurring disproportionate cost.

The Northern Ireland Court Service has included age restrictions in 18 advertisements placed since the beginning of 1992.

In addition, there have been around 25 occasions on which advertisements for judicial appointments have been placed since October 1994, all of which will have included upper and lower age limits.

SCOTLAND

Statistics

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to ensure that those statistics on (a) poverty and (b) other social issues currently available only on a United Kingdom basis are published on a Scottish basis. [6631]

Mr. Wilson: The Scottish Office, the Office for National Statistics and other Government Departments work closely together to publish a wide range of official statistics for Scotland and for the UK. Working across government, the Government statistical service has recently initiated several related development tasks aimed at improving the range, value and accessibility of official statistics. Scottish Office GSS staff are closely involved in that work. They are reviewing what statistical information is published about Scotland and how it is made available, consulting closely with local authorities, the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities and other key customers.

Wherever possible, key statistical information is published at both Scotland and UK level. Where data are based on surveys, however, the sample size may be too small to allow statistically reliable data to be produced. In other cases, strict comparisons between Scotland and the rest of the UK may not be possible, or must be treated with caution, because of differences between the systems, such as in education.

The latest edition of "Regional Trends", published by ONS on Thursday 10 July, gives key social and economic statistics for both Scotland and the UK. Information at UK level on those with low incomes is available in "Households Below Average Income", published annually by the Department of Social Security and the latest edition, for 1993–94 data, included some information for Scotland.

Residential Care

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in each local authority area currently (a) receive residential care allowance and (b) do not receive residential care allowance because they are in local authority homes. [9611]

Mr. Galbraith: (a) The payment of residential care allowances is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security. Figures for each local authority area are not available. Current data published by the Department of Social Security for August 1996 indicate, on the basis of a sample survey, that the estimated number of people in Scotland receiving residential care allowance was 13,000. This figure includes people in residential care homes and nursing homes.

(b) The latest available information is for 31 March 1996 and is set out in the table.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many hospital patients are currently occupying beds in each health board area because of local authorities' inability to provide placements in nursing homes. [9699]

Mr. Galbraith: In March 1997, health boards reported that around 750 patients throughout Scotland were ready for discharge from hospital but were awaiting appropriate accommodation and packages of care in the community, including in nursing homes. There are many reasons why such patients may need to remain in hospital. Information on the number of patients ready for discharge to the community is not collected routinely.

Nursery Places

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to provide additional funding for nursery places in 1998 to match the current year's provision. [9615]

Mr. Wilson: Some £67 million has been set aside for provision of pre-school education in Scotland in 1998–99 compared with £47.3 million in 1997–98. This will enable Government funding of part-time education on the current basis for all children in the pre-school year. Local authorities also use their discretion to spend additional sums on pre-school education, funded from other resources. Since we are constrained by existing funding, I have no plans to make additional finance available at present.

School Bus Drivers

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to arrange for school bus drivers to be (a) trained and (b) given powers to control any misbehaviour by passengers. [9612]

Mr. Wilson: The training of school bus drivers is a matter for the operator and the relevant education authority. The Public Service Vehicle (Conduct of Drivers, Inspectors, Conductors and Passengers) Regulations 1990 enable a bus driver to remove any passenger who puts at risk, or unreasonably impedes, or causes discomfort to, any other passenger or to operating staff and to request a police constable to remove such a person. If the vehicle is operating under contract to an education authority, any additional grounds on which drivers may refuse the right of carriage are a matter for the operator under the terms of the contract. It is for each education authority to decide whether to provide supervisors on buses hired by them. In doing so, they will take into account that education authorities' common law duty of care for pupils is supplemented by a statutory duty under the Schools (Safety and Supervision of Pupils) (Scotland) Regulations 1990 to take reasonable care for the safety of pupils when under their care.

Teachers

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to enhance the role of the General Teaching Council to provide quality control of Scottish teachers during their career. [10168]

Mr. Wilson: I shall give very careful consideration to how any extension of the GTC's current remit would best contribute to our objectives of increasing standards in education and making every teacher an effective teacher. I intend to consult fully on this and to bring forward proposals thereafter.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out the age profile of primary and secondary teachers in Scotland. [10169]

Mr. Wilson: The latest available information is given in the table.

Age profile of teachers in publicly funded primary and secondary schools in Scotland at September 1994

Travel to London

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of journeys each year made by people travelling from Scotland to meet Ministers, civil servants or hon. Members in London. [10170]

Mr. Dewar: I know there is a large volume of such journeys but the Scottish Office does not quantify them.

Infertility Treatment

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) the methods of artificial fertilisation available in Scotland indicating those methods funded by each health board and (b) the number of patients treated by each method (i) broken down by health board and (ii) in total for each of the last five years. [10011]

Mr. Galbraith: Infertility services are divided into three levels. Level 1 services are provided by a general practitioner or general gynaecologist while level 2 services, involving more advanced investigation and treatment, are normally provided by a specialist. Level 3 infertility services are high technology procedures and are available at four centres in Scotland. The range of level 3 treatments provided in Scotland are:

Invitro fertilisation—IVF

Intra-cytoplasmic sperm insemination

Cryopreservation of embryos and replacement cycles

Oocyte donation

Super ovulation with intra-uterine insemination

Donor insemination

Embryo and sperm freezing and storage

Tubal microsurgery and ovulation induction.

Levels 1 and 2 infertility services are provided by all health boards. Individual health boards determine the provision of level 3 infertility services. I understand that all health boards provide level 3 IVF services for patients who meet specific criteria.

Information on other level 3 methods funded by health boards and the number of patients treated by each method under each level is not routinely collected.

Education (Fees and Awards) (Scotland) Regulations

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to revise the Education (Fees and Awards) (Scotland) Regulations. [10870]

Mr. Wilson: I confirm that an amendment to the Education (Fees and Awards) (Scotland) Regulations 1997 will be laid before Parliament to introduce a requirement of being settled in the United Kingdom under the immigration laws. The amendment will add this requirement to the existing residency criteria for establishing a "relevant connection" for the purpose of student fee classifications by institutions and the rules of candidate eligibility for certain awards which may be adopted under the regulations.

Registers of Scotland

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the targets he expects Registers of Scotland to achieve in the three-year period 1997 to 2000. [10871]

Mr. Dewar: I have set Registers of Scotland the following key targets for 1997–2000:

for the trading fund to achieve a return of 6 per cent. on net capital employed over the three-year period ending 31 march 1999 and on a rolling basis thereafter;

to continue the land register's extension programme and achieve the transfer of the counties of Perth, Angus and Kinross on 1 April 1999; Berwick, East Lothian, Roxburgh, Selkirk and Peebles on 1 October 1999; and Argyll and Bute on 1 April 2000;

to maintain and enhance customer service through the retention of charter mark and by improving customer satisfaction on first registration turnround times to 75 per cent. by 31 March 2000;

to reduce progressively the turnround time for sasine writs to 25 days by 31 March 1999 and 23 days by 31 March 2000;

to reduce progressively the turnround time for dealings with whole on the land register to 25 days by 31 March 1999 and to remain at 25 days during 1999–00;

to reduce unit costs by 5 per cent. in real terms for sasine writs by 31 March 2000 from the base of £33.07 at 31 March 1997;

to reduce unit costs by 2.4 per cent. in real terms for dealings with whole by 31 March 2000 from the base of £56.05 at 31 March 1997;

to launch a direct access service to existing pilot customers by 30 April 1997; and to complete the conversion of the existing land register counties to a digitised map and computer-based text system by 31 October 1997.

Land Register (Scotland) Act 1979

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made in extending registration of title under the Land Register (Scotland) Act 1979 to further areas of Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [10872]

Mr. Dewar: The original programme to extend the land register was announced in 1992. At that time, the counties of Renfrew, Dunbarton, Lanark and the barony and regality of Glasgow were already on the land register. Since 1992, the counties of Clackmannan, Stirling, West Lothian, Fife, Aberdeen, Kincardine, Ayr, Dumfries, Kirkcudbright and Wigtown have been made operational. The areas where the land register currently operates over 60 per cent. of total housing stock.

Following the 1994 report of the Committee of Public Accounts, "Registers of Scotland: Service to the Public" Cmd 2739, the keeper of the registers considered whether the programme should be amended. A revised programme was adopted in 1996.

Registers of Scotland is now operating as a trading fund. Because it has been experiencing unexpected difficulties in assimilating its new computer systems, and in order that it can meet its objectives in its first three years of its trading fund status, I have now approved a revised programme for the remaining counties as shown below. The main change is simply that no new counties will be taken into the land register in 1998, but the year 2003 remains the target date for completion of the extension programme.

Ferry Services

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has made a decision for the award of subsidy for the operation of passenger ferry services to Orkney and Shetland; and if he will make a statement. [10873]

Mr. Dewar: I intend to lay before the House as soon as practicable a draft undertaking to secure the continuation of these ferry services. The draft undertaking will propose the payment of a block grant subsidy for the operation of the northern isles passenger ferry services to P and O Scottish Ferries. The duration of this agreement will be from 1997 to 2002. The Government have taken this decision following an evaluation of the bids received in response to an open competitive tendering exercise. I propose to commence a new open tendering exercise next year for the award of a longer–term subsidy agreement commencing in 2002. The Government expect that, by 2002, new vessels will be needed for these services and an early decision will allow sufficient time for the successful operator to build new ships. Prior to initiating a new competition, the Scottish office will, as part of the Government-wide comprehensive spending review, be re-evaluating northern isles services. The future service specification will be based on this review.

The Government have examined the option of allowing a bid from Caledonian MacBrayne for the immediate block contract. It is clear that CalMac does not have vessels in its fleet capable of taking over the northern isles services in the short-term, nor does the current second hand vessel market currently offer suitable tonnage. However, the Government have decided to invite CalMac to consider whether it can identify a basis for entering the open tendering exercise for the new subsidy agreement commencing in 2002 which would be consistent with the overall level of public expenditure affordable for shipping services.

The previous Government initiated the open competitive tendering exercise in June 1995. Three bids were received and, after thorough consideration, the Government now conclude that P and O Scottish Ferries offers the best value for money.

The Government's agreement with P and O Scottish Ferries will safeguard the existing pattern of services for the next five years and includes guarantees for the export of livestock and the carriage of hazardous goods. Under the agreement, P and O Scottish Ferries will be paid a basic annual block grant of £11.018 million subject to clawback arrangements should profits exceed current forecasts.

The profitability of northern isles passenger ferry services has been declining over a number of years due to fierce competition from freight-only operators. This competition has resulted in a sharp fall in tariffs which, whilst good news for businesses and consumers in the northern isles, reduces the income from passenger ferry services which carry a substantial amount of freight.

Passenger ferry operators are also required to adhere to much stricter safety regulations than freight operators. The latest regulations, the Stockholm agreement—introduced following the Estonia tragedy—will require either expensive modifications or the withdrawal of non-compliant vessels by 2002. By that date, P and O Scottish Ferries' three passenger ships will be some 30 years old. Costly upgrades to ships this old are not judged worthwhile. Instead, the Government have agreed to cover the increased depreciation charges required to write down the vessels to a realistic market value by 2002. If any modifications to P and O Scottish Ferries' three passenger ferries are required to meet safety of life at sea—SOLAS—95 regulations in the period before 2002, the Government will fund these by capital grant.

Declining freight profits and the additional cost of depreciation require an addition to subsidy costs compared with previous years, even although P and O Scottish Ferries' bid was lower than any other. The alternative would be to impose significantly increased fares on islanders or visitors, which the Government have rejected. This subsidy agreement represents a substantial financial commitment by the Government to safeguarding the passenger ferry services to Orkney and Shetland and to keeping fares down.

PRIME MINSTER

Digital Communications Systems

Mr. Gale: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to transfer powers between the Department of Trade and Industry and/or the Home Office and/or the Department of Culture, Media and Sport, in respect of the convergence of digital communication systems. [10339]

The Prime Minister: None.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Accounts

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when the accounts for the Duchy of Lancaster will be laid in the Library. [11003]

Dr. David Clark: I am pleased to inform my hon. Friend that the accounts of the Duchy of Lancaster for the year ended 31 March 1997 have been laid in the Libraries of the House today.

Quangos

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to extend the democratic accountability of quangos in England. [11002]

Dr. David Clark: As part of its programme to clean up politics, the Government are determined that all unelected public bodies should be fully answerable for what they do. They should conduct their business so that they are both efficient, effective and economical in providing their expert advice and services to the public and to Government, and accessible, responsive and transparent to the public whom they ultimately serve. The White Papers on Scotland and Wales show that this democratic approach is central to the Government's plans for devolution. Our purpose is the same for public bodies which operate on a United Kingdom or Great Britain basis, those covering England alone and those serving England and Wales.

I propose in the autumn to issue a discussion paper considering how democratic oversight of those bodies might best be enhanced, not least through the full implementation of the recommendations of the Nolan committee. In the light of consultation, I shall bring forward proposals in the forthcoming White Paper on better Government.

Members' Interests

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will ensure that (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department refuse requests from hon. members to (i) arrange and (ii) attend meetings relating to interests held by those Members under categories 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 8 and 9 in the Register of Members' Interests. [8066]

Dr. David Clark [pursuant to his reply 17 July 1997, 332]: The first report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cm 2850) recognised the value of enabling Members to retain interests outside the House, provided these were properly declared, both in the Register of Members' Interests and on other occasions. Subject to these requirements, and to the rules of the House relating to delegations to Ministers, Members are free to seek meetings with Ministers and officials, who will consider such requests alongside the many other approaches from individuals and organisations concerned to press their own interests or those of others.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Employment Advertisements

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how often since 1992 his Department or its predecessor departments have been responsible for employment advertisements which contained age restrictions upon those who could apply. [9511]

Angela Eagle: The recruitment and employment of staff is the responsibility of each individual body—quango—which seek to attract applicants from diverse backgrounds. The Department, for its part, is keen, wherever possible, to encourage equality of opportunity within non-departmental public bodies. The information requested is not held by my Department.

Air Quality (Brent Cross)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the impact on air quality standards of increased traffic flows arising from the proposed extension of Brent Cross shopping centre; and if he will make a statement. [9186]

Angela Eagle: Estimating the impacts of individual new developments on air quality is primarily a local matter, in which the Secretary of State is not involved.

The effects of air pollution are, in appropriate cases, capable of being taken into account by a planning authority as a material consideration in relation to a planning application. The weight to be given to such considerations is for the judgment of the decision maker.

I understand that in this case an environmental appraisal, covering air quality, was carried out by those applying for planning permission. I also understand that the local authority is currently considering the conclusions of that appraisal and monitoring air quality in the area.

Council House Sales

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what are the total capital receipts for each local authority in Hampshire arising from the sale of council houses since 1979; [9316]

(2) how much of the capital receipts from council houses sales since 1979 has been used to avert borrowing; and how much remains in local authority accounts for each local authority in Hampshire, [9401]

Mr. Raynsford: Figures for (a) total capital receipts arising from the sale of council houses and flats between 1980–81 and 1996–97 and (b) housing capital receipts set aside between 1990–91 and 1995–96 are set out for each local authority in Hampshire in the table.

The first column includes all receipts from the sales of council dwellings, including—since 1990–91—those which could be used to finance capital expenditure as well as those which had to be set aside. The distinction between usable and set-aside receipts is not relevant before 1990–91.

Information is not available on the amount of set-aside housing receipts that authorities have used to avert borrowing, nor on the amount remaining in local authority accounts.

Quarterly housing return (PIB), Housing revenue account subsidy claim form.

Note:

No figures are available for receipts from the sale of council houses prior to 1 April 1980. Figures in brackets indicate incomplete data, showing the number of quarters missing during the period. Figures for set-aside receipts in 1996–97 are not yet available.

We are in the process of consulting the Local Government Association and local authorities on the Govnerment's capital receipts initiative. The final decision about the basis on which resources are to be distributed to individual authorities will be made when that consultation process is complete.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much of the capital receipts from council house sales since 1979 has been used to avert borrowing; and how much remains in local authority bank accounts in each local authority in the United Kingdom. [9771]

Mr. Raynsford: A table showing (a) the total capital receipts arising from the sale of council houses and flats between 1979–80 and 1995–96, and (b) housing capital receipts set-aside between 1990–91 and 1995–96 for each English local authority has been placed in the Library of the House. The totals for authorities in England are respectively (a) £24.6 billion, and (b) £5.3 billion.

The first figure includes all receipts from the sales of council dwellings, including—since 1990–91—those which could be used to finance capital expenditure as well as those which had to be set aside. The distinction between usable and set-aside receipts is not relevant before 1990–91.

No figures are available for receipts from the sale of council houses prior to 1 April 1980. Figures for set-aside receipts in 1996–97 are not yet available.

Information is not available on the amount of set-aside housing receipts that authorities have used to avert borrowing, nor on the amount remaining in local authority accounts.

We are in the process of consulting the Local Government Association and local authorities on the Government's capital receipts initiative. The final decision about the basis on which resources are to be distributed to individual authorities will be made when that consultation process is complete.

Information relating to local authorities in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland is respectively the responsibility of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland.

Foyer Schemes

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals his Department has for the development of foyer schemes; and if he will make a statement. [9177]

Mr. Raynsford: Foyer schemes are one of a range of solutions to help homeless and unemployed young people. There are already a large number of such schemes in operation with more in development or being planned. Large sums of public money have already been invested in foyer schemes through, for example, capital and revenue grants payable by the Housing Corporation. Further schemes may qualify for support and for additional resources released under the capital receipts initiative. It will be for prospective foyer developers and individual local authorities to identify local needs and priorities when considering the case for a foyer scheme.

In addition, my Department and the Department for Education and Employment have jointly commissioned research from the Institute for Employment Studies and London Research Centre to look at the number and distribution of foyer and foyer type schemes and their effectiveness in meeting the accommodation and training needs of young people.

La Hague Nuclear Processing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what reports he has received from his French counterpart concerning the basis of the ban on fishing and swimming near the La Hague nuclear reprocessing plant; and what guidance on environmental protection has been sought from his Department by the Channel Islands state's authorities as a result of this announcement; [9944]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 27 June, Official Report, columns 668–69, if he will request the French Government to provide the details of the radiological monitoring study covering the environment of La Hague. [9931]

Angela Eagle: A copy of the monitoring study commissioned by the French Government from the Office de Protection des Rayonnements Ionisants in the vicinity of the La Hague reprocessing plant is being obtained and will be placed in the Library of the House. A small section of beach, approximately 100m long, surrounding a plant discharge pipe, was closed as a precautionary measure while this monitoring was being undertaken and evaluated. My Department has received no request for guidance from the Channel Islands states' authorities concerning these developments.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those councils which have approached his Department since 1 May in relation to the compulsory competitive tendering of local services, indicating those which Ministers have agreed to meet. [9853]

Mr. Raynsford: There have been a very large number of local authority contacts with Ministers and officials in my Department on a range of compulsory competitive tendering issues. These include possible changes to the existing statutory framework for CCT, the development of a best value framework and pilot projects, advice on the technical requirements of existing CCT regulations, requests for exemptions from CCT requirements and casework concerned with anti-competitive behaviour and financial failure.

Ministers in this Department have had no meetings with particular authorities on CCT issues. We have, however, met the Local Government Association on several occasions at which CCT was discussed. My officials have also held meetings with the Local Government Association and have visited a number of local authorities in connection with best value pilot work.

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 2 June, Official Report, columns 49–50, on compulsory competitive tendering, what further progress has been made in replacing CCT with a duty of best value; and if he will make a statement. [10603]

Ms Armstrong: Local authorities responded enthusiastically to our 2 June announcement, which confirmed our intention to replace compulsory competitive tendering with a duty to obtain best value, a duty which will require local authorities to deliver the quality of service that local people expect at a price they are willing to pay.

Many authorities have begun work in line with the best value principles published at that time. I now want to build on this work, setting out the proposed framework for best value in England and encouraging local authorities to work towards it consistent with the current legislation. We are therefore writing to all English local authorities inviting them to come forward with proposals to run pilot best value projects and the Home Office will be writing on a similar basis to police authorities. The letter will include the criteria which will be used to evaluate proposals, including the procedures and timetable, and will set the pilot scheme in the context of the framework of best value that we are developing. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House tomorrow morning. In considering bids, we shall be looking to test a wide range of different approaches and services within the best value framework, and to encompass different types of authorities.

Bids will be invited by 1 October, with decisions announced in December, so that local authorities have the maximum amount of time to develop their ideas ahead of a latest start date of 1 April 1998. In coming to a decision on the pilot projects, I expect to draw on advice from a panel made up of representatives from central Government Departments, the Local Government Association, the Audit Commission, the trade unions and the private sector. I shall be writing to each shortly to invite nominations.

We are also to consult local authorities and other interested parties on proposals to modify the current CCT regulations and guidance. This follows a short review carried out by a working group comprised of representatives from my Department, the Welsh Office and the Local Government Association.

Our proposals are designed to enable authorities to adopt best value practices consistent with the current primary legislation. They provide a real incentive for authorities to take the voluntary route to competitive tendering, and significantly reduce many of the prescriptive elements of CCT that have so frustrated authorities and the private sector alike. Full details of our proposals are contained in a consultation paper which I am placing in the Library tomorrow morning. At the same time we shall be consulting on revised guidance on good tendering practice which will promote fairness and transparency in procurement decisions, and a draft will also be available in the Library tomorrow.

Taken together, these changes will build on the renewed interest of both local authorities and the private sector in the provision of quality cost-effective local services. They will release both public and private sectors from the sterile exchanges that have bedevilled CCT in recent years, and encourage innovation and best value to the benefit of those who use and pay for local services.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many monitoring experiments concerning the release of genetically modified organisms and bacteria the Health and Safety Executive has carried out on discharges from laboratories licensed to undertake activity under the Genetically Modified Organisms (Contained Use) Regulations 1992; and if he will list the dates and places of such monitoring; [10213]

(2) how the need for monitoring concerning the release and survival of genetically modified bacteria has been taken into account in the proposal for certificates of exemption for discharges of certain live GMOs in liquid wastes under the Genetically Modified Organisms (Contained Use) Regulations 1992. [10214]

Angela Eagle: The Genetically Modified Organisms (Contained Use) Regulations 1992 require that effluent from higher risk GMOs be inactivated prior to discharge. Users have to monitor the effectiveness of this inactivation. So far as low risk GMOs are concerned, the regulations require that suitable control measures are used to limit their contact with the general population and the environment. The effectiveness of these control measures has to be tested and monitored by those undertaking the activities.

The Health and Safety Executive has not carried out any monitoring experiments. However, HSE specialist inspectors evaluate and discuss monitoring data with users during inspections.

The proposed exemption certificate would allow direct discharge of those untreated liquid wastes containing GMOs which, on the basis of a thorough risk assessment, were judged not to pose a risk of harm to human health and/or the environment. A key factor in this assessment would be that the GMOs were capable of only limited survival in the environment. The conditions attached to the proposed exemption certificate would require compliance with all other provisions of the contained use regulations, including monitoring.

The Advisory Committee on Genetic Modification will shortly be evaluating the outcome of a recent consultation exercise on the proposed exemption certificate. The HSE will then consider its advice before agreeing with relevant Departments—so far as matters relate to the environment—whether the certificate should be issued.

Allotments

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what criteria he will use in the exercise of his powers under the Allotments Act 1925 in respect of the disposal of allotment land or its use for other purposes. [10291]

Angela Eagle: The Secretary of State's consent, under section 8 of the Allotment Act 1925, for the disposal of statutory allotment land will not be given unless he is satisfied that adequate alternative provision is made for any displaced allotment holders, or that such provision is not necessary.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list his (a) consents and (b) refusals of consent since 2 May under the Allotments Act 1925 for the disposal of allotment land or its use for other purposes. [10317]

Angela Eagle: The Secretary of State has given his consent, under section 8 of the Allotment Act 1925, for disposal of the following statutory allotment sites since 2 May 1997:

7 May: Peel Street, Carlisle

9 May: Wolverhampton Metropolitan Borough Council Training Centre, Wolverhampton

19 May: Firtree Lane, Bristol

19 May: Troopers Hill Bristol

19 May: 32 Nicholas Lane, Bristol

23 May: Burton Road, Overseal, Derbyshire

28 May: Washbrook Allotments, Leicester

3 June: Roundwood Glen, Greengates, Bradford

9 June: Langham Allotments, Rutland

11 June: Bridge Street, Loddon, South Norfolk

24 June: Lee Lane, Langley, Amber Valley, Derbyshire

24 June: Ridgeway Allotments and Manor Hall Allotments, Southwick, West Sussex

25 June: Broadwater Gardens Allotments, Harefield, Middlesex

25 June: The Bartons, Much Marcle, Ledbury, Herefordshire

26 June: Harewood Allotments, Cornfield Road, Thornaby

26 June: Harewood Allotments, Thornaby Road, Thornaby

26 June: Colston Avenue, Carshalton, Surrey

10 July: Cannock Road, Cannock

11 July: Barnsfield Place Allotment, Uxbridge, Middlesex

14 July: Primrose Hill, Stockton-on-Tees

15 July: Dodmire Allotments, Darlington

17 July: Britten Road, Reddith

22 July: Scotchman Road, Bradford.

There have been no refusals of consent under section 8 of the 1925 Act since 2 May.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will establish a review, involving hon. Members, of the future of allotments. [10318]

Angela Eagle: There are no current plans to undertake a review of allotments.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance the Government (a) have given and (b) plan to give local authorities concerning the release of more land for allotments. [10319]

Angela Eagle: Local authorities are required, where they are satisfied that there is sufficient demand, to provide an appropriate number of allotment sites to residents within their areas. There are no plans to provide any more specific guidance to local authorities.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to encourage local authorities and large landowners to release more land for allotments. [10320]

Angela Eagle: The provision of allotment sites is a matter for local authorities, taking into account the demand for sites within their area.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will take steps to limit the periods during which allotment plots can be left vacant. [10343]

Angela Eagle: Management of allotment sites is a matter for the relevant local authority or parish council, taking into account the demand within the area.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what was the total amount of money made available to Wales for the home energy efficiency scheme in each of the last two years; how much will be available in the next year; and if he will make a statement. [10243]

(2) what was the average home insulation grant provided to eligible households in Wales in each of the last two years; and if he will make a statement. [10244]

Angela Eagle: In 1995–96 a total of £5.2 million was spent under the home energy efficiency scheme in Wales on grants with an average individual value of £167. The figures for 1996–97 were £3.4 million and £184. This year, I estimate that £3.8 million will be invested through this scheme in improving the energy efficiency of Welsh homes occupied by the most vulnerable families. The 1998–99 allocation for the scheme, which I intend to review to make sure that it meets the needs of its customers, will be decided after completion of the Government's comprehensive expenditure review.

"Planning and Affordable Housing"

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to revise circular 13/96: "Planning and Affordable Housing". [10866]

Mr. Caborn: Planning Policy Guidance Note 3 "Housing" (PPG3) states that local planning authorities may seek to negotiate an element of affordable housing in respect of new housing developments on a substantial scale. The intention behind this policy was that a site should be large enough to accommodate a range and mix of types of housing. The site thresholds were introduced in circular 13/96 as a way of defining what the Department considered to be a substantial site for the purposes of the policy.

Since the circular was issued, the Department has been hearing from many local authorities and registered social landlords who argue that the threshold has had the effect of restricting the amount of affordable housing they are able to secure via the policy. I have given careful consideration to the views that have been expressed and, although I accept the principle of the use of thresholds, I have come to the conclusion that there is a case for looking again at the levels at which they were set.

I can announce today that my Department has issued for consultation proposed revisions to circular 13/96. In particular, we are proposing to lower the thresholds below which local authorities should not seek an element of affordable housing, and to clarify the way in which financial or other contributions should be secured through planning obligations where the parties consider that such contributions towards the provision of affordable housing on a different site are preferable.

Bus Lanes (Motorcycles)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what his policy is on allowing motorcycles to use bus lanes in inner-city areas; and what consultations he has held with local authorities on pilot projects. [9303]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Nothing in law prevents local traffic authorities from permitting motorcycles to use bus lanes, although the necessary traffic signs require departmental approval. The Government are interested in experimental projects such as those which have been implemented in Bristol and Reading but are aware that they have generated concerns from cyclists on safety grounds. We will study the evidence from such schemes carefully to assess advantages and disadvantages for motor cyclists and other vulnerable road users, as well as their implications for balanced transport planning.

I would expect a local authority wishing to undertake a trial scheme to discuss its proposals with the Department at an early stage, and I would look to the authority to make adequate arrangements for before and after monitoring of the effects.

Seat Belts

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the safety of seat belts designed for car application being fitted to coaches; and what estimate he has made of the prevalence of such practices in the United Kingdom. [10238]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Provided that seat belts are approved to recognised standards and installed correctly, those approved for use on cars may be safely used on other types of vehicle. No information is available on how many coach owners or operators have chosen to fit car seat belts in their vehicles.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessments he has made of the safety aspects of loop-around seat belts not requiring fixed anchorage to seating. [10237]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Loop type seat belts can offer the same level of protection as a seat belt bolted to a fixed anchorage if they are approved to a recognised standard and properly fitted. Such belts should be secured to a part of a seat or the vehicle structure which is strong enough to take a high accident loading, has no sharp edges and positions the belt so that it can be worn properly.

Roads Programme

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the major maintenance scheme to be undertaken on the trunk road and motorway network during the financial year 1997–98, indicating the likely cost, start and completion dates for each scheme. [10130]

Glenda Jackson: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mrs Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 24 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, has asked me to reply to your request to list those major maintenance schemes, to be undertaken on the trunk road and motorway network during the financial year 1997–98, and to give an indication of the likely cost, start and completion dates for each scheme.

I enclose with this letter a list of those major maintenance projects, that is those costing over £1m, which the Highways Agency intends to undertake this financial year.

Derailment (Sidcup)

Mr. Beard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ensure adequate standards of railway inspection, maintenance and investment to take account of the findings of Railtrack's inquiry into the derailment at Sidcup station in February. [10233]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Railtrack plc is responsible for inspecting and maintaining its railway infrastructure. It has prepared and had accepted by the Health and Safety Executive a railway safety case, in accordance with the Railways (Safety Case) Regulations 1994. As part of its commitment to its RSC, Railtrack plc has undertaken to comply with Railway Industry Group standards which include standards for inspection and maintenance. HSE'S railway inspectorate monitors Railtrack plc's compliance with Its accepted RSC and enforces health and safety legislation.

The HSE is aware of Railtrack plc's internal inquiry into the derailment near Bexley station in February. HSE'S own independent technical investigation into the cause of the incident is continuing and its findings will be made public by the HSE in due course.

Dartford River Crossing

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 19 June, Official Report, columns 276–77, if he will publish the sensitivity analyses which were made for each of the alternatives for the third Dartford crossing with regard to variations in the base assumptions for the capital cost of the facility and the whether public sector cost of capital; the overrun in capital costs in (a) actual and (b) percentage terms for each of the alternative options would have eliminated the difference between the privately and publicly financed options for each alternative; and what increase in the public sector cost of capital would have eliminated the difference between the privately and publicly financed options for each alternative. [9764]

Glenda Jackson: In 1986 the assessment of the Dartford bids was essentially concerned with establishing the extent to which they offered value for money on specified assumptions. The economic costs of the various options were established so as to compare the net benefits of publicly financed and privately financed schemes. So far as can be established sensitivity tests of the kind postulated in the question were not carried out.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Communicable Diseases

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the conclusions of the Denver summit in respect of the control of communicable diseases; and if he will make a statement. [9641]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Denver summit agreed to promote more effective co-ordination of international responses to outbreaks of infectious diseases and to develop a global surveillance network working through organisations such as the World Health Organisation. There was also a commitment to accelerate AIDS vaccine research, to enhance international scientific co-operation and collaboration, and to ensure that the United Nations programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) fulfils its mandate.

We welcome the commitment to improve international collaboration on the surveillance, monitoring, and research of communicable diseases. The UK has a strong record in combating communicable diseases, both internationally and at home, and this work will continue in the future.

EU Legations

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the total costs of European Union legations in (a) European Union countries, on a country by country basis, and (b) non-European Union countries for 1996. [10014]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 22 July 1997]: There are no EU delegations. The Commission has representations in EU member states and delegations in third countries.

There is no figure readily available showing the running costs of Commission representations separately from those of the Commission's main offices. But as an indication, running costs for the four Commission representation offices in the UK in 1996 were around £1.3 million.

The budget for the running costs of Commission delegations in 1996 was £152 million.

Defence Sales

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken to increase the transparency and accountability of decisions on defence export licences. [10364]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We are committed to increase transparency and introduce more stringent controls over defence exports, including publishing an annual report on UK strategic exports. We will also press for a European register of arms exports to make information on arms exports available at a European level, and work to strengthen the UN Register of Conventional Arms.

We are considering how best to take forward these commitments.

Committee of the Regions

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times the European Committee of the Regions has met in the last two years; if he will list the attendance record of each of the United Kingdom's representatives on the committee; and if he will make a statement. [9833]

Mr. Doug Henderson: There are usually five plenary sessions of the European Union Committee of the Regions each year.

The United Kingdom has 24 full and 24 alternate members of the CoR. When a full member is unable to attend, an alternate member may do so. The UK is rarely represented by less than 24 full or alternate members.

We do not hold up-to-date attendance records for UK members. However, figures provided by the Local Government International Bureau show that for the 10 plenary sessions held up to September 1996 UK members attended as follows:

Racism and Xenophobia (Monitoring)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he intends to announce a United Kingdom nomination for the board of the European Monitoring Centre on Racism and Xenophobia; and when he estimates the Centre will commence its work. [9923]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We are considering possible candidates and hope to make an announcement as soon as possible. We hope the centre will start work early in 1998.

Human Rights

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out a three-year timetable for fulfilling United Kingdom reporting obligations under United Nations treaties for the protection of human rights, indicating target completion dates for periodic reports and expected dates for public hearings of the relevant committees. [9924]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The timetable for reporting is determined by the treaty itself or by the respective treaty monitoring committee. The UK's next reports are due on the following dates: International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights—ICCPR—June 1999; International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights—ICESCR—June 1999; International Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Racial Discrimination—ICERD—April 1998; Convention Against Torture—CAT—January 1998; Convention on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women—CEDAW——January 1999; Convention on the Rights of the Child— January 1999. We aim to submit these reports as closely as possible to the due dates except in the case of ICERD where it is proposed to hold submission back until April 1999 so that the report can take account of possible developments in this field that are currently under consideration: the secretariat of the committee is being informed.

The relevant monitoring committees have not yet given dates for public examinations of these reports, except for the CEDAW committee which has set January 1999 as the date for the examination of the previous and next reports. The ICESCR committee will examine the UK in November 1997, in respect of its latest report submitted in 1996.

The UK also submits reports in respect of those dependent territories to which particular treaties apply. The due dates are not the same in all cases, but we aim to submit reports under ICERD and CAT together with those of the UK itself. The initial dependent territories' reports under CRC and the latest dependent territories' reports under ICCPR, ICESCR and CEDAW are now overdue but steps are being taken to ensure that these are completed and submitted as soon as possible.

Non-governmental Organisations

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what list he maintains of international and national non-governmental organisation for the purposes of consultation; and which NGOs are included. [9925]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: This Department does not keep a comprehensive list of non-governmental organisations for such a purpose. Each policy department within this Department is, however, aware of and maintains contacts with the non-governmental organisations in its area.

European Parliament

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will describe the oath of allegiance or equivalent declaration taken by UK members of the European Parliament. [10158]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Members of the European Parliament are not required to take an oath of allegiance. Their conduct is in certain respects bound by the European Community 1976 Act concerning the election of the representatives of the European Parliament. On taking up office they are required to sign a declaration that they do not hold an office incompatible with being a Member of the European Parliament, as et out in article 6 of the 1976 Act. They are also required to make a declaration of their financial interests.

Hawk Aircraft (East Timor)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the evidence he has received on the use of Hawk aircraft in East Timor since 1983. [10340]

Mr. Fatchett: We are currently studying all the information available to us in relation to allegations about the use of Hawk in East Timor. No firm conclusions have yet been drawn. Nor have we yet considered whether we could publish the information itself.

Maritime Limits

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what will be the basis for continued United Kingdom jurisdiction over the six and 12 mile maritime limit after 2002. [9640]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

The current restrictions on foreign fishing vessels within our six and 12-mile fisheries limits will continue to apply under Council Regulation 3760/92 until 31 December 2002. The Government are committed to securing their renewal after 2002 under a further regulation. The Prime Minister has received assurances from the President of the Commission that there is unlikely to be any desire to modify present restrictions after 2002.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Offal

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding the cost of removal of offal from abattoirs and knackers' yards; and if he will make a statement. [9597]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I have received representations from across the meat supply/disposal chain, from representatives of producers to those of renderers, about the costs of disposal of animal by-products. These generally supported the continuation of Government financial support to the rendering industry.

I and my agricultural ministerial colleagues have considered the representations put to us very carefully. Having taken into account the impact on the meat industry of withdrawing support, the original purpose of the support and the considerable additional cost of extending it, for which we have no provision in our public expenditure plans, we have concluded that the support should be phased out, as already provided for, by the end of 1997–98 within the existing spending limit of £59 million.

I am today writing to the president of the NFU and to other industry organisations informing them of our conclusions.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make representations to other EU countries to end the payment of export refunds on the export of live cattle from the EU to the middle east and north Africa; and if he will make a statement. [10296]

Mr. Rooker: The Government have no plans to seek an end to the payment of export refunds on live cattle. However, we welcome the fact that the ratio between refunds for live bovines and those for carcase meat has been moving towards favouring meat exports.

In the longer term, GATT Uruguay round commitments setting progressively decreasing limits on the volume and value of export subsidies are likely to bring further pressure to bear on refund levels. We also wholeheartedly support the current Commission proposal to link the payment of export refunds to the observance of animal welfare conditions.

Sheep and Goats Order

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the penalties applicable for contravening the Sheep and Goats (Recording Identification and Movement) Order 1996, indicating the number of farmers who have been prosecuted for failing to adhere to the order. [10348]

Mr. Rooker: The penalty for contravening the Sheep and Goats (Records, Identification and Movement) Order 1996, is a fine not exceeding £5,000, or, if the offence is committed with respect to more than 10 animals, a fine not exceeding £1,000 for each animal.

No prosecutions have been made under the order.

Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the commercial and non-commercial interests of the members of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee. [10809]

Mr. Rooker: Members of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee are not required to declare their commercial and non-commercial interests as this is a scientific advisory committee with no trading or financial objectives. However, in the interests of open government, the members of SEAC have been asked for this information and the interests declared are listed in the following table.

Policy Reviews

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for each departmental policy review presently in progress or scheduled, (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10188]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 22 July 1997]: The following reviews have been announced by the Department.

A review of the case for inoculation as a substitute for rabies quarantine has been announced. It is not yet clear when this will be completed.

A review of the Milk Development Council has been announced. It is expected to be completed later this year.

An urgent review of the arrangements for enforcing the rules on the welfare of animals exported live to the continent has been announced. The intention is to introduce as soon as practicable changes which are shown to be necessary .

A review of salmon and freshwater fisheries policy and legislation has been announced. It is expected to be completed within 18 months.

A comprehensive spending review has been announced. It is expected to be completed by March 1997.

Cattle Traceability System

Mr. Hill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals the Government have for a computerised cattle traceability system; and if he will make a statement. [9119]

Mr. Rooker: We intend to introduce such a system as soon as we can. Work is now under way, including discussions on detailed points of implementation with the livestock industry.

TREASURY

Investors Compensation Scheme

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the administration of the investors compensation scheme with particular reference to the financial services firm Knight Williams and Co.; and if he will make a statement. [9698]

Mrs. Liddell: Oversight of the investors compensation scheme is the responsibility of the Securities and Investments Board.

Windfall Tax

Mr Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on pension funds of (a) changes to advance corporation tax in the Budget and (b) the introduction of the windfall tax; and if he will make a statement. [7647]

Dawn Primarolo: Changes to the corporation tax system announced in the Budget will encourage long-term investment. The windfall tax funds the new deal for young and long-term unemployed, for lone parents and for schools. This is a significant investment in human capital. Pension funds should benefit over the long-term from the improved company performance resulting from the strong and stable economy which this Budget promotes.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received from (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public concerning his windfall tax proposals. [9887]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: Some 30 hon. Members have written attaching constituents' letters. Some 130 letters have been sent direct by members of the public. The vast majority were in favour of the Government's proposals to introduce a windfall tax on the excess profits of the privatised utilities.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, under his proposals in the Finance Bill, any liability to windfall tax can arise (a) in respect of the profits earned by privately owned statutory water companies, and (b) where such companies have been taken over by privatised companies, in respect of any part of the profits attributable to that part of the business which was previously in private ownership. [10146]

Mr. Robinson [holding answer 22 July 1997]: The windfall tax applies only to companies previously within the public sector which were privatised by flotation and are subject to economic regulation by statute; that definition excludes water companies which have always been in the private sector. The tax is charged on the difference between the value of the floated company, calculated by reference to profits made in the initial period after flotation, and the value placed on the company at the time of flotation. Where the floated company has produced group accounts, these are used to produce the relevant profit figure.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information his Department collates on privatisation exceeding £50 million in other countries of the European Union; what were the premiums on the issue price five years after privatisation; and what windfall taxes were imposed. [10007]

Mr. Robinson: No such information is collated.

Stability Pact

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the United Kingdom has official agreed to join the stability pact set out at Amsterdam in the presidency conclusions; at what point the United Kingdom will be bound by its provisions; and if he will make a statement. [10209]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 22 July 1997]: The stability and growth pact comprises two regulations and a resolution of the European Council. The first regulation, on the surveillance procedures, comes into force on 1 July 1998; and the second, on the excessive deficits procedures, comes into force on 1 Janaury 1999, in accordance with the timetable for the single currency. The pact creates no new legal obligations on the conduct of the Government's economic policy in view of the opt-out. Sanctions under the excessive deficits procedure cannot apply to the United Kingdom if we do not join the single currency.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Caton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the gross domestic products of (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Northern Ireland and (d) Wales as a percentage of the United Kingdom gross domestic product in each year from 1979 to 1995. [9984]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 22 July 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Martin Caton, dated 24 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply to your recent question on estimates of Gross Domestic Product for the territories of the United Kingdom for each year from 1979 to 1995.

Estimates of GDP for Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the Standard Statistical Regions of England for the years 1985 to 1995 were published in the article "Regional Accounts 1995 part 1" starting on page 15 of the January/February 1997 edition of Economic Trends, which is available in the House of Commons Library. Data for the whole period 1979 to 1995 are available on the Regional Accounts Database, which can be accessed by the Library.

National Savings

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what performance targets have been set for National Savings for 1997–98. [10808]

Mrs Liddell: National Savings has as its declared objectives: to manage the retail component of the national debt portfolio so as to minimise the combined cost and risk of the total stock of debt and to meet funding needs cost-effectively; to promote Government savings policies in so far as is consistent with the above, and where it is not consistent to make any subsidy visible to Ministers; and to compete in the retail savings sector in a commercial manner without distorting the market. During 1997–98 National Savings will be set the following challenging targets:

(i) To work within the terms of the Funding Remit' for 1997–98;

(ii) To manage National Savings so as to deliver its aims within the resources allocated by Parliament;

(iii) To develop agreed measures with the Treasury for tracking value creation by 31 December 1997;

(iv) To introduce improved systems and investigate past problems to meet the recommendations in the National Audit Office report on Financial Accounting (HC 9 96/97) by 31 December 1997;

(v) To improve efficiency by 3 per cent. in 1997–98;

(vi) To reorganise the Agency with the aim of segmenting purchasing and internal service provision and to develop value for money options for public/private sector partnerships in service delivery;

(vii) To achieve a 97 per cent. outturn against all National Savings published timeliness targets;

(viii) To achieve an overall accuracy level of 97 per cent. on those transaction processes that most affect customers (purchases and repayments);

(ix) To show 95 per cent. of customers surveyed are satisfied or very satisfied with the service received from National Savings;

(x) To maintain the Investors in People accreditation covering at least 95 per cent. of National Savings' workforce.

' The funding remit sets out the costs and volume assumption that National SAvings works to. It was published in the Debt Management Report issued in March 1997.

Comprehensive Spending Review

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make available the terms of reference for the separate departmental spending reviews making up the comprehensive spending review announced by the Chief Secretary on 11 June. [10807]

Mr. Darling: The terms of reference of the departmental and cross-departmental reviews have been placed in the Library today.

The comprehensive spending review aims to allow the Government to bring public spending programmes into line with its priorities and objectives. It will be truly comprehensive, embracing all items of public expenditure. It will also be focused on the long term, looking at the shape of public spending to the end of the century and beyond.

Ministers have agreed that they will examine each and every item in his or her Department to consider whether it meets the public interest, whether it contributes to the achievement of the Government's objectives, whether it is the most effective way of achieving those objectives, and whether there is scope for improving efficiency and effectiveness. This will include a thorough look at whether the best use is being made of public assets, with a view to disposing of those which are surplus and which could be used more productively elsewhere and making more use of public-private partnerships.

The review will be thorough. As well as looking at Departments' spending it will also address issues that stretch across departmental boundaries. There will be several self-standing cross departmental reviews, including reviews of the criminal justice system, the local government finance system, the countryside and rural policy and housing. In addition, each Department will examine jointly with other Departments those areas where important issues cut across departmental boundaries, such as aid and trade provision, science and simplifying government.

This will be a far-reaching look at what the Government spends people's money on. It will ensure that public spending promotes opportunity and employment, investment and fairness. Its conclusions will be the basis for spending plans for the future that reflect our priorities and meet the country's needs.

Investment Income

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the total revenue yield in a full year of the imposition of a tax at the rate of 20 per cent. on the investment income, other than dividends received from United Kingdom resident companies, of pension funds and life assurance companies. [8751]

Dawn Primarolo: Using calculations based on my right hon. Friend's assumption an estimate of the full year yield for 1997–98 from a tax at 20 per cent. on the investment income, other than dividends paid by UK companies, of the funds of occupational pension schemes and the pension funds invested by life insurance companies is about £4½ billion. This estimate does not take account of any behavioural effects which might result from such a change. The investment income arising from the UK non-pensions business of life insurance companies is already subject to tax.

Local Government Finance, Scotland

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 2 July, Official Report, columns 179–80, if he will list the information requested taking account of the changes in the composition of the Scottish block and the price bases to deflate the figures to 1996–97 prices; if he will list the total expenditure over the period at 1996–97 prices; and what this expenditure would have been had no changes been made to the formula. [7805]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 14 July 1997]: Table 1.3 of the "Scottish Departmental Report" (Cm 3614) details the Scottish block in cash terms. The relevant figures at 1996–97 prices for the period 1991–92 to 1997–98 are shown in the table:

	£ million
1991–92 Outturn	13,086
1992–93 Outturn	13,546
1993–94 Outturn	13,970
1994–95 Outturn	14,317
1995–96 Outturn	14,117
1996–97 Forecast	14,015
1997–98 Plans	13,322

Most of the reduction in the final year of this series is accounted for by water debt commutation and by the proposed sales of the student loans book and the Scottish Homes loan book.

Tables 1.2 and 1.3 of "Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses" gives the total expenditure within the control total, by Department form years 1991–92 by Department in cash and real terms (1995–96) respectively. Tables 5.2 and 5.3 detail central Government expenditure within the control total by Department for the period from 1978–79 in cash and real-terms (1995–96 prices) respectively.

Additional information is not held in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Personal Pensions

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people in Bolton, West who have been mis-sold personal pensions; and how many of these have received compensation. [9687]

Mrs. Liddell: No such estimates have been made.

Banks (Public Funds)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the 10 banks receiving the highest amounts of payment from public funds in the last available year. [9870]

Mrs. Liddell: That information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

British Nuclear Fuels (Pension Scheme)

Helen Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will allow BNFL employees who transfer to wholly owned subsidiaries of that company to remain in the Principle non-industrial superannuation scheme. [9215]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 21 July 1997]: No. Primary legislation would be required to allow employees of wholly-owned subsidiaries of BNFL to remain in the PNISS pension scheme. There are currently no plans for such legislation. BNFL has set up and operates its own group pension scheme which closely mirrors the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority's principal non-industrial superannuation scheme.

Spring 1998 Budget

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to publish a consultative paper in relation to his spring 1998 Budget; and if he will make a statement. [9486]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 21 July 1997]: I will publish a consultative economic paper, which will include an economic forecast, some months in advance of the spring Budget. No decision has been taken yet on the exact timing.

Public Sector Pay

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the effects of the change in the GDP deflator forecasts announced in his Budget on the level of public sector pay increases for 1998–99 and 1999–2000. [9481]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 21 July 1997]: All Departments are reallocating spending within their departmental ceilings as part of the comprehensive spending review.

The Government's approach to public sector pay is that pay increases must be affordable within agreed spending plans.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Land Mines

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the countries to which Her Majesty's Government are providing assistance on the detection of anti-personnel mines. [9187]

Clare Short: We are directly supporting demining activities in Afghanistan, Bosnia, Cambodia, Northern Iraq, Laos and Mozambique.

Additionally, the UK contributes to demining activities funded through the European Commission, the United Nations and the Organisation of American States.

United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what procedures exist for ensuring value for money in commercial contracts between the UNHCR and suppliers. [9414]

Clare Short: The UNHCR follows a set of procurement procedures to ensure value for money. Competitive bidding is employed to ensure public accountability, including checks and audits by internal and external bodies.

Reproductive Health Initiative

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will publish the terms of the agreement signed on 30 January by the European Commission and the UN Population Fund to launch a reproductive health initiative in Asia. [9839]

Clare Short: A copy of the agreement has been placed in the Library.

Asia Initiative

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is the size of the total allocation for the Asia initiative; and for how many years the programme runs. [9872]

Clare Short: The EC allocation for the Asia initiative for reproductive health is 25 million ecu—approximately £17 million. A further 5 million ecu is expected to be contributed by beneficiary organisations and through contributions in kind by the United Nations Population Fund, the implementing agency. The programme will run for four years, including one year for inception.

Employment Advertisements

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how often since 1992 her Department or the former Overseas Development Administration has been responsible for employment advertisements which contained age restrictions upon those who could apply. [9504]

Clare Short: An exact analysis of employment advertisements is not available except at disproportionate cost. The Department's policy is to recruit on merit and more than a quarter of professionals recruited since 1992 have been 50 or more years of age.

EU Aid Funds

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make representations to the European Union against the use of EU aid funds for projects which put the interests of tourism before those of indigenous people in the areas concerned. [9918]

Clare Short [holding answer 23 July 1997]: My Department recognises that many indigenous groups suffer grave disadvantage in access to services, economic opportunities and in having their voices heard. We are committed to development which ensures that all local people are fully involved. At the June Development Council, it was agreed that the Commission should develop a policy paper on co-operation with and support for indigenous people. We look forward to helping to take this work forward.

Kalahari Bushmen

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what reports her Department has received about plans by the Botswanan authorities to move Kalahari bushmen out of the central Kalahari game reserve; and if she will make a statement. [9919]

Clare Short [holding answer 23 July 1997]: My Department is aware of and concerned about the resettlement programme for bushmen living in the central Kalahari game reserve. We have offered to finance a conference in Botswana to discuss these issues with all parties including the bushmen, and to help develop solutions. We would welcome any suggestions the hon. Member might wish to put forward.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many and what percentage of employees in her private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [9574]

Clare Short: In my private office, one member of staff is of Asian origin—representing 10 per cent.—the staff and one is of Afro-Caribbean origin—10 per cent.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Millennium

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what grants (a) have been made and (b) are planned to be made in each year to 2001 by the Millennium Commission to (i) Millennium Central, (ii) Birmingham Millennium and (iii) other Millennium celebrations. [6061]

Mr. Chris Smith: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to my hon. Friend in my capacity as chairman of the Commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the special advisers in his Department, the Minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise, and the number of advisers in his Department in the year up to 1 May. [5357]

Mr. Chris Smith: There are two special advisers in my Department, John Newbigin and Julian Eccles, who advise me across the full range of the Department's responsibilities.

There were two special advisers employed by the previous administration in the year to May 1997, one from 25 March to 10 October 1996, and the other from 2 October 1996 to 6 April 1997.

Millennium Commission

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what is the overall budget of the Millennium Commission; if he will list the projects which have been earmarked for funding; and how much has been granted to each project; [6124]

(2) what percentage of awards from the Millennium Commission has been earmarked for projects in each of Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and England; and what percentage has been specifically earmarked for projects in London; [6125]

(3) if he will make a statement outlining the basis upon which the merit of an application for funding from the Millennium Commission is defined. [6126]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 3 July 1997]: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to the hon. Member in my capacity as chairman of the Commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Policy Reviews

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list for each departmental policy review presently in progress or scheduled, (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10185]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 22 July 1997]: In common with all other Departments, the Department for Culture, Media and Sport is undertaking a comprehensive spending review which will look across the whole Department at its aims, objectives and spending priorities. That review is expected to be complete by spring 1998.

The Department is conducting a separate review of film policy, which will explore how to maximise the cultural and economic contribution of the British film industry and is expected to report in February. A review of the national lottery instigated in May has led to the publication, on 21 July, of "The People's Lottery" White Paper. That says that the Director-General of Oflot will be asked to review existing licence application procedures in the light of responses to the White Paper.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service Counsel

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General if he will estimate the financial impact of using salaried counsel employed by the Crown Prosecution Service to represent all its cases in higher courts. [9860]

The Attorney-General: No such estimate is available. The Lord Chancellor and the designated judges have still to take a decision on rights of audience for employed barristers.

Disability Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Attorney-General what discussions he has had with the president of the independent tribunal service concerning the propriety of doctors who carry out medical examinations of disability living allowance claimants for the Benefits Agency being appointed as members of disability appeal tribunals.[10219]

The Attorney-General: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

DEFENCE

Fixed Telecommunications System

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the defence fixed telecommunications system. [10868]

Mr. Spellar: The previous Government announced on 6 November 1996, Official Report, column 521 that they intended to commence contract negotiations for the defence fixed telecommunications system with the preferred bidder, the INCA consortium led by British Telecommunications plc.

Contractual negotiations have now been successfully completed and a 10-year contract, based on the principles of the private finance initiative, has been awarded to the consortium. Under the contract, which will be signed tomorrow, ownership of and responsibility for the operation and maintenance of most of the defence fixed telecommunications assets in Great Britain will pass to the private sector. This arrangement will enable the MOD to continue to reach the required levels of performance while benefiting from access to continually evolving technology.

The contract is worth more than £800 million, which makes it the largest MOD PFI deal so far. Savings to the MOD are estimated to be more than £100 million over the 10-year period of the contract.

The contractor will perform the work currently undertaken by about 1,200 civilian and service personnel. Where appropriate, the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 will apply. Where TUPE does not apply, the MOD will be taking all possible steps to minimise the effect on civilian staff in posts that lapse. Regrettably, the need for some compulsory redundancies among civilian staff cannot be ruled out. Military personnel occupying affected posts will be redeployed to other service duties.

Married Quarters

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 27 June, Official Report, column 662, if he is in a position to provide information on the fees paid to National Westminster Markets Ltd. for preparing and completing the asset sale of the Ministry of Defence married quarters estate to Annington Homes. [10936]

Mr. Spellar: Fees paid to the National Westminster Markets Ltd. totalled £4,614,000 excluding VAT. This was a combination of monthly fixed-rate time-based fees and a commission of 0.1 per cent. of the sale price achieved for the MOD in excess of £520 million.

Prisoners of War (Pay Deductions)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decision he has made following the review of deductions made from the pay of officer prisoners of war and protected personnel in German and Italian hands during the second world war; and if he will make a statement. [10869]

Mr. Spellar: My Department has conducted an extensive review of the issue of pay deductions from officer prisoners of war and protected personnel in German and Italian hands during the second world war and the subsequent arrangements for repayment. Overall, the review found no evidence of lack of care, of significant injustice or of grave financial disadvantage. The long and detailed report accepts that there were real difficulties but these were recognised at the time and reasonable steps were taken to minimise them. Accordingly, there is no basis for reopening the issue. I have placed a copy of the full report in the Library of the House.

I am writing to those individual right hon. and hon. Members who have a constituency interest. Former officer prisoners of war and protected personnel covered by the review and their families who have written direct to my Department will also be contacted to let them know the result of the review. I know and very much regret that the people who have had their hopes raised will be very disappointed. I must conclude that the contemporary evidence does not support the claims that have been made.

Copies of my foreword to the report are also being placed in the Vote Office.

Battle Tanks

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the Army's future requirement for a main battle tank and the number to be ordered. [7824]

Dr. Reid: On current plans, the Army's requirement for a main battle tank is to be met by procurement of 386 Challenger 2 tanks, which have already been ordered.

As I made clear in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Conwy (Mrs. Williams) on 10 July, Official Report, column 531, during the strategic defence review there will be no moratorium on defence procurement, and projects where contracts have already been placed will continue. Decisions on major equipment programmes not yet under contract will be considered on their individual circumstances in relation to progress with the review.

Equipment Approvals Committee

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the equipment approvals committee will hold its next meeting. [9169]

Mr. Spellar: This information continues to be withheld under exemption 7 of the code of practice on access to Government information.

Submarines

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the terms of reference of the defence review include consideration of additional conventional roles for Vanguard class nuclear-powered submarines. [9407]

Dr. Reid: The strategic defence review will examine all aspects of our deterrence requirements to ensure that they fully reflect changing strategic circumstances. However, the Government have no plans to use our strategic deterrent platform in a conventional role.

Volunteers

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many volunteers aged under 18 years participated in the Gulf war. [9810]

Dr. Reid: Fully validated information on the number of British troops who served during the Gulf war, broken down into categories such as reservists and Territorial Army volunteers aged under 18 years, is not currently available. However, work is continuing to improve the quality of these data so that my Department can, in future, provide definitive answers to questions of this type.

RAF Laabruch and Bruggen

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the running costs for (a) RAF Laabruch and (b) RAF Bruggen (i) in total and (ii) excluding salaries in the last year for which figures are available. [10277]

Dr. Reid: The estimated running costs for RAF Laabruch and RAF Bruggen for the financial year 1996–97 are £78.4 million and £90.3 million respectively in total and £20.8 million and £20.4 million respectively excluding salaries.

National Service Medal

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will introduce a medal for all those who completed national service. [10358]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. member to the reply I gave on 5 June to my hon. Friend the Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms Walley), Official Report, column 222.

Starstreak Missile System

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will expedite the acquisition of the laser-guided Starstreak missile system as an integral element in the Apache helicopter programme; and if he will resist US attempts to delay its acquisition until the infra-red Stinger missile system is modified and tested in an air-to-air role. [9012]

Mr. Spellar: The MOD is currently engaged with the US in a co-operative assessment of the Starstreak missile system in the air-to-air role. Following completion of these trials next year, the Department will assess carefully all the options for meeting the attack helicopter air-to-air requirement and decide the way forward for the UK.

Armed Forces Medical Service

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to consider the establishment of a single armed forces medical service. [9416]

Dr. Reid: Provision of medical support to the armed forces will form part of the strategic defence review. There are no current plans to establish a single armed forces medical service, but any changes that arise from the review will be announced when the review is complete.

European Fighter Aircraft

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary for Defence what estimate he has made of the number of jobs in the United Kingdom (a) directly and (b) indirectly dependent on the European fighter aircraft project, broken down by (i) parliamentary constituency and (ii) region. [9686]

Mr. Spellar: Statistics for defence industry–related employment are collated on a regional basis and figures for parliamentary constituencies are not readily available. Current estimates indicate that there are about 6,000 high technology jobs in the UK directly dependent on the Eurofighter programme, primarily in the north-west and south-west of England, but involving approximately 100 companies in many parts of the UK. At peak production, this figure is estimated to rise to 14,000. Figures for the number of jobs indirectly dependent on the programme are currently unavailable.

Defence Sales

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what dates, and with respect to which countries, his predecessors or their representatives have signed agreements or memorandums of understanding with foreign Governments since 1984 relating to sales of defence and defence-related equipment in which repayment was to be made in supplies of oil or gas. [10075]

Mr. Spellar: I am withholding this information in accordance with exemptions 1 and 13 of the code of practice on access to Government information.

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's policy is on the timely payment of debt; and what its record has been on debt payment in the current financial year. [9322]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 July 1997]: This is largely a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Bills Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member. The other executive agencies that have responsibilities for payment of bills are also required to comply with departmental policy to pay bills promptly within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of the goods or service or a valid invoice, whichever is the later, where no such terms exists. Information on payment performance for these agencies for the current financial year could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Mr. I. S. Elrick to Mrs. Theresa May, dated 24 July 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about Departmental debt payment as this matter falls, in the main, within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Bills Agency.

Departmental policy is to pay bills promptly within agreed contract terms, or 30 days from receipt of the goods or service or a valid invoice, whichever is later, where no such terms exist. Latest figures available for the current financial year show that during the period 1 April to 31 May 1997 the Defence Bills Agency paid 99.1% of bills within 11 days of their acceptance and 100% within 30 days. The Government will publish a league table of departmental payment performance for 1996–97 in the Autumn.

Organisation of Joint Armaments Co-operation

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent organisation of join armaments co-operation projects are included in the defence review; and if he will make a statement. [10207]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 22 July 1997]: The organisation of joint armaments co-operation, more usually known as the Organisme Conjointe de Cooperation en matiere d'armament—(OCCAR)—is in its formative stages. At present, no collaborative projects involving UK participation are managed by the OCCAR.

The prospective projects involving the UK currently identified for inclusion in the OCCAR framework—the counter battery radar programmes, COBRA; multi-role armoured vehicle, MRAV and the tri-national military satellite communications programme, TRIMILSAT—will be considered according to their individual circumstances and in relation to progress with the strategic defence review.

Reserve Forces

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current strength of the reserve forces, by type. [9418]

Mr. Spellar [pursuant to his reply, 21 July 1997, c. 401]: I regret there was an error in the figures for the naval services. The correct figures are as follows:

Strength of the reserves and auxiliary forces 1 April 1997

	Number
Naval Services
Regular reserves	23,100
Volunteer reserves and auxiliary forces	3,500
Army
Regular reserves	190,100
Territorial Army	57,600
Royal Air Force
Regular reserves	45,300
Volunteer reserves and auxiliary forces	1,400

HEALTH

Medicines (Information)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to maximise public access to information on medicines. [9930]

Ms Jowell: We have asked the Medicines Control Agency to examine current policies on access to information about medicines. We will consider, in due course, what further action may be necessary to maximise such access whilst safeguarding legitimate confidential interests. We shall do so, taking account of the forthcoming White Paper on freedom of information and in the context of European Community licensing and control procedures.

Legal Costs

Sir Peter Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost of legal advice, damages and out of court settlements met by the NHS in defending or resolving claims made by former patients and their families in the most recent year for which figures are available. [9623]

Mr. Milburn: Information in the form requested is not kept centrally. Payments made in respect of compensation under legal obligation and clinical negligence/personal injury cases settled out of court in England in 1995–96 are shown in the table.

	£000
Compensation under legal obligation	48,730
Clinical negligence with qualified legal advice	110,672
Personal injury with qualified legal advice	12,925
Other clinical negligence and personal injury without qualified legal advice	1,033
Total	173,360

Waste and Bureaucracy

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the adequacy of his powers to tackle waste and bureaucracy within the national health service. [9904]

Mr. Milburn: Ministers are able, through the national health service executive, to introduce measures to tackle waste and bureaucracy in the NHS and we have already done so. On 22 May we announced a package of measures including a £100 million reduction in NHS management costs in 1997–98.

The Audit Commission also has an important role in promoting efficiency in the NHS.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the various appeals related to the recent PFI hospitals announcement will be heard; and when the decisions will be announced. [9784]

Mr. Milburn: Representations are currently being considered. I will write to the parties concerned informing them of our decision very shortly.

Inequalities in Health

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the need for further research on occupationally-based inequalities in health. [10175]

Ms Jowell: Research on socio-economic differences in health are usually based on data derived by occupational classifications.

We have asked Sir Donald Acheson to carry out a review of inequalities in health, which will include occupationally based inequalities in health. In the light of that review the Department will assess the need for further research in this area.

The Economic and Social Research Council has recently assessed the need for research on socio-economic inequalities in health. It is currently commissioning a £4 million programme of research. The Department is currently commissioning research which will evaluate steps that the national health service has taken to reduce inequalities in health, including socio-economic inequalities.

Health Service Funding

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health authorities and NHS trusts were in deficit at the end of the financial year in each of the past 10 years. [10074]

Mr. Milburn: The numbers of trusts and health authorities in deficit at the end of each year since 1988–89 were as follows:

Year	Trusts	Health authorities	Family health services authorities
1988–89	—	114(212)	—
1989–90	—	177(212)	[1]75(90)
1990–91	—	104(211)	[1]84(90)
1991–92	2(57)	53(206)	30(90)
1992–93	25(126)	89(199)	83(90)
1993–94	23(292)	67(167)	71(90)
1994–95	36(419)	65(121)	70(90)
1995–96	94(433)	92(115)	67(90)
1996–97	128(429)	59(100)	—

[1] The figures for 1989–90 and 1990–91 refer to Family Practitioner Committees.
1. The figures in brackets identify the total number of trusts/authorities in the relevant year.
2. Information is from the published accounts except for 1996–97 where the figures are from the Quarter 4 monitoring information.
3. Trusts were first established in 1991 and there are therefore no figures for earlier years.
4. Health authority figures for the period 1988–89 to 1995–96 include District, Regional and Special Health Authorities of the London postgraduate teaching hospitals.
5. The 1996–97 Health Authority figures are for merged health authorities (previously separate District Health Authorities and Family Health Service Authorities).
6. HA Accounts before 1991–92 are not comparable due to organisational changes.
7. Figures for earlier years, and in respect of FPCs for 1988–89 are not readily available.
8. Changes in accounting policies mean that not all years accounts are prepared on a comparable basis.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the increase in funding for the NHS in each of the past 10 years in (a) cash (b) real and (c) percentage terms; and what are those figures for 1997–98. [10087]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is set out in the table.

National health service increases in funding

Year	Increase in cash (£ million)	Increase in real terms (1996–97 prices) (£ million)[1]	Percentage growth (real terms)[1]
1987–88	+1,495	+1,036	4.3
1988–89	+1,745	+889	3.5
1989–90	+1,442	+206	0.8
1990–91	+2,471	+1,079	4.1
1991–92	+3,027	+1,841	6.7
1992–93	+2,617	+1,712	5.9
1993–94	+971	+170	0.6
1994–95	+1,629	+1,259	4.1
1995–96	+1,388	+564	1.7
1996–97	+1,196	+313	1.0
1997–98	+1,359	+285	0.9

Ophthalmic Surgery

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will increase the resources available for ophthalmic surgery; and if he will make a statement. [10012]

Mr. Milburn: We have just announced an increase in resources for the national health service for 1998–99 of £1.2 billion. It is for health authorities and general practitioner's to use these extra resources to plan and arrange services for their residents, following an assessment of their needs, and to make decisions about the level of resources required for any particular service.

Health Authorities

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the duties devolved to health authorities under the National Health Service Act 1977. [10177]

Mr. Milburn: The roles and responsibilities of health authorities will be considered as part of the Government's plans to replace the internal market.

Consultant Lists

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors have (a) applied for and (b) been accepted on to specialist consultant lists; and how many are awaiting accreditation. [10068]

Mr. Milburn: Since 12 January 1996, the General Medical Council has received approximately 40,000 applications for entry to the specialist register. To date, the names of 29,219 doctors have been entered onto the register. These include both existing specialists and doctors who have completed their specialist training since 12 January. Since 1 January 1997, it has been a legal requirement for a doctor to be entered on the specialist register before taking up a substantive or honorary NHS consultant appointment.

The system of accreditation by the medical royal colleges was replaced from 12 January 1996 by the introduction of the certificate of completion of specialist training, awarded by the Specialist Training Authority. To date, the STA has awarded 1,589 CCSTs to doctors who have completed their specialist training.

Medical Negligence (Legal Actions)

Mr. Lock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many medical negligence legal actions have been brought against NHS trusts and health authorities in the last three financial years; and what were the total (a) legal costs involved in defending the actions, (b) legal costs paid out to plaintiffs in the actions and (c) awards made by courts or agreed out-of-court settlements to plaintiffs in the actions; and if he will make a statement. [10083]

Mr. Milburn: At present, information on the number of medical negligence legal actions and associated legal costs is not held centrally, although plans are in hand to improve the range and quality of data on clinical negligence. The total amount paid in respect of compensation under legal obligation, and clinical negligence and personal injury cases settled out of court in 1995–96 in England was £173.6 million.

Community Pharmacies

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish his Department's targets relating to payments to community pharmacy contractors; and if he will make a statement. [10235]

Mr. Milburn: A payment representing approximately 80 per cent. of the amount due is paid on the first day of the month following that in which the prescription is submitted for pricing. The remainder is paid on the first day of the following month.

Infant and Nursery Education

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will assess the different levels of resources available to (a) his Department and (b) the Department for Education and Employment in respect of the achievement of targets relating to (i) infant school class size and (ii) nursery places for four-year-olds. [9905]

Mr. Byers: I have been asked to reply.

The Department for Education and Employment will use the savings from the phasing out of the assisted places scheme, amounting to over £100 million by 2000, and £100 million or more each year thereafter, to secure reductions in infant class sizes; and some £672 million per annum, together with elements of revenue support grant, will be used to secure a nursery education place for all four-year-olds whose parents want one. The Department of Health is not expected to make resources available for these purposes.

Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for the quinquennial review of the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work; and if he will make a statement. [10587]

Mr. Boateng [pursuant to his reply, 23 July, c. 599]: Three contextual matters for the review of the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work should be included. A full text of my announcement including these three matters is as follows:

The Department, in collaboration with the Scottish Office, Welsh Office and Department of Health and Social Services Northern Ireland, will conduct a thorough review of the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work. The review, which is now due as part of the regular five-yearly examination of non-departmental public bodies, will take the form of a prior options study. It will assess the extent to which the functions of the council are necessary for the achievement of the Government's policies and consider, with particular regard to the importance of securing the best value for money, the scope for rationalisation, privatisation, contracting out, market testing or transferring all, or part, of its functions to another body. We will consult widely with all parties who have an interest in the work of the council.

The review will have regard to and take account of:

- the implications of the Government's National Training Organisation initiative for the personal social services sector;
- the recommendations of the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education—the Dearing Report;
- the Government's plans for the training of probation officers;
- the Government's proposals for devolution in Scotland and Wales, and
- the Government's intention to establish a General Social Services Council.

To minimise uncertainty, we expect this fundamental review to be completed by the end of October. Throughout, the Government's objective remains to ensure that quality services are delivered through a workforce trained and qualified to appropriate levels of competence. Nothing must get in the way of achieving that objective.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Small Businesses

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans the Government have to reduce the bureaucracy connected with the regulation of small businesses. [9982]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I have been asked to reply. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 2 July, Official Report, column 279.

British Airways Disputes

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions her Department has had with the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service concerning the disputes at British Airways. [8598]

Mr. Ian McCartney: My Department speaks regularly to ACAS about issues of common interest. My officials are aware that ACAS has been pursuing its independent role in seeking to assist the parties in the British Airways disputes and have kept in touch with progress.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions she has had in respect of the multilateral agreement on investment; and if she will make a statement. [9901]

Mrs. Roche: This Government are working hard for a successful conclusion to the negotiations on a multilateral agreement on investment. In addition to regular contact with other Government Departments, there has been contact with representatives of business, labour, environment and other non governmental organisations. As part of the MAI outreach programme the UK has taken an active part in discussions with developing countries with an interst in the agreement.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Hammond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many overseas visits to promote British exports she and her departmental Ministers have made since 2 May; how many such visits are planned for the remainder of 1997; and how many visits were undertaken by her Department during the year ending 1 May. [10132]

Mrs. Beckett: Since 2 May, my colleagues and I have made five overseas visits promoting British exports. At this stage, a further seven visits are planned for the remainder of 1997. During the year ending 1 May 1997, Ministers in the Department undertook 28 trade promotion-related visits. In addition to this, officials in my Department undertake regular overseas visits to promote UK trade and investment overseas. Information on these visits could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what instructions she has issued to Ministers in her Department relating to restriction on their overseas travel. [9763]

Mrs. Beckett: My colleagues and I are fully committed to our responsibility to promote trade and investment and appreciate the importance of overseas visits as one method of fulfilling this responsibility. However, I have agreed with my colleagues that ministerial visits will be undertaken only if and when fully justified.

Hawk Aircraft (East Timor)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will publish the evidence she has received on the use of Hawk aircraft in East Timor since 1983. [10341]

Mrs. Roche: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to her today by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett).

Consumer Education and Information Scheme

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 11 July, Official Report, column 649, if she will list each consumer education and information scheme funded by the Government and the amount of funding in the current year. [9475]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 18 July 1997]: I have inherited no budget specifically for schemes as such.

Minster for Competition and Consumer Affairs

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what payment the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs or his staff have received for his articles in Travel Weekly. [9879]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 21 July 1997]: None. Prior to 1 May, payments were made to my researcher and these were declared in the Register of Members' Interests.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what occasions the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs met (a) Stelios Hasi-Ioannou and (b) other members of Easyjet management; what was the purpose of each meeting; and where they took place. [9818]

Mr. Griffiths [holding answer 21 July 1997]: I am not aware of Stelios Hasi-Ioannou.

However, I have met Mr Haji-Iannou on four occasions. In 1996, when he spoke at the Association of British Travel Agents convention; and in 1997 on three occasions—at the British travel industry hall of fame dinner, at lunch with the president of ABTA and others, and socially with one of his management colleagues when I attended the Institute of Travel and Tourism conference in Athens.

Hazardous Chemicals

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the companies licensed to produce (a) thionyl chloride, (b) ethyl succinyl chloride and (c) propane phosphoric dichloride. [8973]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 17 July 1997]: Propane phosphoric dichloride is not know to my Department, although propane phosphonic dichloride is known. The production of this chemical, as well as of thionyl chloride and ethyl succinyl chloride, does not require a licence.

My officials advise that thionyl chloride is manufactured in the UK by three companies, ethyl succinyl chloride by one company and propane phosphonic dichloride by two companies, and that further information is available from the Chemical Industries Association Internet site, "Sourcerer"—http://www.sourcerer.co.uk.

Advisers

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the (a) special advisers and (b) outside advisers to Ministers in her Department, indicating if each (i) receives a salary, (ii) has an office with clerical-secretarial support and (iii) can claim expenses. [8994]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 17 July 1997]: Dan Corry and Sheila Watson are salaried special advisers, who can claim expenses according to DTI rules. Lord Hollick is an unpaid special adviser, who does not claim expenses. They share a private secretary and a personal secretary. I also seek a range of external advice from a wide variety of sources.

Single Currency

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the likely impact of the single currency on the interests of British business. [7554]

Mrs. Beckett: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 17 July 1997, Official Report, columns 244–45.

BP

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received from BP since her appointment. [8972]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 17 July 1997]: Personally, none. However, Ministers and officials in the Department have frequent contact with major UK companies such as BP and will have discussed a range of issues with them since the election.

WALES

Welsh Office Budget

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his proposals to compensate for the real term reductions in the Welsh Office budget for 1997–98. [8428]

Mr. Ron Davies: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 16 July to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) Official Report column 208.

Stationery

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department spent on stationery provision in respect of paper items in each of the last five years. [8870]

Mr. Ron Davies: Information in the form requested is not held centrally. The cost of my Department's stationery provision, which includes the cost of all paper items, in each of the last five years is as follows:

1992–93: £508,320

1993–94: £560,868

1994–95: £455,118

1995–96: £470,598

1996–97: £509,968

Cardiff Bay Barrage

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of whether the stated economic benefits of the proposed Cardiff Bay barrage constitute imperative reasons of overriding public interest under article 6(4) of the EC habitats and species directive (92/43/EEC). [8653]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have reviewed the content of the discussions between my Department and the European Commission on this subject. The Commission has accepted that the measures proposed by the Government would meet the requirements of article 6(4) of the habitats directive.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what estimate he has made of the number of staff who will remain responsible to him after the establishment of a Welsh Assembly; and what percentage of the total number of Welsh Office staff this will represent; [8914]

(2) what plans he has to establish a staff commission for his Department, following the establishment of a Welsh Assembly. [8915]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have set out my proposals for the staffing of the Welsh Assembly in the White Paper "A Voice for Wales" which was published on 22 July.

Referendum

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his policy in relation to homeless people voting in the referendum on devolution. [8931]

Mr. Ron Davies: People living in Wales will be able to vote in the Welsh Assembly referendum if they are included in the local government electoral register in Wales. It is for electoral registration officers to determine whether an individual qualifies for inclusion in the register.

Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many civil servants there are in total on each pay band in his Department. [9573]

Mr. Ron Davies: The following is the information:

Grades	Number of pay bands within grade	Number of staff within grade
Senior Civil Service	10	63
Principal Nursing Officer	1	0
Nursing Officer	1	4
Grade 6 and equivalents	3	18
Grade 7 and equivalents	4	145
SEO and equivalents	8	119
HEO and equivalents	11	296
EO and equivalents	9	505
AO and equivalents	7	566
AA and equivalents	4	561
Industrials and MSG	8	134
GLS and student placements	1	7

Some of the paybands within a grade may have no population, but that information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many and what percentage of employees, in each pay band, in the quangos for which his Department is responsible, are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [9572]

Mr. Ron Davies: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many and what percentage of employees in his private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [9571]

Mr. Ron Davies: The information requested would breach confidentiality as it would allow the identification of individuals.

Clwydian Community Trusts

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take steps to improve the morale of employees in the Clwydian community trusts. [9941]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The morale of staff in any organisation is a matter for its managers. The Government's intention to abolish the internal market and damaging inter-trust competition will, however, lead to a situation where staff can concentrate on their vocations rather than wasteful and unnecessary activity.

Internet

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to expedite the construction of his Department's web site; if he will ensure that priority is given to access to press notices and that adequate links to and from the web site of the Central Office of Information are included; and if he will make a statement. [9843]

Mr. Ron Davies: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Huddersfield (Mr. Sheerman) on 26 June 1997, Official Report, column 625. I confirm that my Department's press notices will appear on the Welsh Office Internet site on the day of publication and that there will be a Hypertext link with the Central Office of Information web site. In addition there will be a dedicated site featuring information relating to the referendum for a Welsh Assembly.

European Committee of the Regions

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to change the Welsh representation on the European Committee of the Regions; and if he will make a statement. [9834]

Mr. Hain: The term of office of the current three Welsh members of the Committee of the Regions and their alternates, like all UK members, will expire on 25 January 1998. The Government will be considering in due course the question of appointments after that date.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he intends to consult on proposals to modify the current compulsory competitive tendering regulation and guidance; and if he will make a statement. [10937]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Welsh Office officials will be writing tomorrow to local authorities and other interested parties with our proposals to modify the current CCT regulations and guidance. This follows a short review carried out by the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions and the Welsh Office in consultation with the Local Government Association.

The Government are committed to ensuring the delivery of cost-effective quality services in local government. To this end, the proposals are designed to make the CCT statutory framework more consistent with the principles of best value. They are also intended to provide an incentive for authorities to take the voluntary route to competitive tendering and significantly reduce many of the prescriptive elements of CCT.

Full details of these proposals are contained in a consultation paper which will be placed in the Library of the House as soon as possible. We will also be consulting on revised guidance on good tendering practice which will promote fairness and transparency in procurement decisions. A draft will also be placed in the Library of the House.

The Welsh Office and local government in Wales are committed to developing the duty of best value. To take this initiative forward, we have agreed that a project group will be established to develop this important policy. The group will be co-chaired by the Welsh Office and the Welsh Local Government Association and will include representatives from the Audit Commission, Wales TUC and Wales CBI.

In developing this policy in Wales, the project group will build upon the work already undertaken by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions and Scottish Office and apply it to the circumstances of Wales. Its first report should be available by mid-August.

I will make a further announcement once I have considered this report.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentage of employees, in each pay band, in the quangos for which her Department is responsible, are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [9578]

Mr. Paul Murphy: There is no statutory requirement on employers to maintain personnel records about the ethnic origin of their employees. Moreover, the recruitment and employment of staff in non-departmental bodies are generally operational matters for each individual body. The information requested is not therefore formally maintained by Northern Ireland Departments.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentage of employees in her private office are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [9577]

Marjorie Mowlam: The figures for employees in my London private office are two of Asian origin 16.7 per cent., and one of Afro-Caribbean origin, 8.3 per cent. It is not possible to provide the information requested in respect of employees in my Belfast private office. Staff in Northern Ireland are not monitored in respect of ethnic origin, but the Department will be reviewing monitoring polices to take account of the Race Relations (Northern Ireland) Order 1997 when it is implemented.

Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many civil servants there are in total on each pay band in her Department. [9579]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Northern Ireland civil service is currently undertaking a review of its pay and grading structures and no decision has yet been taken on revised pay bands.

The table has been prepared on the basis of the current pay bands. The left-hand side shows the numbers of staff in the senior civil services in the pay band ranges set out in £5,000 bands, and, the right-hand side, the numbers of general service and analogous grades below the SCS in the relevant pay bands. The figures are full-time rates of basic salary, excluding allowances.

The figures for the general service include a number of specialist grades which, although analogous, have a higher maximum point on the particular pay range. For some specialist grades, this pay lead may result in the maximum point being up to 10 per cent. higher than that for the analogous general service grade.

The figures cover all NICS staff and include a number of home civil service staff who work in the Northern Ireland Office.

Number of staff in each pay range/band

Grade (or analogous)	Pay range band (£)	Number of staff in grade
Senior Civil Service	105,000+	1
	100,000–105,000	—

Marches (Leaked Document)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether a restricted circulation copy of the leaked internal Government document on marches was made available to the Anglo-Irish secretariat; if the proposed inquiry into the leaked document will be authorised to investigate Irish civil servants and Irish Ministers associated with the Anglo-Irish secretariat in Northern Ireland; and if she will make a statement. [9188]

Marjorie Mowlam: The leaked internal document dealing with marches was copied to the British side of the Anglo-Irish secretariat. In common with established practice regarding protectively marked British material, it was not made available to the Irish side, so no question of involving Irish Ministers or civil servants arises.

Private finance Initiative

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if she will make a statement on the implications of the PFI for public service employees; [9770]

(2) if the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 apply to staff involved in a project under the PFI. [9773]

Mr. Paul Murphy: If the outcome of a PFI is the transfer to the private sector of an undertaking—within the meaning of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981—TUPE will apply.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to establish a Northern Ireland consultative forum of employers, trade union and Department of Education, Northern Ireland representatives to examine the application of the PFI in the education sector in Northern Ireland; and if she will make a statement. [9800]

Mr. Worthington: The Department of Education has already consulted widely about the application of PFI in the education sector, and will continue to do so. I have no plans to establish a consultative forum for this purpose.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the terms of reference of the joint Police Authority for Northern Ireland and RUC working group established to tackle the imbalance in the number of women and Catholics in the force; and when it is expected to report. [9921]

Mr. Ingram: The first meeting of the joint RUC and Police Authority for Northern Ireland working group to address the under-representation of women, Roman Catholics and minority groups within the RUC has been set for late July. At this meeting, formal terms of reference and the time scale for completion of the work will form part of the discussion.

Human Rights

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the recommendations contained in a report of the public hearings in Washington DC organised by the House International Relation Sub-Committee on Human Rights into the protection of human rights in Northern Ireland and if she will make a statement. [9926]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have not yet seen the report and the recommendations of the House International Relations Sub-Committee on Human Rights. When I have seen the report and studied the recommendations, I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of that letter in the Library.

Business Development Service

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what key performance targets have been set for the Business Development Service in 1997–98. [10726]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Business Development Service is a next steps agency within the Department of Finance and Personnel. It provides business support services in the areas of telecommunications—voice and data—management services, training, information technology and systems services and other central business facilities to Government Departments, their executive agencies and the wider public sector in Northern Ireland, where best value for money is achieved by central provision of the service.

I have set the agency the following targets for 1997–98:

at least 85 per cent. of customers to be satisfied with the service that they have received;

at least 85 per cent. of customers to be satisfied with the way in which services were provided to them;

an efficiency saving of 8 per cent. to be achieved in total running costs over the allocation for 1996–97; and the Business Development Service to be positioned to recover from its customers the costs of all its services, commencing 1 April 1998.

Copies of the agency's corporate and business plans for 1997–98 to 1998–2000 will be placed in the Library.

Water Service

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what key performance targets have been set for the Water Service in 1997–98. [10727]

Marjorie Mowlam: For 1997–98, the following key performance targets have been set for the Water Service:

1. To achieve 98.2 per cent. compliance with drinking water standards set in the Water Quality Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1994.
2. To achieve 67 per cent. compliance with the sewage treatment works discharge standards set by the Environment and Heritage Service.
3. To ensure that fewer than 0.8 per cent. of properties experience unplanned interruptions to water supplies lasting greater than 12 hours.
4. To issue substantive replies to 90 per cent. of written complaints within 15 working days of receipt.
5. To deliver water at a unit cost of 53p per cubic metre.
6. To treat sewage at a unit cost of 46p per cubic metre.
7. To maintain expenditure within cash limits and to approved budget plans.
8. To achieve efficiency gains of 3 per cent. on running costs expenditure.

The targets are included in the Water Service's 1997–98 corporate-business plan, a copy of which will be placed in the Library.

Statistics and Research Agency

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency for the financial year 1997–98. [10767]

Mr. Paul Murphy: For 1997–98 the following key performance targets have been set for the agency:

95 per cent. of key government users of the agency surveyed rating its overall service as satisfactory or better, with 40 per cent. rating it as very satisfactory.

95 per cent. of registered non-government users of the agency surveyed rating its overall service as satisfactory or better, with 30 per cent. rating it as very satisfactory.

To produce no fewer than 45 statistical publications and 12 ad hoc research publications during 1997–98.

80 per cent. of NISRA readers rating key publications as satisfactory or better, with 40 per cent. rating them as very satisfactory.

To complete a comprehensive census test of 9,000 households in Northern Ireland by July 1997.

To process 98 per cent. of postal and personal applications for general register office certificates within eight and three working days respectively.

To reduce by 2 per cent. the unit cost of producing civil registration certificates by the general register office.

To achieve a minimum 3 per cent. efficiency saving.

Full details are set out in the agency's corporate and business plan, copies of which will be placed in the Library of the House before the summer recess.

Jury Trials

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to increase the number of jury trials in Northern Ireland. [7306]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 17 July 1997]: In Northern Ireland, for good reason, trials of terrorist offences are conducted without a jury. The Government are currently examining the existing procedures for designating offences as "terrorist" and they will change the procedures in due course if they consider there to be a good case for doing so.

Debt Payment

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary for Northern Ireland what is the policy of her Department on the timely payment of debts; and what is her Department's record on the payment of debts in the current financial year. [9526]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 18 July 1997]: The policy of the Northern Ireland civil service and the Northern Ireland Office on the timely payment of debts is the same as for Great Departments. NI Departments are signed up to the NI CBI prompt payment code and are committed to the current target that no Department should fall below 95 per cent. attainment for prompt payment of undisputed bills.

The prompt payment consolidated statistics for NI Departments for the first quarter of the current financial year are not yet available. The statistics for the last period of 1996–97 show that 99.3 per cent., met the policy target.

Heterosexuals and Homosexuals

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what factors determined the present age of consent for heterosexuals and homosexuals in Northern Ireland; and what are the reasons for, and origins of, the differences from those in Great Britain. [10150]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 23 July 1997]: The age of heterosexual consent was raised from 16 to 17 years by the Children and Young Persons Act (Northern Ireland) 1950. The then Minister of Home Affairs accepted a recommendation in the report of the Lynn committee, "The Protection of the Young and the Treatment of Young Offenders", that the age of consent be raised to 17 years. The Government are not aware of any public pressure of demands from within Northern Ireland to lower the age or consent to 16 years.

The age of homosexual consent was reduced from 21 to 18 years, for the United Kingdom, by section 145 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people over the last two years were convicted of consensual sexual offences relating to (a) 16-year-olds and (b) 17-year-olds; and if she will indicate how many cases involved (i) heterosexual and (ii) homosexual acts. [10151]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 23 July 1997]: The information is not available in the form requested. However, in 1995 and 1996, 16 and nine persons, respectively, were convicted of unlawful and carnal knowledge of a girl under 17. The figure for 1995 includes one 17-year-old and, for 1996, one 17-year-old and one 16-year-old. Information is not available about the ages of persons convicted of, or involved in, homosexual offences.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensions Review

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the bodies and individuals who have been invited to participate in the pensions review. [10215]

Mr. Denham: We shall be engaging in an extensive level of public consultation to ensure that everyone with an interest can contribute to the pensions review. As part of this process, I wrote on 17 July to a large number of bodies and individuals representing pensioners, employers, employees, consumers, pensions experts and others, inviting contributions to the review. The distribution is shown on the following list.

The list is not meant to be exhaustive and letters will be sent to others on request. We would welcome contributions from any individuals or organisations with an interest in helping us to address the major pensions challenges that we have inherited. The widest possible consultation is essential if we are to achieve a wide and non-partisan consensus on the future for pensions.

The National Pensioners' Convention will be playing a specific and central role in the review to ensure that views of today's pensioners are at the heart of the review process. The NPC will be passing details of the review to all its delegates so that they have the fullest opportunity to contribute.

Following the end of the initial consultation period on 31 October 1997, there will be a period of further work and consultation after which the Government will prepare proposals for publication and further consultation in the first part of 1998.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the members of the pensions review team. [10217]

Mr. Denham: The pensions review team is led by me as the Minister with responsibilities for pensions, supported by a small group of officials. In keeping with our commitment to manage within current cash plans, the cost of the pensions review will be absorbed within the Department's existing running costs limit.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if copies of the papers prepared for the meetings convened by her between October 1996 and April 1997 to prepare for the pensions review have been supplied to the pensions review team; and if she will place copies of them in the Library. [10218]

Mr. Denham: I am making the papers prepared for the series of meetings held before 1 May available to officials in the Department's pensions review team. The wide-ranging review of pensions that we promised in the manifesto was announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 17 July, Official Report, columns 239–41.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the terms of reference are of the group of pensions experts who have been asked to report on the state of pension provision in the United Kingdom and future trends; which experts have been invited to be members; what their qualifications are; what remuneration they will receive; and which of them have expertise relating to state pensions. [10216]

Mr. Denham: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has appointed Tom Ross of Alexander Clay and vice-president of the National Association of Pension Funds to chair the group of pensions experts. We shall announce further details of the expert group, including the group's terms of reference and the names of the experts, soon.

Disability Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions she has had with the president of the independent tribunal service concerning the propriety of doctors who carry out medical examinations of disability living allowance claimants for the Benefits Agency being appointed as members of disability appeal tribunals. [10221]

Mr. Keith Bradley: On 9 July, we introduced the Social Security Bill which will modernise the delivery of social security, including the appeals system. This Bill provides for the Lord Chancellor or Lord Advocate in Scotland to appoint all tribunal members in the future. Medical members will be appointed in consultation with the chief medical officer.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not had any discussions with the president of the independent tribunal service regarding the propriety of doctors, but is satisfied that the current procedures in place for the appointment of members of disability appeal tribunals do not give rise to any conflict of interest.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what proportion of appeals to social security, disability and child support appeal tribunals an oral hearing is requested. [10220]

Mr. Bradley: On 9 July 1997, we introduced the Social Security Bill which will modernise the delivery of Social Security. This Bill contains measures to provide a simpler and more efficient appeal system.

The information is set out in the table.

Appellants requesting an oral hearing
21 October 1996–30 June 1997

	Per cent.
Social security appeal tribunals	38
Disability appeal tribunals	68
Child support appeals	35

All figures are estimates.

Lone Parents

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether the parent-plus pilot schemes to help lone parents obtain work have been cancelled. [10306]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Government launched their new deal for lone parents on 21 July. This will provide help with moving into work, for initially up to 40,000 lone parents in England, Scotland and Wales. From October 1998, help will be offered to half a million lone parents whose youngest child is over five.

The Budget included £200 million over the life of this Parliament to fund the new deal for lone parents and improvements in help with child care costs. We will not therefore be proceeding with parent-plus.

Pensions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what will be the annual value of the basic pension for a single person in each year from 1997–98 to 2039–40, at 1997 prices, if it is uprated in line with average earnings, assuming that earnings rise in real terms by 2 or 1.5 per cent. per annum. [10114]

Mr. Denham: The information is in the table.

Annual value of standard rate category A retirement pension, at 1997–98 prices

Year	Real earnings growth of 1.5 per cent. per annum (£)	Real earnings growth of 2.0 per cent. per annum (£)

[1] Actual.

1. The convention of rounding the standard weekly rate of Retirement Pension (RP) to the nearest 5p at each uprating has been applied.

2. The figures in columns 2 and 3 represent the appropriate weekly rate multiplied by 52.

3. The figures for 1997–98 are based upon the actual RP standard rate.

4. From April 1998–99 onwards the standard RP rate has been uprated in line with the assumptions requested.

Benefits Agency (Wales)

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the current status of the document, "Benefits Agency (Wales), Blueprint for the Future." [10939]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Government have new priorities for improving the delivery of social security, and we shall not be proceeding with the separate Welsh strategy set out in the blueprint for Wales.

We are determined to overhaul the service that we have inherited, to develop a modern integrated system that is simpler, streamlined and more efficient, and that strikes the right balance between people's rights and responsibilities.

We shall be looking at service provision to ensure that an equitable service is provided for all. This may be best achieved through a flexible approach, involving partnerships with other service providers, perhaps using other facilities on a casual basis or by using officers to visit customers in their homes or elsewhere. This is part of the Government's approach to getting public service agencies to work more effectively together. Concentrating staff in this way can improve the accuracy of work and can also bring efficiency gains. We are, however, clear that our strategy will continue to require a network of offices in which staff can speak to an advisor, as well as locations where customers can get access to information through direct-access kiosks.

The Government have promised to live within the budget set by the previous Administration and I have told staff to look for ways of improving efficiency and improving customer service.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people who have been denied incapacity benefit due to their inability to fulfil the all work test have also been denied jobseeker's allowance because they cannot fulfil the requirements of the jobseeker's agreement (a) in the Durham area and (b) in England. [7656]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We are committed to a review of the objective of reducing poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives. We want to develop a system that supports work, savings and honesty. One of our first steps is to focus on helping people off welfare and into work. Support for sick and disabled people will form part of the review. The administration of incapacity benefit and jobseeker's allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Gerry Steinberg, dated 23 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people who have been denied Incapacity Benefit (IB) due to their inability to fulfil the all work test (AWT) have also been denied Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) because they cannot fulfil the requirements of the jobseeker's agreement (a) in the Durham area and (b) in England.

The information is not available in the format requested as statistics are collated by Benefits Agency (BA) District. The number of customers who failed the IB AWT during 1996/97 in the BA Districts of North and South Durham, which include the offices at Bishop Auckland, Chester-Le-Street, Darlington, Durham, Peterlee, Seaham and Stanley, was 4,000. The total number of customers who failed the IB AWT in England in 1996/97 was 140,000. These figures exclude a small number of clerical cases or disallowances where customers did not return IB questionnaires or attend examinations.

Information relating to the number of people who have been denied JSA because they could not fulfil the requirements of the jobseeker's agreement is not available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. You may be interested to know that this information, from May 1997 onwards, will be available towards the end of the year in the JSA Quarterly Statistical Extract.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Unemployment Forecasts

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what reasons the (a) unemployment and (b) total cost of cyclical social security is forecast to 2002; and what reasons this date is different from the date to which unemployment is forecast. [6837]

Mr. Darling: I have been asked to reply.

There is no published forecast of unemployment, in line with conventions adopted by previous Governments. For the purposes of prudent planning of public finances, expenditure plans assume that unemployment remains at present levels, in line with long-established convention used before the 1996 Budget, and approved by the National Audit Office.

Latest forecasts of cyclical social security for the period 1997–98 to 1998–99 are set out in table 4.6 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" 2 July 1997. They are based on the assumption that UK unemployment will be flat at its recent level of 1.65 million—para 4.28. In the absence of spending commitments for future years, three variants for medium-term projections of total general Government expenditure were published in table 4.7, although cyclical social security was not shown explicitly.

The November 1996 FSBR gave projections to 1999–2000 based on the economic assumptions of the public expenditure survey—given on page 117. Projections for 2000—01 and 2001–02, the two years beyond the survey period, were based on illustrative unemployment assumptions.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Sixth Forms

18. Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the criteria used by his Department in determining whether a secondary school not currently having a sixth form can successfully apply for one. [8614]

Dr. Howells: All proposals for changes to schools will be considered on their individual merits, taking account of all relevant considerations, including the effect on other schools and colleges in the area. In the case of proposals to add sixth forms, we will have particular regard to whether there is a need for additional provision in the area, whether the provision will be delivered at reasonable cost, and whether the proposed curriculum would be appropriate for the needs of students and parents and would be likely to improve the staying-on rate in the area.

25. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on changes to funding arrangements for sixth form colleges; and if he will introduce a standard unit of resource for 16 to 18-year-olds. [8622]

Dr. Howells: The funding of sixth form colleges is a matter for the Further Education Funding Council. We currently have no plans to introduce a standard unit of resource for all 16 to 18-year-olds.

Welfare to Work

23. Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he will take to ensure the quality of the provisions under the Government's welfare-to-work plans. [8620]

Mr. Andrew Smith: We intend, throughout the design and implementation of our welfare-to-work provision, to define clear standards of quality designed to meet the needs of our clients. We will set in place mechanisms to ensure that the Employment Service and its partners share and deliver those standards rigorously and consistently.

30. Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the training requirements expected of employers who participate in the welfare-to-work programme. [8627]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Under our new deal for young people, we will expect employers to provide, or release participants for, one day's training or its equivalent each week, leading towards an accredited qualification. We are making £750 available per person, on top of all other costs, for this purpose.

We will be working in partnership with employers, training and enterprise councils and other key organisations to ensure that the training is of high quality.

Evesham College

24. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will visit Evesham college to discuss its funding; and if he will make a statement. [8621]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend has no plans to visit the college. It is for the Further Education Funding Council for England to allocate funds to individual colleges.

Local Education Authorities

26. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of state for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the application of the principle of zero tolerance to local education authorities. [8623]

Mr. Byers: As the "Excellence in Schools" White Paper explains, LEAs must demonstrate to their own schools, to parents and the local electorate and to the Department that they are doing a good job in improving their schools. The Government expect all LEAs to play their part in driving up standards.

Where it appears that an LEA is failing, the Secretary of State may direct the Office for Standards in Education to undertake an immediate inspection. If that inspection confirms the failings, it may be necessary for the Secretary of State to intervene, either by directing LEA officers or by enabling others to perform some functions until the LEA has demonstrated its capacity to resume its full responsibilities.

Youth Employment

27. Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has had from small business representatives about his proposals to provide employment for young people. [8624]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for North-west Leicestershire (Mr. Taylor).

35. Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what role further and higher education colleges will play in delivering his proposals for providing employment for young people. [8633]

Dr. Howells: Further and higher education have a vital role to play in delivering the skilled work force we will need in the next century. We have a wide range of proposals for improving young people's participation in high quality education and training, including the new deal and Target 2000. Our new deal for young unemployed people will start across the whole country next April. Under the new deal people who do not have basic qualifications will have the opportunity to undertake full-time education or training. Participants on this option may undertake courses lasting up to 12 months, which will give them time to gain an accredited and useful qualification.

36. Ms Ryan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what consultation he is undertaking on his proposals for providing employment for young people. [8634]

Mr. Smith: There will be three national design workshops, two in London on 24 and 30 July and one in Birmingham on 28 July. There will also be 24 regional consultation meetings and these will be followed by extensive local consultation on partnerships to deliver the new deal.

Work Permits

28. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals he has to reform the work permit system. [8625]

Mr. Alan Howarth: There are no proposals at present to reform the arrangements for considering work permit applications. Criteria for approval of work permits are kept under review in the light of developments in the labour market. Of course, I should be interested in any observations my hon. Friend may wish to offer to improve existing arrangements.

University for Industry

29. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent discussions he has had about proposals for a university for industry. [8626]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Doncaster, Central (Ms Winterton).

Higher Education (Low-income Families)

Dr. Lynda Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to assist people from low-income families into and through higher education. [8628]

Dr. Howells: The Government's preferred approach to future funding arrangements for higher education includes continuing access to free tuition for students from lower-income families, no parental contributions from lower-income families and repayment of future maintenance loans on a basis related to income after graduation. But, as the report of the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education makes clear, the main factor determining access to higher education is the level of educational attainment up to age 18. the policies which my right hon. Friend has set out in the schools White Paper are designed to increase educational attainment in school and thereby encourage wider access to higher education.

Schools (Parental Choice)

32. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his policy on parental choice in schools. [8629]

Mr. Byers: We want as many parents as possible to be able to send their children to their preferred school. But we recognise that where one school is more popular than another some parents will be disappointed. The White Paper "Excellence in Schools" explains that schools will work in partnership with each other and with the local education authority to develop helpful and timely information for parents and common timetables for applications.

Investors in People

33. Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many small businesses have been recognised as investors in people. [8630]

Dr. Howells: On 1 June, 2,849 in the UK organisations with fewer than 50 employees were recognised as investors in people.

Rural Schools

34. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his Department's policy in respect of the current network of rural schools. [8632]

Mr. Byers: Our policies are designed to raise standards in all schools, wherever they are situated, and we are currently consulting about the best means to do this. All proposals for changes to rural schools that come to the Department for decision will be considered on their individual merits, taking into account all the consequences of the proposals. We recognised the important role played by rural schools and will want to adopt policies which reflect this.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the (a) benefits and (b) costs of merging TECs and chambers of commerce. [9683]

Dr. Howells: In June 1995, this Department commissioned Pieda plc to evaluate the impact of mergers between training and enterprise councils and chambers of commerce. Pieda reported its findings to the Department earlier this year. It concluded that the merged organisations the study looked at

"appear to be well on the way to creating a much stronger and more influential business led organisation in the areas concerned."

The study did not identify any major disbenefits of merger.

The report will be published on 11 August and a copy put in the House of Commons Library.

Ex-offenders

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals he has for agreeing a protocol on the employment of ex-offenders with the main employer organisations and the trade unions. [10256]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Employers are encouraged to consider all applicants on their merits, including ex-offenders; those released from prison have early access to appropriate DfEE programmes. We have no proposals for a protocol with employers organisations and trade unions; nor have we received any.

Veterinary Science Students

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will review the need of veterinary science students for supplementary maintenance grant in respect of additional weeks spent on work experience as part of their training during the summer vacation period; and if he will make a statement. [9774]

Dr. Howells: The National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education has been considering possible future arrangements for student support—including supplementary maintenance grants—and is due to report shortly. The Government will set out their proposals in the light of the committee's recommendations.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what has been the average yearly pay rise for principals of further education colleges in Greater London since 1993; [9167]

(2) what has been the average yearly pay rise for lecturers in further education since 1993 in Greater London. [9168]

Dr. Howells: This information is not held centrally. As from incorporation on 1 April 1993, further education corporations assumed responsibility for their own finance and organisation, including the appointment, dismissal, redundancy and conditions of service generally of their staff.

School Standards

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list his main proposals for raising standards in schools. [8631]

Mr. Byers: The White Paper "Excellence in schools", published on Monday 7 July, sets out in detail the Government's proposals for raising standards in schools and summarises what we aim to achieve over the lifetime of this Parliament. Copies have been sent to all Members of Parliament and are also available in the Library.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what role local education authorities will have in supporting schools to raise standards. [8612]

Mr. Byers: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend gave earlier to my hon. Friends the Members for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Helen Jackson) and for Wyre Forest (Mr. Lock).

General Teaching Council

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will be consulting on the establishment of a general teaching council. [11047]

Mr. Byers: A consultation document has been published today, setting out options for the role and composition of a general teaching council. We envisage the council having a key role to play in promoting high standards of teaching, and in raising the status and morale of the teaching profession. We are seeking views by October from teachers and a wide range of other interested parties. A copy of the consultation document has been placed in the Library.

Education (Fees and Awards) Regulations 1994

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to revise the Education (Fees and Awards) Regulations 1994. [11048]

Dr. Howells: Revised Education (Fees and Awards) Regulations will be laid before Parliament to add a requirement of being settled in the United Kingdom under the immigration laws to the existing conditions of residence in Great Britain, the United Kingdom and islands, the United Kingdom, England and Wales and England for the purpose of student fee classifications by institutions and the rules of candidate eligibility for certain awards and studentship which may be adopted by education authorities and other specified bodies. These changes and others are described fully in a policy briefing sheet issued today by the Department for Education and Employment, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many civil servants there are on each pay band in his Department. [8963]

Dr. Howells: The number of civil servants by grade level in the Department of Education and Employment at 1 June 1997 was:

	Number
Administration Assistant	546
Administration Officer	1,119
Executive Officer	1,074
Higher Executive Officer	937
Senior Executive Officer	374
Grade 7	424
Grade 6	41
Senior Civil Service	106

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what proposals he has to reduce the running costs of the special educational needs tribunal; [10019]

(2) what plans he has to introduce changes to the special educational needs appeals process; [10020]

(3) if he will reduce the number of appeals administered by the special educational needs tribunal. [10021]

Ms Estelle Morris: We will consult widely on the special educational needs appeals process, as part of an extensive consultation on SEN, through a Green Paper to be published in September. As part of that, we shall be looking to improve arrangements for conciliation between parents and local education authorities, so that fewer appeals need to come to the tribunal. That should in due course reduce pressure on tribunal running costs.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will estimate the average cost of a special educational needs tribunal hearing, including indirect costs borne by his Department; and if he will estimate the average cost of processing an appeal sent to the special educational needs tribunal; [10017]

(2) if he will estimate the average cost of processing parental appeals concerning special educational needs statements for (a) local education authorities in 1993–94 and (b) the special educational needs tribunal in 1994–95. [10018]

Ms Morris: The budget for the tribunal is held by the DfEE, but the Department has no involvement in special educational needs tribunal hearings. For the 1995–96 financial year, the SEN tribunal president has estimated that the average cost to the tribunal of a hearing is about £820 and the average cost of processing an appeal, including hearing costs, is about £730. The discrepancy is due mainly to something approaching 50 per cent. of appeals being withdrawn before reaching a hearing. It is not possible to offer meaningful averages for the cost of processing appeals in the 1994–95 financial year.

The Department has no information about the cost to LEAs of SEN appeals processed by local education authorities in 1993–94.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many appeals to the special educational needs tribunal were heard during the latest year for which figures are available; and in how many of these appeals there were parents or other witnesses representing the child for whom the appeal was being held; [10024]

(2) in respect of how many cases of appeals to the special educational needs tribunal the wishes of the parents were upheld; and in how many of these cases witnesses were present for the appellant. [10025]

Ms Morris: Between September 1995 and August 1996, the special educational needs tribunal conducted 903 hearings, 111 of which were preliminary hearings at which parties to the appeal were not normally present. Parents were present at the remaining 792 hearings. In the same period, parents' appeals were upheld, either in full or in part, in 620 cases. The tribunal does not collect data on the number of witnesses who attend hearings.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many appeals to the special educational needs tribunal (a) followed a rejected appeal to the local education authority responsible for the education of the child concerned and (b) took the place of an appeal to the relevant local authority in the last year for which data are available. [10022]

Ms Morris: The special educational needs tribunal came into existence on 1 September 1994 when it replaced local education authorities as the body responsible for hearing SEN appeals. Appeals after that date came direct to the tribunal. We have no information about whether any appeals heard by the tribunal had been conducted by LEAs prior to that date.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were the total expenses paid for the latest year for which figures are available for hearings of the special educational needs tribunal (a) for members of the appeals panel and (b) for parents and other witnesses of those children whose appeals are being held. [10023]

Ms Morris: Members of the tribunal were paid £425,000 in the 1995–96 financial year to cover fees and expenses. In the same period, parents were paid £3,000 and parents' witness, £13,000.

Social Work Courses

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the impact of recent changes to the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations for vocational courses involving work experience and a work placement on the take-up rate for places on two-year certificate of qualification in social work courses; and if he will make a statement. [10153]

Dr. Howells: Further to the previous reply I gave to the hon. Member on 24 June 1997, Official Report, column 446, only sandwich courses leading to the DipHE (social work) will be affected by the recent changes to the provisions for sandwich courses in the regulations, DipHE (social work) courses are offered by 54 institutions in the United Kingdom, with about 6,000 students in attendance. Not all these students will hold mandatory awards. On the evidence provided so far to the Department by the Central Council for the Education and Training of Social Workers, no course has yet been discovered that has clearly been affected by the new provisions.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Unmarked Graves

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what steps are taken, when burial grounds are sold to private developers, to ensure that the location of unmarked graves is not lost. [9858]

Mr. Bell: Under the Parochial Registers and Records Measure 1978 parishes are required to maintain a burials register—including that of unmarked graves—for each Church of England burial ground in the parish. Such records as exist regarding the location of unmarked graves would be preserved even in the event of a disposal of the burial ground concerned. Where the Commissioners make a scheme under section 30 of the Pastoral Measure 1983 enabling the secular development of a surplus burial ground it is the responsibility thereafter of the new owner—initially usually the Diocesian Board of Finance—to ensure that the provisions of section 65 and schedule 6 to the Measure regarding the disposal or otherwise of human remains are complied with.

The Secretary of State for the Home Department is also involved in this procedure whereby the removal of any remains and their new point of burial have to be recorded by the owner in a certificate in a prescribed manner and deposited at the General Register Office. Where a burial ground is being disposed of with a redundant church similar provisions apply.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many and what percentage of employees, in each pay band, in the quangos for which her Department is responsible, are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [9575]

Clare Short: The information available includes staff of Afro-Caribbean origin with those of African origin. With that qualification, the information is as follows:

Pay band minimum	Asian	Percentage	African and Afro-Caribbean	Percentage
£50,000	0	0.0	0	0.0
£42,500	0	0.0	1	3.4
£30,000	3	6.0	2	4.0
£23,000	2	6.9	2	6.9
£19,250	2	11.8	0	0.0
£16,500	4	16.0	4	16.0
£12,500	1	2.4	5	11.9
£10,000	0	0.0	6	25.0

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many and what percentage of civil servants in each of grades 1 to 5 in her Department are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [9568]

Clare Short: Staff of Asian and Afro-Caribbean origin are not currently represented in posts formerly classified as grades 1 to 4. In posts formerly classified as grade 5, the Department employs one member of staff of Asian origin, representing 2.3 per cent. of such posts, and one member of staff of Afro-Caribbean origin, 2.3 per cent. We aim to do better.

World Poverty

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the Government Departments with which she is co-operating directly with respect to the provision of overseas aid and the eradication of world poverty; and if she will make a statement. [10135]

Clare Short: Consistency in Government policy on issues affecting poorer countries is a key element in the remit of the new Department for International Development in the elimination of global poverty and promotion of sustainable development. My Department therefore co-operates as appropriate with other Departments, in particular with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office; HM Treasury; the Department of Trade and Industry; the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions; the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food; the Department of Health; the Department for Education and Employment; and the Ministry of Defence.

Aid (Economic Reform)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what criteria her Department uses to determine whether a satisfactory degree of economic reform has been implemented for the purposes of receiving overseas aid; and if she will make a statement. [10137]

Clare Short: We look to work in countries that wish to implement sound macro-economic policies aimed at laying or preserving the foundations for sustainable economic growth based on prudent budgeting, effective and transparent fiscal disciplines and efficient markets. At the same time, we look for a demonstrable commitment to eliminate poverty by expanding opportunities for sustainable livelihoods and human development through increased access to basic education, basic health and clean water for all.

Aid and Trade (Review)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when the review of aid-and-trade provision will be completed; and if she will make a statement. [10138]

Clare Short: The review of the aid-and-trade provision will be done in the autumn. It would be inappropriate to pre-empt any findings of the review by making a statement at this stage.

Know-how Fund

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the future of the know-how fund. [10139]

Clare Short: The know-how fund provides flexible technical assistance to central and eastern Europe and central Asia adjusting to the transition to democracy on an efficient economy. I am reviewing its activities as part of the process leading up to the publication in the autumn of a White Paper on international development to adjust to progress achieved and the need to address growing inequality and poverty in transition countries.

Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many civil servants there are in total on each pay band in her Department. [9576]

Clare Short: The Department has yet to adopt a system of pay bands and, for the time being, designations applied hitherto remain in use. On this basis, the numbers are:

	Number
Senior civil service posts	43.5
Grade 6	51.0
Grade 7	93.5
Senior executive officer and equivalents	49.5
Higher executive officer and equivalents	145.0
Administration trainee/HEO(D)	12.0
Assistant economist	10.0
Assistant statistician	3.0
Executive officer and equivalents	174.5
Administrative officer and equivalents	322.0
Administrative assistant and equivalents	124.0

Aid Target Date

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development for what reasons it is not her policy to set a target date for reaching the UN target of 0.7 per cent. of gross domestic product for official development assistance; and if she will make a statement. [9195]

Clare Short: As I have repeatedly made clear, we are committed to reversing the decline in the proportion of our GNP spent on development assistance, which was 0.52 per cent. and rising in 1979, is now 0.27 per cent. and almost halved under the previous Administration. My policy is to reverse the decline in our spend rather than make false promises and continuing cuts, as did the previous Government.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to introduce measures relating to data protection. [10430]

Mr. George Howarth: Later this Session, we shall be bringing forward a data protection Bill to give effect to the European Community data protection directive. We hope shortly to publish a paper setting out the Government's proposals.

Prison Service

Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Prison Service audit report. [11171]

Mr. Straw: Our manifesto said that the Prison Service faced serious financial problems and that we would audit the resources available.

Therefore, shortly after taking office, I asked the Director General of the Prison Service to carry out an audit of the resources available to the Prison Service, and current and projected demands on it.

The audit has now been completed and I am today placing a report of its findings in the Library.

The main findings are:

the prison population rose by 17,000 or nearly 40 per cent. in the four years up to this June to reach 60,580. It is expected to rise to at least 68,900 by March 2000. In the three months since the election, it has risen by 2,440, far exceeding any projection published before 1 May. This three-month rise is equivalent to the total capacity of four average-sized prisons:

resources have not kept pace with this rise in numbers. The building programme approved by the previous Government is already being outstripped by the rise in population, which on latest assumptions will exceed maximum capacity later this year, and will do so again by a larger margin by early 1999:

the number of prisoners "doubled"—held two to a cell designed for one—has already increased from 7,251 in 1992 to 10,926 at the end of June and, on current plans, would have to increase to around 16,000 by early 1999;

meanwhile, the level of purposeful activity for prisoners has dropped over the last two years, so limiting scope for reducing the risk of prisoners re-offending on release;

there is growing risk of prisons having to close because heating, electrical and water systems, roofs and other infrastructure have not been adequately maintained.

I pay tribute to the dedication and professionalism of the Prison Service in coping with these intense pressures.

I announced yesterday in an answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Luton, North (Mr. Hopkins), Official Report, column 682, that the Prison Service will be able to spend up to an extra £43 million during this year and next to accommodate the projected numbers safely.

Full Sutton Prison

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will instigate an inquiry into damage that occurred to the personal property of prisoners in the aftermath of the disturbances on 20 January at Full Sutton prison with particular reference to damage to (a) personal stereos, (b) clothing and (c) books. [9981]

Ms Quin: No. Claims for compensation for prisoners' property damaged during the January disturbance at Full Sutton prison are being dealt with through the normal Prison Service request and complaint procedures. Although the Prison Service does not accept liability for loss of personal property held by prisoners in their cells, it has been agreed in this instance to make ex-gratia payments to prisoners who were innocent victims of the disturbance. Those prisoners who are judged to have been involved in the disturbance will not be liable for compensation.

Prisoners who are not satisfied with the outcome of these procedures may appeal to Prison Service headquarters and, if still not satisfied, to the independent prison ombudsman. In addition, all prisoners retain the normal right of any citizen to seek to recover legitimate losses through the courts.

Prisoners

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the prison population of (a) males and (b) females, in each of the past five years; and what is the forecast population for both groups for each of the next three years. [10174]

Ms Quin: Information on the average population for 1992–96 is contained in table A. Long-term projections of the prison population in England and Wales are produced annually and were last published in the Home Office statistical bulletin 7/97 on 3 April 1997. The projected average population figures for 1997 to 2000, including a higher and lower variant, are as set out in the attached table B. On 18 July 1997, the prison population stood at 62,300 which is 1,700 higher than the central projection for mid-July.

Table A: Average population in prison in England and Wales 1992–1996

Year	Males	Females	Total
1992	44,240	1,577	45,817
1993	43,005	1,561	44,566
1994	46,983	1,811	48,794
1995	49,068	1,979	51,047
1996	53,019	2,262	55,281

Table B: Projected average populations for 1997–2000

Year	England and Wales average population—central projection			Percentage increase on previous year	Total population projection
	Males	Females	Total[1]		Lower variant	Upper variant
1997	57,800	2,600	60,500	5.5	58,800	62,200
1998	61,000	2,800	63,800	5.5	61,900	65,700
1999	62,500	2,900	65,500	2.7	63,500	67,500
2000	63,800	3,000	66,800	2.0	64,600	69,000

Mandatory Minimum Sentences

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his oral answer of 9 June, Official Report, columns 775–76, what assumptions he made in respect of (a) the deterrent effects of the mandatory sentences and (b) the likely effect on the length of other sentences when forming his estimates as to the likely increase in the prison population as a result of the implementation of each of the mandatory minimum sentencing provisions of the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997. [10258]

Mr. Michael: The estimates assume that the deterrent effect on those who are liable to mandatory minimum sentences—that is, offenders who have one qualifying conviction for serious violent or sex offences, or two qualifying convictions for trafficking in class A drugs or domestic burglary—will reduce the requirement for prison places by 20 per cent. The estimates also include an allowance of 1,000 prison places for indirect effects of the provisions on sentence levels, if all are implemented.

Release of Information (Criminal Prosecutions)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of criminal prosecutions undertaken in 1996 in respect of the unauthorised release of information, citing the Acts of Parliament involved. [10616]

Mr. Michael: In 1995, there were no prosecutions under the Official Secrets Act 1989. Information for 1996 will be available in the autumn.

Information on the numerous other statutory provisions covering the disclosure of specific kinds of information is not available centrally.

Metropolitan Police Files

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of files held by the Metropolitan police are kept (a) on computer files exclusively, (b) on paper files exclusively and (c) in both forms. [10614]

Mr. Michael: I am informed that the information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the commissioner has provided me with the following information. All centrally registered files which deal with administrative and operational matters, and case papers, are exclusively in paper form. Certain branches including the aliens registration office and the lost property office have their own central registry and all their files are in paper form. Major inquiries, crime reporting and criminal records are all held electronically.

Road Crimes

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to include measures in the Crime and Disorder Bill to address (a) dangerous driving, (b) speeding, (c) careless driving and (d) other crimes which take place on the roads. [10564]

Mr. Michael: We have no plans to include specific measures relating to dangerous driving, speeding or careless driving. The Bill will give effect to manifesto commitments relating to young and adult crime and disorder, many of which may relate to crimes which are committed on the roads.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Portsmouth South (Mr. Hancock) of 18 July, Official Report, column 344, if he will list the matters which are considered in the assessment as to whether a particular procedure should be approved under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; [10695]

(2) in the case of procedures carried out for commercial gain, what criteria need to be satisfied before approval is given under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement. [10683]

Mr. George Howarth: Applications for all project licences must satisfy the criteria set out in the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. Section 5(3) sets out the permissible purposes of the work; section 5(4) requires that the likely adverse effects to the animals concerned be weighed against the benefits likely to accrue; section 5(5) requires applicants to give adequate consideration to alternatives; and section 5(6) prohibits the use of cats, dogs, primates and equidae unless no other species is suitable or it is not practicable to obtain animals of another suitable species.

When the cost-benefit assessment required by section 5(4) is carried out, the importance of the objectives; the probability that these objectives will be achieved; the potential adverse effects to the animals involved; and the measures for reducing these adverse effects must all be taken into account. This assessment of benefit and severity is described in more detail in appendix II of the 1993 report of the Animal Procedures Committee.

I understand that, as part of its review of the operation of the Act, the Animal Procedures Committee is preparing an extended statement on the principles and operation of cost-benefit assessment.

When the benefits are assessed, the potential financial gain which may accrue from the sale of any product is not considered. Broader economic and social benefits, such as cheaper or more accessible medicines or other products, or reduction in costs to the taxpayer may be taken into consideration. Animal use is often required not by the commercial organisation, but by national and international regulations which protect human safety.

Quangos

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the quangos within his Department's responsibility which he has to date announced his intention (a) to abolish and (b) to make subject to a significant element of democratic accountability. [9680]

Mr. Straw: (a) In the period from 1 May 1997, no announcement has been made to abolish any Home Office quangos. The opportunity to review these bodies will be taken in line with my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for West Lancashire (Mr. Pickthall), on 18 June, Official Report, column 174.

(b) I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster gave to my hon. Friend the Member for The Wrekin (Mr. Bradley), on 24 July, Official Report, column 693.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Record Office

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the targets he expects the Scottish Record Office to achieve in 1997–98. [11094]

Mr. McLeish: I have set the Scottish Record Office the following key targets for 1997–98:

- to reduce the unit cost of preserving and making available the Records of Scotland by 4.5 per cent. in real terms;
- to increase the number of catalogue entries available for public scrutiny on the electronic system by 50,000;
- to produce material for readers in 92.5 per cent. of cases in 30 minutes or less for material from the same building and in two days or less for material from elsewhere;
- to issue replies to 85 per cent. of correspondence within 10 days, absorbing up to a 2 per cent. increase in demand; and
- to obtain the necessary additional funding to set up the Scottish archive network project as a business and to begin to put finding aids onto the Internet.

Children's Centres

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many children's centres there are in Scotland; and if he will list them by area health boards; [10155]

(2) what plans he has to extend provision of children's centres; and what steps he has taken in this respect to date. [10156]

Mr. Dewar: There are centres providing paediatric care in all major centres of population in Scotland, including at the three specialist children's hospitals in Edinburgh—Lothian health board—Aberdeen—Grampian health board—and the Royal hospital for sick children, Yorkhill, Glasgow—Greater Glasgow health board. Each health board is responsible for planning to meet the health care needs for its resident population, including children.

David Elder Infirmary, Govan

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for the Greater Glasgow health board site of the former David Elder infirmary in Govan, Glasgow. [10154]

Mr. Dewar: Greater Glasgow health board has concluded that the former David Elder infirmary is no longer required for use by the national health service in Glasgow. Its disposal is a matter for the health board.

PRIME MINISTER

Data Protection

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what public access there is under the Data Protection Act 1984 to computer files previously held by the police but now lodged with M15. [10685]

The Prime Minister: Any request under the Data Protection Act 1984 for access to data held by the Security Service would be considered on its merits.

However, the Data Protection Act provides for personal data to be exempt from the subject access provisions of the act if the exemption is required for the purpose of safeguarding national security.

The Act also provides for exemption from the subject access provisions of the Act of personal data held for the purpose of discharging statutory functions where the data consist of information obtained for that purpose from a person who possessed it for the prevention or detection of crime or the apprehension or prosecution of offenders and where access would be likely to prejudice those purposes.

Policy Unit

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister how many people are employed in his policy unit. [10607]

The Prime Minister: As at 23 July, there were 12 officials and six support staff.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister how many and what percentage of special advisers to the Government are (a) of Asian origin and (b) of Afro-Caribbean origin. [8970]

The Prime Minister: Information on ethnic origin is collected from civil servants on a voluntary basis. Figures for special advisers are not held centrally.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Public Defender Service

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will initiate a pilot English Public Defender Service in youth courts to parallel the experiment scheduled in Scotland. [9928]

Mr. Hoon: We have not ruled out the possibility of using employed solicitors, or solicitors under specially-designed contracts, for particular sorts of work if those would be the most suitable arrangements. We are open to the idea of using specialist employed lawyers to represent defendants in disputed cases in the youth courts. We will be watching the progress of the Scottish pilot with interest.

Bar (Code of Conduct)

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he expects matters relating to the amendments to the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales relating to bankruptcy and attendance at police stations will be submitted to (a) him and (b) the designated judges. [9625]

Mr. Hoon: The amendments are being considered under section 31 of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990, at the request of the Bar Council. The amendments are to be submitted to the Lord Chancellor by the end of July and will be sent to the designated judges thereafter.

Barristers and Solicitors

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) if he will list the 10 (a) barristers and (b) solicitors who received the highest total payments from public funds in the last available year; [9865]

(2) if he will list those barristers paid over £100,000 out of public funds in the latest available year. [9864]

Mr. Hoon: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Personal Injury

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many personal injury actions have been automatically struck out under County Court Order 17 rule 11 in each of the last three years. [9780]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Andrew Dismore, dated 25 July 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your question about the number of personal injury cases struck out in the last three years.

The information requested is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to amend County Court Order 17 rule 11; and if he will make a statement. [9783]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor is considering the revised judgment of the Court of Appeal in Bannister v SGB plc. and Others issued on 4 July 1997 with a view to deciding whether action should be taken to amend order 17, rule 11 of the county court rules.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many personal injury cases struck out automatically under County Court Order 17 rule 11 have been appealed (a) to circuit judges and (b) to the Court of Appeal in each of the last three years; and how many appeals were successful in each category. [9782]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Andrew Dismore, dated 25 July 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your question about the number of personal injury cases appealed in the last three years.

The information requested is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Legal Database

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department in how many locations a common database has been introduced between courts, the Crown Prosecution Service and barristers' chambers; what evaluation he has made of the success of these schemes; and what proposals he has to extend these schemes. [9868]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Austin Mitchell, dated 25 July 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your question about the number of locations at which a common database has been introduced.

A common database has not yet been introduced. However, the CCCJS (a Home Office body responsible for the 'Co-ordination for Computerisation of the Criminal Justice System') is currently deciding whether to proceed with a project that will consider the introduction of a common standard for information across the criminal justice system. This project may also consider establishing a standard database. More immediately, the CCCJS has piloted and evaluated an initiative to link criminal justice agencies in Suffolk and Southampton by e-mail. The scheme has been recommended for replication and the Court Service, in conjunction with the CCCJS and local agencies, has identified other potential sites for this facility. Work is in hand to expand this initiative. Details of court lists are also sent electronically to list distributors, who in turn forward these to subscribers. Subscribers include barristers' chambers, solicitors and the Prison Service.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 10 July, Official Report, column 561, what are the targets for each TEC for special needs training. [10303]

Dr. Howells: The number of contracted starts for which TECs will receive payment, (a) for those endorsed as having special training needs on entering youth training,

(b) for those with disabilities on entering training for work, for each TEC are:

Quangos

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the quangos within his Department's responsibility which he has to date announced his intention (a) to abolish and (b) to make subject to a significant element of democratic accountability. [9679]

Dr. Howells: The Department has not so far announced plans to abolish any of its quangos, or non-departmental public bodies. However, it is currently examining the role and responsibilities of each of our NDPBs as part of the Department's current spending review. In addition, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster announced last month a review of NDPBs with the aim of reducing overall numbers across Whitehall.

The issue of democratic accountability will also be addressed on an across-Whitehall basis with the launch in the autumn of a discussion paper considering how democratic oversight of NDPBs might best be enhanced. In the light of consultation, it is proposed to bring forward proposals in a forthcoming White Paper on better government.

Workskill

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has made to extend workskill pilots for the unemployed; and if he will make a statement. [11172]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Regulations have been approved by Parliament to allow four more workskill pilots to be introduced on 1 September 1997 to run for one year. These pilots will allow people who have been receiving jobseeker's allowance for six months or more to undertake employment-related education and training for up to one year:

full-time, in Scotland in the Glasgow and Dumbarton districts and in the north-west region in Lancashire and Cumbria districts; and part-time, in London and south-east region in south and south-east London districts and in the south-west region in Wiltshire, Avon and Somerset districts.

About 12,000 unemployed people will be able to benefit from the flexible arrangements to take up education or training: provision for 8,000 in these new pilots in addition to 4,000 in the pilots introduced in four areas last April.

The extension of workskill pilots supports our plans in the new deal where we are acting urgently to improve the employability and labour market prospects of the unemployed. The workskill pilots will help us to assess whether and how flexible arrangements in jobseeker's allowance help unemployed people to get and retain work, both in the short and long term.

We will further review the jobseeker's allowance rules on education and training in the light of the workskill pilots and early experience in the new deal.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Ministerial Chauffeurs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what is the average weekly pay of chauffeurs employed for driving ministerial cars; [10532]

(2) what are the average numbers of hours per week, including overtime, worked by secure chauffeurs for Government Ministers; [10531]

(3) what proportion of chauffeurs or drivers of ministerial cars (a) died in employment and (b) retired prematurely on health grounds in each of the last five years. [10533]

Dr. David Clark: Responsibility for the subject of these questions has been delegated to the Government Car and Despatch Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Nick Matheson. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Nick Matheson to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 24 July 1997:

I have been asked by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to reply to your three Parliamentary Questions about chauffeurs and drivers of ministerial cars. I am the Chief Executive of the Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA) which is responsible for the Government Car Services (GCS).

I will answer the questions in the same order, but I would like to prefix my reply by saying that information on drivers of ministerial cars cannot readily be separated from the rest of the GCS allocated drivers within the time available for this reply.

1. Information on GCS drivers' rates of pay is commercially sensitive.

2. For 1996–97 GCS drivers worked on average 70.23 hours per week. The basic week is 49 hours, and the average overtime worked was 21.23 hours.

3. For the whole of GCS the information is as follows:

Year	Total number of drivers	Died in service	Medically retired
1997 to date	139	2	1
1996–97	149	nil	2
1995–96	151	1	2
1994–95	154	nil	nil
1993–94	154	nil	1

"Government Direct" Green Paper

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the Government's policy on "Government Direct"; and if he will make a statement. [10391]

Dr. David Clark: The "Government.Direct" Green Paper contained many good ideas on making the best use of new technology and the new White Paper, "Better Government" will harness these with an agenda which will bring Government closer to the people and provide better services for everybody. We are continuing to consult interested parties who responded to the Green Paper.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what discussions he has had with the Minister without Portfolio regarding (a) the content and (b) the timing of publication of the White Paper on freedom of information. [10610]

Dr. David Clark: I have discussed the Government's proposals for a White Paper on freedom of information with many ministerial colleagues including the Minister without Portfolio.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will release the papers available to Ministers at the meeting on Thursday, 10 July where it was decided not to publish the White Paper on freedom of information before the summer Adjournment. [10573]

Dr. Clark: I will ensure that factual and analytical material relevant in forming the White Paper's proposals is made publicly available and I will bear this in mind as we approach the publication of the White Paper.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the Acts of Parliament which (a) contain provisions restricting the release of information and (b) apply criminal sanctions in respect of the unauthorised disclosure of information. [10574]

Dr. Clark: The previous Government's 1993 White Paper, "Open Government"—Cm 2290—listed those statutory provisions which restrict the release of information. Many of these Acts also make provision for criminal sanctions in the case of unauthorised disclosure.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if proposals to amend the 1977 Croham directive in respect of the release of background detail and information behind ministerial decisions will be included in the forthcoming White Paper on freedom of information. [10611]

Dr. Clark: The Government remain committed to the principles contained in the Croham directive but, 20 years on, they propose to build on them in their forthcoming White Paper on freedom of information.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list in respect of freedom of information regimes in other countries those countries which operate an appeal mechanism based on (a) the courts, (b) an independent ombudsman or commissioner and (c) a select committee or other parliamentary mechanism. [10609]

Dr. Clark: The table summarises the basic appeals mechanisms used in a number of leading freedom of information regimes.

Country	Courts	Ombudsman/Information Commissioner[1]	Select Committee or other parliamentary mechanism[2]
USA	Yes	No	No
Canada	Yes	Yes	No
Australia	Yes	Ombudsman or the Administrative Appeals Tribunal	No
New Zealand	Yes	Yes	Yes

Country	Courts	Ombudsman/Information Commissioner[1]	Select Committee or other parliamentary mechanism[2]
France	Yes	Yes	No
Sweden	Yes	No	No
Ireland	Yes	Yes	No

[1] Where the appeals mechanism incorporates both an Ombudsman and the courts and/or parliamentary review mechanism the appeal is usually directed to the Ombudsman in the first instance.

[2] Although Parliament may not play a formal role, the Ombudsman may still be an Officer of Parliament.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the statutory reforms recommended in the "Open Government" White Paper 1993, Cm 2290, which have been implemented. [10615]

Dr. Clark: The 1993 "Open Government" White Paper— Cm 2290—proposed two new statutory rights: (i) a statutory right for people to see their personal records held by Government and by other public sector authorities, and (ii) a statutory right of access to health and safety information. Neither was implemented.

The White Paper also proposed the selective insertion of "harm tests" into criminal provisions covering unauthorised disclosure of information as legislative opportunities arose. No such amendments were made.

These proposals of the previous Government will be superseded by comprehensive proposals for a Freedom of Information Act in our forthcoming White Paper.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Republic of Ireland

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps her Department is taking to persuade the Irish Government to withdraw their territorial claim to Northern Ireland. [7721]

Majorie Mowlam: The Government have consistently made clear their view that a lasting political settlement in Northern Ireland will require a consensus on constitutional issues, reflecting the widespread support which exists for the principle that there can be no change in the constitutional status of Northern Ireland as part of the United Kingdom without the consent of a majority of the people of Northern Ireland.

In a speech in Northern Ireland on 16 May, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister said that changes to the Irish constitution to reflect the consent principle would be a helpful confidence-building step in advance of any settlement.

Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the annual report and accounts of the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency will be made available to the House. [11222]

Majorie Mowlam: Copies of the annual reports and accounts of the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency have been placed in the Library of the House.

Training and Employment Agency

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Training and Employment Agency for the financial year 1997–98. [11223]

Mr. Worthington: The following key targets have been set for the agency for 1997–98:

1. to have 75 per cent. of company development programme client companies using NVQ-based training to raise the competence of their work force;

2. to encourage the commitment of Northern Ireland industry and commerce to the investors in people standard through the achievement of 50 new recognitions by March 1998, at least 25 of these to be achieved by companies in manufacturing or tradable services, or hotels registered with the NI Tourist Board;

3. to ensure that of the trainees who commenced mainstream jobskills in 1995–96, at least 45 per cent. achieve NVQ Level 2 or above;

(This target reflects the fact that a number of trainees will leave the programme, before completing their NVQ, in order to take up employment and other opportunities.)

4. to place 40,000 people into jobs and

5. to achieve efficiency savings of at least 6 per cent.

Copies of the agency's "Operational Plan 1997–98" will be placed in the parliamentary Libraries.

Policy Reviews

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list for each departmental policy review presently in progress or scheduled, (a) a description of the purpose of the review and (b) its expected date of completion. [10183]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 22 July 1997]: Departments carry out policy reviews on a continuous basis.

Major reviews currently in progress are as follows:

The Training and Employment Agency is reviewing its objectives and measures aimed at assisting the long-term unemployed back to work. Results are expected by the autumn.

The Department of Education (NI) is conducting a policy review of the Youth Service which will make recommendations for its future development. The report is expected by end-December 1998.

The Department of Education (NI) is conducting a review of school discipline to produce a strategy for the promotion and maintenance of good behaviour in schools. This will be published by Christmas 1997.

The Northern Ireland Office is carrying out a review of the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 1981 to assess whether it remains relevant, effective and proportionate to the level of public safety demanded by society today and the reasonable expectations of the shooting community and firearms trade. Completion is expected in October 1997.

WALES

Assisted Areas

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 17 July, Official Report, column 251, what is the population of the designated assisted areas of Wales; and how much of that population is in (a) the M4 corridor and (b) the A55 corridor.[10147]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 22 July 1997]: The total population of the designated assisted areas in Wales is estimated to be 2.1 million, of which 550,000 are estimated to be in the eastern M4 corridor and 180,000 in the eastern A55 corridor.

School Closures

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many infant, junior, primary and secondary schools were closed between 1979 and May 1997 in each county of Wales indicating how many closed (a) for financial reasons, (b) as a result of demographic change and (c) for other reasons; and if he will make a statement. [10245]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 24 July 1977]: The information requested is not held centrally. Details of the number of primary and secondary schools in each of the former counties of Wales in 1979 and 1996—the latest available data collected in this form—are shown in the following table:

	January 1979	January 1996[1]
Maintained primary schools[2]
Clwyd	266	241
Dyfed	354	310
Gwent	285	211
Gwynedd	200	191
Mid Glamorgan	319	301
Powys	131	105
South Glamorgan	174	157

West Glamorgan	28	27
Wales	224	228

[1] Includes grant maintained schools.
[2] Primary schools comprise 3 types of school: infants' for children aged 5 to 7, junior for those aged 7 to 11 and combined junior and infants for both age groups. Many primary schools also provide nursery classes for children aged under 5.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what would be the cost of sending the White Paper to every home in Wales prior to the referendum on a Welsh Assembly. [8463]

Mr. Ron Davies: We do not intend to send the White Paper to every home in Wales, and I have therefore made no such assessment.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list his meetings with Plaid Cymru and the Liberal Democrats relating to his proposals for a Welsh Assembly. [9883]

Mr. Davies: I have had no meetings with Plaid Cymru or the Liberal Democrat party.

Further Education

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people aged 16 to 19 years were attending (a) colleges of further education and (b) sixth-form colleges at each of the colleges in Wales in the last academic year; what percentage left these colleges (i) with one, two or three A levels grade 'C' and above, (ii) with A-levels A to E and (iii) with NVQ levels 2 and 3; and what percentage left the colleges without a recognised qualification. [8917]

Mr. Hain: The data collected centrally relate to students at college entered for examinations and do not permit analyses of students' qualifications as they leave college. Information on the number of people aged 16 to 18 attending further education colleges, including those described as sixth-form colleges, in Wales in December 1995 is given in the following table:

People aged 16 to 18 years at Further Education colleges in Wales at December 1995

Quangos

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the quangos within his Department's responsibility which he has to date announced his intention (a) to abolish and (b) to make subject to a significant element of democratic accountability. [9682]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have set out my proposals in the White Paper, "A Voice for Wales" published on 22 July, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Junior Doctors

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the percentage of junior doctors who have working conditions which do not meet the standards laid down in the new deal for junior doctors. [10576]

Mr. Win Griffiths: No estimate is available of the percentage of junior doctors effected, but the most recent survey carried out by the postgraduate school of the accommodation and facilities provided for junior doctors by district general hospitals in Wales showed that four out of 19 hospitals surveyed were not meeting the standards laid down.

SOCIAL SECURITY

War Pensioners

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the number of war pensioners likely to be living in England in the years (a) 2000, (b) 2005, (c) 2010 and (d) 2015. [9139]

Mr. Denham: The information is in the table.

Year	Number of war pensioners
2000	230,000
2005	190,000
2010	150,000
2015	120,000

1. Figures include both war disablement pensioners and war widows.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10,000.

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many war pensioners currently live in (a) England, (b) the city of Manchester and (c) the borough of Trafford. [9143]

Mr. Denham: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Estimated figures are set out in the table:

Area	Number of war pensioners
England	250,000
Manchester	4,500
Borough of Trafford	under 1,000

Quangos

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the quangos within her Department's responsibility which she has to date announced her intention (a) to abolish and (b) to make subject to a significant element of democratic accountability. [9672]

Mr. Keith Bradley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, to my hon. Friend the Member for West Lancashire (Mr. Pickthall) on 18 June, Official Report, column 174.

I also refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him today by my right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many successful claims there were for housing benefit in the Chelmsford local authority area by (a) council house/housing association tenants, (b) private sector tenants and (c) home owners in June for each year since 1990. [10307]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table:

Housing benefit recipients in Chelmsford, by tenure, May 1990 to May 1996

	Local authority tenants	Housing association tenants	Private landlord tenants (excluding housing associations except for 1990 and 1991)
May 1990	4,510	n/a	1,490
May 1991	4,730	n/a	1,170
May 1992	4,960	280	1,010
May 1993	5,090	160	1,450
May 1994	5,240	650	1,360
May 1995	5,110	810	1,350
May 1996	4,910	920	1,350

Notes:
1. The information refers to benefit units which may be a single person or a couple.
2. The figures are rounded to the nearest 10.
3. Information relating to housing association tenants was not collected separately prior to May 1992.
4. No information is available for home owners as generally they are not eligible for housing benefit.

Child Benefit

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make it her policy that the combined real value of child dependency addition and child benefit for the child of a widowed mother is at least maintained at its present real level in future upratings. [10567]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We are committee to retaining universal child benefit from birth to age 16, and to uprate it in line with prices. The rates of all benefits are reviewed annually.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the combined value of child dependency addition and child benefit for the child of a widowed mother (a) in cash terms, (b) in real terms and (c) as a percentage of average earnings, in November 1979 and at each subsequent uprating date. [10566]

Mr. Denham: The information is in the tables:

Child benefit and widowed mothers allowance child dependency increase for first child

1. The average earnings of full time adult employees was calculated using the "New Earnings Survey" and "Average Earnings Index", both produced by the Office of National Statistics.

2. The retail prices index (all items) was used to put Child Benefit and WMA child dependency addition into real terms as at April 1997. This was then compared with the provisional average earnings for April 1997 to give the percentage quoted.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the lower and upper national insurance contributions limits if they had been increased in line with average earnings since 1980; and what would be the current effect on the annual yield from contributions if (a) the lower limit, (b) the upper limit and (c) both limits were increased to those levels. [10571]

Mr. Denham: The lower and upper earnings limits for class 1 national insurance contributions and the lower and upper profits limits for class 4 national insurance contributions are linked to the level of the basic retirement pension. If the basic retirement pension had been uprated since 1980 in line with the higher of earnings or prices the weekly lower and upper earnings limits for 1997–98 would be £86 and £645 respectively and the annual lower and upper profits limits would be £9,653 and £33,540 respectively. The estimated full year effects of limits set at these levels for 1997–98 are shown in the tables.

Estimated full year effects of weekly lower and upper earnings limits for class 1 national insurance contributions set at £86 and £645 respectively in 1997–98

State Pensions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will ensure that individuals deciding to contract out of SERPS are sent before making that decision, a simple explanation of the scheme and the respects in which it differs from occupational and personal pension schemes. [10572]

Mr. Denham: We publish a booklet NP46 "A Guide to Retirement Pensions" which contains a comprehensive guide to SERPS and information on contracting-out of SERPS. This is available from DSS offices.

On 17 July, we announced a wide-ranging review of pensions which will address nine fundamental challenges. One of these is to raise awareness of pensions and improve the level of financial education so that people understand the importance of saving for retirement and make the right choice about which pension product is best for them.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the weekly state basic earnings-related and total pensions payable to men and women on average earnings and half average earnings reaching pension age in (a) 1997, (b) 2007, (c) 2017, (d) 2027, (e) 2037 and (f) 2047, (i) in cash terms and (ii) as a percentage of their pre-retirement earnings, assuming that the basic pension and the earnings limits for contributions are uprated in line with (1) prices and (2) average earnings. [10570]

Mr. Denham: The information is in the tables:

DEFENCE

Nuclear Weapons Safety Committee

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Nuclear Weapons Safety Committee was set up; what is the remit of the committee; if he will list the chairmen of the committee since 1967 indicating the years in which they served; what reports the committee produces; and what is the current security classification of each of the reports. [10404]

Dr. Reid: The Nuclear Weapons Safety Committee was established in 1959. Its current terms of reference are to advise my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence, the services and other interested MoD authorities on all safety matters pertaining to nuclear weapons systems, including issues of design, manufacture, transport, storage, handling and operational training.

The present chairman of the committee is Professor Sir John Cadogan CBE FRSE HON FEng FRS; he was appointed in 1992. The previous chairmen, both of whom are deceased, were appointed on the understanding that their names would remain confidential. The production of reports is dependent upon the business of the committee at any given time. The classifications of reports range from restricted to top secret.

Aircraft Crashes

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what categories his Department used to define the damage caused to its aircraft which have crashed; and when his Department instituted these categories. [10405]

Mr. Spellar: For administrative purposes, aircraft are assigned one of five damage categories. These are defined as follows:

Category 1—damage repairable on site by established first-line maintenance personnel.

Category 2—damage repairable on site by established second-line maintenance personnel.

Category 3—damage repairable on site but beyond unit technical resources. Assistance from a repair and salvage unit or civilian contractor is required.

Category 4—damage is not repairable on site and the aircraft must be removed to a established repair depot or civilian repair organisation.

Category 5—aircraft is damaged beyond economic repair or is missing.

Records show that the first use of the numeric system appeared in 1956.

Nuclear Weapons (US Aircraft)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy in respect of the use of United Kingdom airspace by United States aircraft carrying nuclear weapons. [10691]

Dr. Reid: United States aircraft transporting nuclear weapons for logistical purposes are permitted to use United Kingdom airspace. As I told the hon. Member in my answer of 14 July, Official Report, column 61, all movements of nuclear materials, including weapons, by US personnel within the UK and its airspace take place in full consultation with my Department. This enables appropriate safety cover to be provided by MoD personnel.

Land Mines

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral answers of 16 June, Official Report, column 5, and 14 July, Official Report, columns 14 15 on anti-personnel landmines, when he was informed that it was not the case that all British anti-personnel land mines had been taken up following conflicts in the Falkland Islands and the Gulf. [9666]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 21 July 1997]: On 13 July 1997.

Mission Statement

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if his Department's mission statement will include expenditure objectives; [10118]

(2) if he will list the benchmarks by which Parliament will be able to measure his Department's progress on its mission statement; [10119]

(3) if his Department's mission statement will include an ethical objective; [10120]

(4) if he plans to publish his Department's mission statement before the summer Adjournment. [10121]

Dr. Reid: The precise coverage of the Ministry of Defence's mission statement remains under consideration. We do not now expect to issue the mission statement before the summer Adjournment.

RAF Strike Command

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what sum is allocated to maintaining RAF strike command in the current financial year; and what that is as percentage of the defence budget. [10117]

Dr. Reid: Cm 3602 "The Government's Expenditure, Plans 1997–1998 to 1999–2000", a copy of which is in the Library of the House, identifies a total planned allocation for RAF strike command in the current financial year of £1,722 million, representing 7.89 per cent. of the total planned defence budget.

Biological and Chemical Weapons

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what stockpiles exist in the United Kingdom of (a) biological weapons and (b) chemical weapons; in how many locations these are kept; and what total volume of each existed within the United Kingdom in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1986, [10693]

Dr. Reid: The United Kingdom has not possessed an offensive biological weapons capability since shortly after the second world war. The UK gave up its offensive chemical weapons capability in the 1950s and had disposed of its stocks of such weapons by 1960. Indeed, we are party to the 1972 biological and toxin weapons convention and the 1993 chemical weapons convention, which explicitly ban the stockpiling of biological and chemical weapons.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Local Government (Sanctions)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what approach he will adopt when considering applications for sanction by local authorities under sections 19 and 20 of the Local Government Act 1982; and if he will make a statement. [11144]

Ms Armstrong: As required by the statute, we shall decide each application on its merits having regard both to our policy on sanction applications and to the circumstances of the individual case concerned. Our policy is to continue the approach previously followed, namely, that the power to sanction should not be exercised too widely. Sanction may be appropriate in those cases where the expenditure is incurred in good faith, but in ignorance of the strict letter of the law, or inadvertently without observance of requisite formalities, or under such circumstances as make it fair and equitable that the expenditure should not be disallowed by the auditor.

In accordance with our commitment to open government, we are today sending to the Local Government Association, the Audit Commission, the Commission for Local Administration and to all local authorities in England a departmental note setting out the basis on which applications for sanction under sections 19 and 20 of the Local Government Financial Act 1982 are to be made and considered. I am arranging for copies of the note to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mesothelioma

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the concentration of mesothelioma in the last 10 years. [10536]

Angela Eagle: A detailed analysis of the geographical concentrations of mesothelioma in the period 1976 to 1991 was published in "Health and Safety Statistics 1995–96"—pages 72–75 and table 2.18—a copy of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Sellafield

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what factors are being taken into account by the Environment Agency in deciding whether to authorise the establishment of a mixed oxide plant at Sellafield. [10694]

Angela Eagle: The Environment Agency is considering British Nuclear Fuels' application for commissioning and operation of the Sellafield mixed oxide plant. It will take into account issues relevant to justification, risks to the public and environment, national policy on radioactive waste management and the UK's international obligations.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of extra (a) flights, (b) movements by sea and (c) movements by road of radioactive material which would result from the opening of a mixed oxide plant at Sellafield. [10689]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The production and transportation of mixed oxide—MOX—fuel at Sellafield are matters for the site's operators, BNFL.

(a) I refer the hon. Member to my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Lancaster and Wyre (Mr. Dawson), Official Report, 21 July, column 420.

(b) and (c) I understand from the company that MOX fuel has been produced and shipped from the Sellafield site since the 1960s. The new Sellafield MOX plant—SMP—is expected to produce its first fuel towards the end of 1998. In common with previous shipments, transport of finished MOX assemblies from the SMP will be by road and/or rail for onward shipment by air or sea as appropriate. However, delivery direct to the customer by road and/or rail is not precluded.

The number of movements associated with the dispatch of finished fuel assemblies will result in only a marginal increase in the existing number of commercial movements from Sellafield.

The packages used for these movements, by road, rail, sea or air, are approved and certificated for use within the United Kingdom by this Department, and must be transported in accordance with UK statutory safety requirements.

Quangos

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the quangos within his Department's responsibility which he has to date announced his intention (a) to abolish and (b) to make subject to a significant element of democratic accountability. [9681]

Angela Eagle: The Assessment Panel for Construction Research—an advisory non-departmental public body—was wound up on 14 July 1997.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, gave to my hon. Friend the hon. Member for The Wrekin (Mr. Bradley) on 24 July 1997, Official Report, column 693, on the extension of democratic accountability to quangos.

Crime Prevention

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance his Department has issued on the consideration of issues of crime prevention in the planning process. [10257]

Mr. Raynsford: Circular 5/94, entitled, "Planning Out Crime", was published in February 1994 and gives advice to local authorities, developers and designers about planning considerations relating to crime prevention.

Painshill Copse Gipsy Site

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the inspectors's report and decision on the public inquiry into the Painshill Copse gipsy site. [9967]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend issued his decision on this case on 23 July. He accepted the inspector's recommendation that permission be granted for the continued use of land at Lydia park, Painshill Copse as a residential gipsy caravan site, subject to conditions. I have sent the right hon. Member a copy of the decision letter and the inspector's report.

New Homes

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of new homes that will be built in 1999; and if he will make a statement. [9785]

Mr. Raynsford: In recent years, my Department has not made national forecasts of the number of dwellings that will be built in future years. We are currently reviewing estimates of the requirement for housing up to 2016, and this will help to inform any future forecasts of house building levels.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many and what percentage of employees, in each payband, in the quangos for which his Department is responsible, are of (a) Asian origin and (b) Afro-Caribbean origin. [8959]

Angela Eagle: The recruitment and employment of staff is the responsibility of each individual body which seeks to attract applicants from diverse backgrounds. The Department, for its part, is keen, wherever possible, to encourage equality of opportunity within non-departmental public bodies. The information requested is not held by my Department.

Lorry Weights

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the decision on the 44-tonne weight limit for lorries will be announced. [10529]

Ms Glenda Jackson: It is too soon to say. We are still considering the responses to the previous Government's consultative document and the wider policy implications.

Driving Hours

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, (1) pursuant to his answer of 3 July, Official Report, column 254, on permitted driving hours, when he expects an opportunity will arise to amend legislation to give officers powers to prohibit the drivers of UK registered vehicles; [10579]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 3 July, Official Report, column 253, on the powers of traffic enforcement officers, in what ways the powers of enforcement officers to inspect and remove tachograph charts and to search for other evidence will be clarified; and when he expects an opportunity for amending legislation will arise. [10578]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We wish to remove any possible doubt that authorised examiners can enter and inspect vehicles in order to check tachographs and records and that they can require records to be sent to their offices for inspection and copying. These changes and those relating to the power to prohibit will require primary legislation and I can only reiterate that we will promote amending legislation when a suitable opportunity arises.

Roads (A303 Improvements)

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the improvements to the A303 Sparkford-Ilchester section approved at the public inquiry in August 1994 can proceed independently of the Salisbury bypass section of the A303. [9836]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This scheme is included in the accelerated review announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Transport on 19 June. We hope to announce the results of that review later this month.

Vehicle Year Identifier

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when his Department will announce the results of its consultation paper on the vehicle year identifier. [10617]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We intend to make an announcement shortly.

Rail Freight

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of track access charges on rail freight operators. [10684]

Ms Glenda Jackson: All Railtrack track access agreements are subject to the approval of the Rail Regulator. Railtrack is expected to allow onto the network freight flows which can cover at least the marginal costs they impose. For traffic which cannot even meet these costs, track access grant is available in recognition of the environmental and wider social benefits of sending freight by rail rather than by road.

Unleaded Petrol

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many cars have been modified for use of unleaded petrol in each of the last five years. [10251]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information required is not held centrally. Most modifications to vehicles to enable them to run on unleaded petrol are likely to have taken place in the years immediately following the introduction of unleaded petrol in April 1987, encouraged by the duty differential in favour of that product. This is reflected in the rapid increase in unleaded petrol sales to 40 per cent. of total petrol sales by April 1991. From that date, subsequent increases in the sales of unleaded petrol are likely to be attributable primarily to the statutory requirement for new petrol-engined vehicles, with some time-limited exemptions, to be designed and constructed so as to be able to run on unleaded petrol, and from 1993, to the need for catalyst-equipped vehicles to use only unleaded petrol.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of (a) cars, (b) motor cycles and (c) light goods vehicles, which are able to use (i) four-star petrol only, (ii) unleaded petrol only and (iii) either four-star petrol or unleaded petrol. [10249]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Vehicles which are able to use only unleaded petrol are generally those fitted with catalytic convertors. An estimated 7 million petrol-engined cars and light good vehicles are so fitted. An estimated 1.3 million cars and light goods vehicles not fitted with catalytic convertors must be able to use unleaded petrol. In addition some 604,000 motor cycles are estimated to be able to use unleaded petrol. The remaining 12.4 million cars and light goods vehicles and 130,000 motor cycles were originally designed to use leaded petrol. However, the experience of countries such as the United States and Sweden indicates that most of these can safely use premium or super-unleaded petrol as an alternative, with the addition of a lead-replacement additive if it is felt necessary to afford a greater degree of protection against the possibility of increased seat wear.

Seat Belts

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will impose standards on the advertising of seat belts installation services. [10234]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department has produced advice notes, setting out what we consider to be best technical practice, for those involved in the installation of seat belts. The issue of trading standards is the responsibility of the Department of Trade and Industry which has confirmed that legislation already exists to prevent traders from making false claims about their goods and services. Enforcement of these regulations is a matter for local trading standards officers.

UK-Taipei Flights

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had, and with whom, about the bilateral civil aviation agreement between the United Kingdom and the Republic of China on Taiwan in respect of the number of flights between the United Kingdom and Taipei. [10515]

Ms Glenda Jackson: None. Flights between the United Kingdom and Taiwan are operated under an agreement between airlines.

Air Services

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what destinations in the United Kingdom have ceased to be served by direct air services from London's Heathrow and Gatwick airports since 1979. [10079]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Domestic destinations that had direct air services from Heathrow and Gatwick airports in 1979, which have since ceased operating, are as follows:

Heathrow	Gatwick
Prestwick	Bournemouth
Norwich	Exeter
Liverpool	Inverness[1]
Humberside	Teesside[1]
Cardiff	Prestwick
Birmingham	East Midlands
East Midlands	Blackpool

[1] Inverness and Teesside continue to have direct services from Heathrow.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he is taking to ensure that during negotiations with the European Union sufficient slots are made available at major continental airports for the maintenance and development of air services from key regional centres of the United Kingdom. [10080]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are awaiting proposals from the European Commission for revisions to the Council regulation governing airport slot allocation in the Community. On receipt of those proposals, we will take account of the needs of access to the continent from key regional centres in the UK in preparing our position for negotiations in the Transport Council.

Portsmouth Port

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the (a) tonnage of goods and (b) passenger numbers which passed through the port of Portsmouth in the last year for which figures are available; and in each case where Portsmouth ranked relative to other United Kingdom ports. [10334]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The latest figures available are taken from "Port Statistics 1995" published by HMSO.

(a) In 1995, some 4.4 million tonnes of freight passed through Portsmouth. Portsmouth was the 20th largest port in the United Kingdom.

(b) Passenger numbers are published only for international sea passenger traffic. In 1995, Portsmouth was the second busiest international passenger port in the United Kingdom with 3.3 million international sea passenger movements through the port. Portsmouth also has significant domestic traffic, however information supplied to the Department on UK domestic passenger routes is commercially confidential.

A3

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many (a) accidents and (b) fatalities occurred on the A3 in each of the last three years; and what percentage of each occurred in the Waverley local authority area. [10332]

Ms Glenda Jackson: (a) Personal injury road accidents on the A3 were recorded as follows:

	1994	1995	1996
Injury accidents on the A3	1,223	1,105	1,093
Injury accidents on the A3 in Waverley	107	79	88
Percentage	9	7	8

(b) Road accident fatalities on the A3 were recorded as follows:

	1994	1995	1996
Fatalities on the A3	9	8	11
Fatalities on the A3 in Waverley	2	1	0
Percentage	22	13	0

Mrs. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many miles of the A3 between London and Portsmouth are single carriageway; and if he will list their locations. [10333]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mrs. Virginia Bottomley, dated 25 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to reply to your recent question about how many miles of the A3 between London and Portsmouth are single carriageway and where they are located.

The A3 around Hindhead in south west Surrey is the last remaining section of single carriageway between Wandsworth in south west London and Portsmouth. It is approximately 4.1 miles in length.

Street Works (Householders' Liability)

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the provisions of the Highways Act 1980 relating to the liabilities of householders whose properties are located on road junctions to apportionments for street work arising from both frontages. [10390]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have no plans to review these provisions. As the law stands, it is open to a highway authority to adopt an unadopted street, but the frontagers are legally liable for the cost of any works necessary to bring it up to the required standard first; the charge is normally based on the respective lengths of the frontages of the properties which adjoin the street, though the highway authority may modify such an apportionment by taking into account the degree of likely benefit to individual householders when calculating their apportionments. It also has discretion to contribute towards the costs of the works as a whole or those borne by flank or rear frontages. Properties on private streets may be expected to cost less than they otherwise would, because of the liability for private street works expenses.

Marine Environment

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to publish a consultation document on marine environmental high-risk areas; and if he will make a statement. [10403]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are completing the development of criteria to identify areas which are both of high environmental interest and at risk from shipping. Once these criteria have been developed, a decision will be taken on how the concept of marine environmental high-risk areas should be taken forward and appropriate consultations will be carried out.

CABINET OFFICE

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what plans he has to emphasise the Christian character of the Millennium celebrations at Greenwich. [8046]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 14 July 1997]: We recognise that the millennium is both a Christian anniversary and an important landmark for everyone who measures time by the Gregorian calendar. Physical and spiritual renewal will be one of the key themes of the new millennium experience at Greenwich. We shall be working closely with the Christian Churches, and with those of other faiths and none, to achieve this.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what was the cost to public funds of the launch of the millennium experience on 26 June. [7986]

Mr. Mandelson: The cost to the Department for Culture, Media and Sport was £5,074.20.

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how many tourists he expects to visit the millennium exhibition at Greenwich. [8047]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 14 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison) Official Report, 21 July 1997, column 392.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio, pursuant to his answer of 7 July, Official Report, column 324, what arrangements he made to ensure that he would be present in the Chamber on 21 July to answer the question about the millennium dome if it were reached. [10682]

Mr. Mandelson: I have nothing to add to the points made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport in answer to the hon. Member's point of order on 21 July, Official Report, columns 700–01.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Broiler Chickens

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the percentage of broiler chickens infected with salmonella; and what was the percentage in each of the last 10 years. [8659]

Mr. Rooker: The levels of salmonella in broiler chickens are surveyed periodically at the retail stage. The Advisory Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Food produced a report on poultry meat in 1996 which contains details of Government-funded retail surveys on the prevalence of salmonella in UK-produced raw chicken. This information is set out in the table.

Prevalence of Salmonella spp. in raw chicken, 1979–1994

Survey	Source and type	Number of chickens	Number (percentage) with salmonella spp.
1979–80	UK, frozen	100	79 (79)
1987	UK, frozen	101	65 (64)
1990	UK, frozen	143	77 (54)
1994	UK, frozen	281	114 (41)
1987	UK, chilled	103	56 (54)
1990	UK, chilled	143	58 (41)
1994	UK, chilled	281	93 (33)

As can be seen from the table, the prevalence of salmonella in chickens on retail sale has declined markedly over the years. However, it remains essential to observe the normal rules of food hygiene when handling and cooking chickens in order to minimise the risk of food poisoning.

Beaufort's Dyke

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with Ferranti Ltd. concerning where it was dumping radioactive waste prior to its agreement in July 1957 to dump it in Beaufort's Dyke. [9966]

Mr. Rooker: None.

Responsibility for dumping at sea and for the disposal of radioactive waste in Scotland rests with the Secretary of State for Scotland. His officials are currently in discussion with the company concerned, and, as undertaken in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Kirkcaldy (Dr. Moonie) on 1 July Official Report, columns 158–60, any new information found will be reported to the House.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what estimate he has made of the time local veterinary inspectors spend inspecting animals destined for export to ensure they are fit to travel as required by the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997; and if he will make a statement; [10279]

(2) if he will end the practice under which exporters of live farm animals can select which local veterinary inspector is to inspect the animals for export health certification purposes; and if he will make a statement; [10301]

(3) if he will end the practice under which exporters of live farm animals make a direct payment to the local veterinary inspector to undertake the export health certification. [10300]

Mr. Morley: These issues are being considered as part of a departmental review of pre-export procedures for live animals. The conclusions of this review will be announced as soon as practicable.

Meat Hygiene Service

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many firms are paying (a) more and (b) less for supervising operations since the Meat Hygiene Service took over the supervision of meat hygiene. [10337]

Mr. Rooker: The Meat Hygiene Service took over responsibility from local authorities for meat hygiene and inspection in licensed fresh meat premises on 1 April 1995.

Information on the actual costs for meat inspection under local authorities is not available. Overall, the total cost of meat inspection has been substantially reduced, from an estimated cost of the service provided by local authorities of £45 million per annum to the total cost of the service provided by the Meat Hygiene Service in 1995–96 of £35 million. There is clear evidence that some local authorities were subsidising their costs in some way. This has inevitably meant that some individual operators are paying more than they did previously. On the other hand-meat inspection charges to other operators have fallen.

Melatonin

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his Department's policy towards foods containing melatonin. [10363]

Mr. Rooker: Foods containing the hormone melatonin, like all other foods in the UK, have to comply with the provisions of the Food Safety Act 1990, for example they should be of the nature, substance and quality demanded by the consumer and not be injurious to health.

Cattle Carcases

Mr. Green: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle carcases are currently held in cold storage in Kent. [10354]

Mr. Rooker: No carcases from cattle slaughtered under the over-30-months scheme are currently being held in cold storage in Kent, although some 160 tonnes of intervention beef is being stored in the county. Information on commercial stocks of beef in cold storage in Kent is not available centrally.

Mr. Green: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the cold store facilities currently available to take over-30-months scheme cattle in Kent. [10356]

Mr. Rooker: Four cold stores in Kent have been used for the storage of over-30-months scheme material. These are at Paddock Wood, Gillingham, Swanley and Thamesport. All of these stores have now been emptied of OTMS material and contracts are in the process of being terminated. We do not envisage the need to store OTMS material in cold stores in the future.

Quangos

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the quangos within his Department's responsibility which he has to date announced his intention (a) to abolish and (b) to make subject to a significant element of democratic accountability. [9677]

Mr. Morley: (a) In a news release on 28 May 1997, my right hon. Friend announced the disbanding of the Ministry's nine advisory regional panels.

Additionally, action is being taken on the other MAFF quangos in line with the Prime Minister's written statement to my hon. Friend the Member for West Lancashire (Mr. Pickthall) on 18 June, Official Report, column 174.

(b) Following the written statement by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on extending the democratic accountability of quangos to my hon. Friend the Member for The Wrekin (Mr. Bradley) on 24 July, Official Report, column 693, the Ministry's position will be reviewed.

Silage Wrap

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidance he gives farmers concerning the safe disposal of black silage bag plastic. [9989]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 20 June 1997, Official Report, column 314.

Avoparcin

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the proportion of poultry flocks which are administered the food additive avoparcin. [9992]

Mr. Rooker: In December 1996, the European Commission presented a proposal to the Standing Committee banning the use of avoparcin as an additive in animal feed. The proposal was agreed by qualified majority and the UK implemented the ban on the use of avoparcin as a feed additive by the 1 April 1997 deadline. Product licences containing avoparcin were revoked with effect from 31 March. Avoparcin is therefore no longer authorised as a feed additive for use in poultry flocks.

Mr. Heath: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into links between avoparcin feed additive for poultry and vancomycin-resistant enterococcal infections in humans. [9993]

Mr. Rooker: The Government take very seriously the possibility of the development of antibiotic resistance in humans and animals as a result of the use of antibiotics in animal feed. This is carefully examined as part of the safety assessment of applications for authorisations for antimicrobial products, and is kept under review by the independent scientific Veterinary Products Committee which advises the Government on the safety, quality and efficacy of veterinary medicines. In considering the use of antibiotics, the committee has consistently followed the principles established in the report of the Joint Committee on the Use of Antibiotics in Animal Husbandry and Veterinary Medicine—the Swann report—of 1969. The VPC evaluated the report on Avoparcin produced by the European Commission's Scientific Committee on Animal Nutrition and endorsed its conclusion that, on the basis of science the evidence presented did not establish a risk to human health, animal health or the environment.

Apart from regular reviews by the VPC, a number of other recent initiatives into the issue of antibiotic resistance have been undertaken. The Advisory Committee on Microbiological Safety of Food has set up a working group to assess the risks to humans from antibiotic resistant micro-organisms entering the food chain. The working group is expected to report by the end of the year. Secondly, following the ban on avoparcin, a Commission working group has prepared a programme for the monitoring of resistance to a number of antibiotics in pigs and poultry. Samples are to be taken in slaughterhouses in a number of member states including the UK. The EU Committee for Veterinary Medicinal Products has also set up an ad hoc working party to investigate the prevalence and effects of anitmicrobial resistance in animals and potential for transfer to man. Finally, the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology has established a sub-committee on resistance to anti-microbial agents. It aims to report in early 1998.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which industries are currently covered by minimum wage legislation; and what the minimum wage is in each for a 16-year-old casual worker. [10577]

Mr. Morley: Agriculture is currently the only industry covered by minimum wage legislation. Rates are reviewed annually in England and Wales. The minimum hourly rate of pay from 1 June 1997 for a 16-year-old casual worker undertaking agricultural work is £1.84. The rate for casual workers for anyone aged 19 and over is £3.06 per hour.

Cattle Cull

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he is taking to ensure the saleability of cattle born after 1 August 1996. [9543]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 21 July 1997]: We are discussing with the European Commission a proposal to allow the export of meat from cattle born after a specified date. The first of August 1996 is a key date as, from that date, it became an offence to use or possess mammalian meat and bone meal on a farm and remaining stocks on farms had to be surrendered by that date. This, together with the introduction of cattle passports in July 1996, means that we are able to offer additional safeguards in respect of animals born after that date to our trading partners.

HEALTH

Ministerial Responsibilities

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list his top three priority issues in respect of each of the sub-headings to each area of responsibility listed in respect of the list of ministerial responsibilities of each of his Department's Ministers. [9816]

Ms Jowell: The list of ministerial responsibilities referred to is not a template for the priorities of the Department of Health. The broad scope of the Department means that each Minister has responsibility for particular areas of work, but priorities are set across the whole Department, and every Minister's areas of responsibility feed into them. For this reason, a list of issues categorised by the sub-headings in that list would not encapsulate our priorities.

Public Health Initiatives

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce joint funding for health authorities and local authorities in respect of joint initiatives on public health. [10176]

Ms Jowell: Joint working between health and local authorities and other statutory and voluntary bodies will be an important element in delivering our manifesto commitments on public health. We shall be looking at ways to encourage co-operative working across such boundaries.

Psychiatric Care

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy in respect of mixed wards in psychiatric hospitals with particular reference to the specific religions and cultural concerns of members of ethnic minority communities. [9968]

Mr. Boateng: We recognise that there are some problems for particular ethnic minorities. Our policy is set out in "The Patient's Charter and Mental Health Services" which says that "if you would prefer to be cared for in single sex accommodation your wishes will be respected wherever possible"

In January this year, the NHS chief executive wrote to all health authorities and trusts to ask them to set targets in relation to upholding patient privacy and dignity including safe facilities for patients who are mentally ill.

Solvent Abuse

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the figures for deaths from solvent and volatile substances abuse by (a) region, (b) product abused and (c) age in the last year for which figures are available. [10223]

Ms Jowell: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Heywood and Middleton (Mr. Dobbin) on 30 June Official Report, columns 30–31. The report is also available on the Internet on http:/www.sghms.ac.uk/phs/index.htm.

Quangos

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the quangos within his Department's responsibility which he has to date announced his intention (a) to abolish and (b) to make subject to a significant element of democratic accountability. [9674]

Ms Jowell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health has not yet announced the abolition of any of the Department's quangos. However, the Department is to take part in a Government-wide review of quangos, as announced by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 18 June, Offical Report, column 174, to identify any suitable for merger or abolition. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State recently announced his intention that future national health service trust board meetings will be held in public. In addition, those appointed to serve on NHS trusts and health authorities will be more representative of the community they serve, including more users of NHS services, more carers and more people involved in representing the community's interests. These measures will improve the accountability of local NHS boards to local people.

Vancomycin-resistant Enterococcal Infection

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many reported cases of vancomycin-resistant enterococcal infection there were in (a) 1996 and (b) 1997 to date. [9994]

Ms Jowell: No central data on the number of cases of infection with vancomycin-resistant enterococci are collected. However, national epidemiological data are compiled by the Public Health Laboratory Service, from isolates—specimens of bacteria isolated from patients—submitted voluntarily by hospitals in England and Wales for specialist microbiological tests. The total number of isolates submitted in 1996 was 1,800 and for 1997 the figure is 203 to the end of May 1997. These data do not record the number of affected patients or the proportion of cases of infection rather than colonisation—non-infected carrier state—with VRE. However, the PHLS estimates that about 10 per cent. of these totals represent cases of true infection due to the organism.

Mesothelioma

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will include mesothelioma as a topic for inclusion in the work carried out by (a) the UK Cochrane Centre and (b) the NHS centre for reviews and dissemination. [10534]

Mr. Boateng: The United Kingdom Cochrane centre and the national health service centre for reviews and dissemination plan to address mesothelioma in the context of their wider work on lung cancer.

Cancer

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking to ensure the implementation of the recommendations of the 1995 expert advisory group on cancer; which recommendations have yet to be implemented; and what factors underlie the non-implementation of those recommendations not yet implemented. [10537]

Mr. Boateng: The Government have given their full support to the implementation of the recommendations of the 1995 expert advisory group on cancer and £10 million has been made available recurrently to improve the diagnosis and treatment of breast cancer. The aim is to ensure that all women have speedy access to high quality diagnosis and treatment, based on Calman/Hine networks of cancer care. Guidance has been published on improving outcomes in breast cancer and on the provision of palliative care services.

A great deal of work has already been undertaken within the national health service to implement the recommendations with much being achieved locally. A key element has been the identification of cancer units and centres and the local agreement of where and what cancers should be treated at each individual hospital. In many regions, this has involved site visits by multi-disciplinary teams to assess cancer provision against agreed cancer standards, to identify strengths and weaknesses and to agree a time scale for change.

Although full implementation is planned to take some five to 10 years, we will continue to ensure that the programme is given a high priority. We are currently considering what further action should be taken both nationally and locally to ensure these improvements to cancer services are taken forward as quickly as possible.

Vitamin B6

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the report of the Government's Committee on Toxicity recommending restrictions on the use of vitamin B6 was published; and what further research has been conducted by the committee on toxicity since that date. [10667]

Ms Jowell: A statement on the toxicity of vitamin B6 by the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment—COT—was made available to the general public on 4 July 1997. Availability was announced in a Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food news release on Government action following COT and Food Advisory Committee advice on vitamin B6.

It is not part of the COT's remit to conduct research. However, it does review the available data on the toxicity of chemicals; this is both papers published in scientific journals and submissions from industry. In this case, the COT considered more than 100 papers before coming to its conclusion.

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received recently concerning the sale of vitamin B6. [10666]

Ms Jowell: Both the Department of Health and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have jointly received approximately 1,000 letters making representations about vitamin B6. A significant proportion of these are in a standard format. However, on 23 July my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker) and I met representatives of industry groups and nutritional therapy/alternative medicine interests, to listen to their views on the intended changes to the legislation controlling of vitamin B6 containing dietary supplements.

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated by his Department concerning the effectiveness of vitamin B6. [10668]

Ms Jowell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health has not commissioned any research into the effectiveness of vitamin B6. Data from pharmaceutical companies, on the efficacy of medicinal products containing vitamin B6 have been evaluated by the licensing authority and its expert advisory bodies in relation to applications for marketing authorisation submitted to the Medicines Control Agency. Following grant of a marketing authorisation, the MCA continues to monitor efficacy in relation to safety for all authorised medicinal products, including those containing vitamin B6.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Visitor Visas (Iraqi Citizens)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy on the issue of visitor visas to Iraqi citizens who are relatives of United Kingdom citizens where such visas are sponsored by the United Kingdom citizen; what humanitarian considerations are taken into account in the processing of such applications; and if he will make a statement. [10270]

Mr. Fatchett: Iraqi citizens seeking to visit relatives in the UK are considered under the terms of the UK immigration rules in the same way as any other visa national. However, all applications from Iraqi nationals between the ages of 18 and 65 and employees of certain Iraqi organisations are referred to London for clearance.

When considering any visa application, the entry clearance officer, no matter what the nationality of the applicant, will take into any relevant compassionate circumstances into consideration.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the papers in the case of the constituent of the hon. Member for Walsall, North, No. IMM/ECR/0410/95/5 and Q4/40/97 were sent by the British high commission in New Delhi, to the correspondence unit of the migration and visa department in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office; and what is the current position on this case. [10451]

Mr. Fatchett: We have asked our high commission in New Delhi for a detailed account of the application and my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs will write to my hon. Friend within one week of receiving that account.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Walsall, North of 1 July regarding a constituent. [10452]

Mr. Fatchett: My hon. Friend's letter was passed to the migration and visa division of this Department on 17 July for response. It aims to reply within 15 working days of this date, that is, 7 August.

British Aerospace

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his meeting with representatives of British Aerospace on 16 July. [10453]

Mr. Fatchett: British Aerospace representatives asked to call to brief me on their overseas business interests in the Asia-Pacific region, including Indonesia. I took the opportunity to explain the background to the current review of criteria to be used in considering licence applications for the export of conventional arms.

Sudan

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will urge the United Nations to establish a slave tracing programme to identify the location of slaves in Sudan and to bring about a reunion with their families. [10669]

Mr. Fatchett: The United Nations, through UNICEF, already has a programme to reunite families in Sudan. We fully support that programme and others with the same objective.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent dialogue he has had with representatives of Sudan's National Democratic Alliance; and how he intends to support their efforts. [10670]

Mr. Fatchett: I met the former Prime Minister, Sadiq al Mahdi, and an accompanying delegation on 19 May. Officials are in regular touch with representatives of the National Democratic Alliance in line with our policy of keeping open links to all sides in Sudan. We sympathise with many of the NDA's concerns about the present Government in Khartoum. But we have no plans to support their efforts, which focus on overthrowing that Government.

General Affairs Council

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the General Affairs Council on 22 July. [11066]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The 36 A points in document 9959/97, the text of which will be placed in the House Library as soon as it is available, were approved.

The Council noted the resolutions adopted by the European Parliament, listed in document 8776/97. A copy of that document will also be placed in the House Library as soon as it is available.

The Council began with a debate on the Luxembourg presidency programme. The Luxembourg Foreign Minister outlined their priorities: the Special European Council on employment in October; preparation for enlargement; relations with Africa; and the fight against drugs. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs made it clear that we want to take forward the Agenda 2000 package presented by the Commission, with a view to the early launching of the next stage in the enlargement process. We also need to ensure that the EU focuses on issues of concern to its citizens: above all on jobs.

The Commission presented its Agenda 2000 communication—covering enlargement, policy reform and future financing. Member states held an initial exchange of views. Three—Italy, Sweden and Denmark—opposed the Commission's recommendation that the EU should negotiate only with those central European applicants which it judged sufficiently prepared. There was a general recognition of the need for policy reform, but some of the principal CAP and structural and cohesion fund beneficiaries made clear their concerns. Detailed discussion will begin in the autumn, with a view to the Luxembourg European Council taking the necessary decisions so that accession negotiations can begin in early 1998, during the UK's presidency of the EU.

On Iran, the Council agreed the continuing need for EU solidarity, including on the return of EU ambassadors to Tehran.

The EU special envoy on the middle east peace process briefed the Council on developments in the region. The council discussed ways in which the European Union could contribute ending the current deadlock and to a resumption of negotiations on the basis of the agreements signed between the two sides. The Council had meetings with the Israeli Foreign Minister, David Levy, and the presidency of the Palestinian Authority, Yasser Arafat.

The Council discussed a report from the European Commission on exports to the European Union from the occupied territories in the context of the European Community interim association agreements with Israel and the PLO.

The Council briefly discussed the draft 1998 EC budget and in particular the level of structural funds payments.

The presidency and the Netherlands put forward new proposals on the trade aspects of the overseas countries and territories mid-term review, including quotas for rice—160,000 tonnes—and sugar—3,000 tonnes. There was no discussion and the item was remitted for further discussion in the working group, with a view to a decision being taken at the 15 September General Affairs Council.

The Council agreed, by a qualified majority, the framework agreement on humane trapping standards and a list of countries from which the import of furs into the European Union will be permitted. It also agreed a declaration that the Commission would do everything possible to accelerate the implementation of the agreement. We argued that the Community should not put its name to an agreement which continued to allow the use of leghold traps, which we consider inhumane. The United Kingdom therefore voted against the framework agreement, with the support of Austria and Belgium. We also tabled a minutes statement explaining why we had voted against the proposal and pointing out that we consider the agreement to be an interim measure only and expect work to continue to ensure that the use of leghold traps is brought to an end as quickly as possible.

The Council discussed the proposed EU/Jordan association agreement. We hope that this can be concluded as soon as possible.

The Council reiterated EU support for OAU/UN efforts to resolve the crisis in Congo—Brazzaville. An EU contribution to any inter-African force is under consideration.

The Council welcomed the holding of acceptable parliamentary elections on 29 June and 6 July in Albania. It urged Albanians to respect the results and to pursue the process of national reconciliation. The EU is committed to continuing its assistance to Albania, on condition that the Albanian authorities work towards stabilisation, democratisation and economic recovery. Law and order must be restored, while respecting human rights.

The EU will co-operate closely with other international organisations under the co-ordinating framework of the OSCE. They encourage a "common international agenda" on Albania, in co-operation with the Albanian authorities.

The high representative, Carlos Westendorp, reported to the Council on the situation in Bosnia. The Council condemned terrorist acts against SFOR and other international organisations and reiterated the international community's determination to penalise those responsible for failures to comply with the commitments agreed at the meeting of the steering board of the Peace Implementation Council at Sintra on 30 May.

TREASURY

Accounting Systems

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which countries in the EU use (a) the public sector borrowing requirement and (b) similar cash-based accounting systems as their main guide in public finance; and which countries use an accruals-based accounting system. [8194]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Donald Gorrie, dated 25 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), to your recent question on public finance.

The ONS does not hold detailed information on how public finances are measured in other member states.

However, all member states are required to calculate their General Government Financial Deficit (GGFD) in accordance with the European System of Accounts (ESA) second edition. This system applies a mixture of cash and accruals recording, depending on the type of transaction. The system accepts that, for public finances, cash measurement is acceptable for most transactions. GGFD statistics produced by member states are checked by the Statistical Office of the European Communities (Eurostat) to ensure compliance with the ESA.

Most countries use cash measurement for expenditure and taxes in the GGFD. This is the statistic used to monitor performance for Economic and Monetary Union.

For domestic purposes, member states use a variety of different statistics to monitor and control public finances. The ONS does not keep information on this.

District Valuation Offices

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what plans he has to review the proposed programme of closure and merger of district valuation offices; [9178]

(2) what representations he has received regarding the closure and merger of district valuation offices; and if he will make a statement. [9179]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is the responsibility of the Valuation Office. I have asked the acting chief executive to reply.

Letter from Peter Upton to Mr. Peter L. Pike, dated 25 July 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Questions to the Chancellor (refs 9178 and 9179 of 15 July) in which you ask for information concerning the Agency's reorganisation proposals.

The proposals for streamlining the Agency network of local valuation offices were detailed to constituency MPs in a letter of 19 July 1995 from the then Economic Secretary to the Treasury, Mrs Angela Knight. And on 10 May 1996 the VOA's former Chief Executive, John Langford, wrote to you in response to your concerns about the proposed closure of Burnley Valuation Office.

Since this time, the Agency has been piloting its proposed new structure in the Leeds, York and Halifax offices and the results are due to be evaluated shortly.

Dawn Primarolo, the Financial Secretary to the Treasury and Minister with responsibility for the VOA, has already been supplied with a good deal of background material on the restructuring initiative which she will be considering carefully and discussing the proposals with me very shortly. The plans are subject to ongoing discussions with national Trade Union representatives and she will be seeing them too.

At the commencement of the restructuring programme the Agency advised all interested parties, including Members of Parliament and Local Authorities of the proposals.

No final decision on implementing will be made before the views of all concerned have been carefully considered.

I hope you will find the above helpful but if I can assist further then please let me know.

Interest Rates

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the forecasts for the level of United Kingdom interest rates used in the assumptions underlying his recent Budget statement. [9488]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 21 July 1997]: In line with the convention followed by previous Governments, I do not intend to publish the interest rate path underlying the Budget economic forecast.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effects of his recent Budget proposals on the level of future United Kingdom carbon dioxide emissions; and if he will make a statement. [9482]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 21 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Truro and St. Austell, (Mr. Taylor), on 18 July, Official Report, column 376.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of the impact a 1 per cent. annual increase in road fuel duties above the existing 5 per cent. real rate of increase would have on carbon dioxide emissions in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [8912]

Dawn Primarolo: Previously published projections of carbon emissions in the year 2010 incorporate the effects of the 5 per cent. escalator to the year 2000. Real increases of 6 per cent. rather than 5 per cent. in the years to 2000 will reduce projected annual carbon emissions by around 0.2 million tonnes in the year 2010. Application of the 6 per cent. escalator for the life of this Parliament will provide savings of 2.5 million tonnes.

Referendums

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if public money will be provided to campaigners in a referendum on the single currency; what the upper limit will be on permitted spending during such a campaign; and if he will make a statement. [10198]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 22 July 1997]: The Government have not considered the detailed arrangements for any referendum on the European single currency. The Government are committed to holding a referendum if the Government and Parliament decide that the United Kingdom should join the single currency.

Insulation Programme

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money will be allocated per annum for insulation materials under the welfare-to-work environmental task force initiative to enable young people to insulate the homes of pensioners. [8986]

Mrs. Liddell: Some £3,150 million of the proceeds of the windfall tax has been allocated for the new deal for those under 25 who have been unemployed over six months. The environmental task force is one of four options for young people. The division of expenditure between these options will depend on the choices made by young people in consultation with designated case workers and in the light of the opportunities available in each of the four options in that area. No overall expenditure has been specifically earmarked for insulation materials under the environmental task force.

Private Schools (Tax Relief)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the estimated cost to the Exchequer of tax relief for the charitable status of private schools (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in Wales in the last year for which figures are available. [10659]

Dawn Primarolo: I regret that this information is not available.

Pensioners (Fuel Costs)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the impact on state pensioners' fuel bills of the reduction in VAT on domestic fuel; and if he will make a statement. [7663]

Dawn Primarolo: The average household would save £18 per year from a reduction in VAT on domestic fuel and power from 8 to 5 per cent. Pensioners will benefit most in proportion to income.

Fuel

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of changes in the rate of excise on unleaded petrol on the use of unleaded petrol by those drivers whose cars are able to use either four-star or unleaded petrol. [10252]

Dawn Primarolo: It is not possible to calculate from the information available the impact of the changes in the rate of excise duty on unleaded petrol on those drivers who may choose whether to use four-star or unleaded petrol.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the financial impact to the Exchequer of reducing the differential between the rate of excise on unleaded fuel and four-star fuel by 1p per litre and the rate of excise on city diesel by 1p per litre. [10255]

Dawn Primarolo: Using the hon. Member's assumption, the impact of increasing the duty rates on unleaded petrol and diesel by 1p per litre would yield approximately £185 million and £165 million in 1998 and 1999 respectively. Costings take account of the effects on behaviour where they are likely to have a significant effect on the yield and any consequential changes in receipts from related taxes including VAT and are measured against a non-indexed base. City diesel, is currently taxed at the same rate as ordinary diesel but is awaiting Royal Assent to the Finance Bill.

Central Gilts Settlement System

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to make the provision of services to sponsored members in the updated central gilts settlement system an authorisable activity under the Financial Services Act 1986. [11143]

Mrs. Liddell: When the House resumes in October, Her Majesty's Treasury will lay a statutory instrument extending the activities requiring authorisation under the Financial Services Act 1986 so as to cover the sending of dematerialised instructions on behalf of third parties and certain related activities to the central gilts office service.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the implications of the removal of local authority self-financed expenditure from the control total for meeting (a) the Maastricht criteria, (b) the golden rule and (c) the control of public finance; [8021]

(2) if he will remove local authority self-financed expenditure from the control total. [7927]

Mr. Darling: The Government have already announced their plans for 1997–98 and 1998–99, in which local authority self-financed expenditure remains in the control total.

Special Advisers

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his policy on the appointment of special advisers to Her Majesty's Treasury. [1598]

Mrs. Liddell [pursuant to her reply, 12 June 1997, c. 1276]: A model contract of employment and an outline of the pay system for special advisers, which were attached to the Prime Minister's minute of 19 May to Cabinet colleagues, have been placed in the Library of the House. The Prime Minister's minute was an internal Government document and it would not be appropriate to disclose its contents.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Low Pay Commission

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement concerning the appointment of members to serve on the Low Pay Commission. [11225]

Mrs. Beckett: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has appointed the following individuals to serve on the Low Pay Commission which will advise the Government on the rate at which the national minimum wage might be set:

David Metcalf: Professor of Economics at the London School of Economics

Stephanie Monk: Director of Human resources for the Granada Group

Paul Gates: General Secretary of the Knitwear, Footwear and Apparel Trades Union (KFAT)

John Cridland: Director of Human Resources Policy for the CBI

Rita Donaghy: Member of the National Executive Council of UNISON

Lawrence Dewar: Chief Executive of the Scottish Grocers' Federation

Bill Callaghan: Head of the TUC Economic and Social Affairs Department

William Brown: Professor of Industrial Relations, Cambridge University

Professor George Bain will chair the commission.

The national minimum wage is one of the Government's top priorities and for that reason we have moved quickly to put the commission in place. We advertised nationally for applications to the commission and were gratified by the large response and the high quality of the candidates. I am confident that, with such a high-quality membership, the commission will be able to go about its work effectively and successfully.

Hawk Aircraft

Mr. Key: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she was first notified that licences had already been issued for the continued sale of Hawk jets to Indonesia. [10393]

Mrs. Roche: Ministers were informed on 7 July 1997 that the licences granted in November 1996 for the export of 16 Hawk aircraft and equipment to Indonesia represented the second phase of Hawk sales to Indonesia agreed in principle in 1993.

Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe

Mr. Paterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if she will require the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe to publish a regular report on changes in his shareholdings; [10071]

(2) what shareholdings the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness Europe holds. [10070]

Mrs. Beckett: Apart from his holding in BP, which the Minister has undertaken not to trade before 1 January 1998, he can no longer give a report of his shareholdings, or changes in them, since they have been placed in a blind trust. It would breach the protection against conflicts of interest the trust provides to ask the manager of the trust to publish the composition of the portfolio.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what assessment she has made of the effect of gas liberalisation on the competitive position of gas companies relative to other energy companies; [10322]

(2) what assessment she has made of the effect of gas liberalisation on the share price of BP. [10323]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answers 24 July 1997]: The Government's policy is to press for the completion of the single market in energy, which will offer opportunities for all energy companies, and bring benefits for all of Europe's energy consumers.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if those matters relating to (a) gas liberalisation, (b) state aids policy and (c) biotechnological inventions currently subject to proposals in the European Community under evaluation by Her Majesty's Government have a bearing on BP. [9653]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 21 July 1997]: Some aspects of these matters or cases—for example, concerning state aids to BP's direct competitors—can have a direct or particular bearing on BP. Arrangements are in place to ensure that no conflicts of interest arise for the Ministers dealing with these matters as all others.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if a private secretary from the DTI was present at the three meetings the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness has held with BP directors since becoming a Minister; what minutes were taken; and if she will publish them. [10492]

Mrs. Beckett: No. These meetings were related to the handover of Lord Simon's responsibilities at BP or to allow him to say farewell to his colleagues. It would have been wholly inappropriate for the DTI to be represented at such occasions, although the right hon. Member might have enjoyed the minutes of his farewell party.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in what circumstances the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe is able to handle matters relating to tax in Brussels. [10427]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 24 July 1997]: The Minister is not normally involved in EU Council negotiations on tax. Like other Ministers, he could present Her Majesty's Government's position if necessary, unless there were a conflict of interest.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe will be handling indirect tax and corporate tax proposals under the action plan for the single market in Europe. [10016]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 23 July 1997]: The Minister is not normally involved in EU Council negotiations on tax. Like other Ministers, he could present Her Majesty's Government's position if necessary, unless there were a conflict of interest.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe will be handling negotiations on pension funds in Europe under the action plan for the single market. [9788]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 21 July 1997]: The Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe attends the Internal Market Council. Pension funds will be dealt with in ECOFIN, which he does not attend. However, he will continue to play a role in all aspects of the single market, subject to the arrangements which are in place to ensure that no conflicts of interest can arise.

Mr. David Heath: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the official engagements of the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe for the month of July. [9990]

Mrs. Beckett: The Minister has a wide range of engagements both at the DTI and the Treasury in fulfilment of his role as Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe.

Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs stopped writing a column for the travel trade press; and on whose instructions. [10461]

Mrs. Beckett: My hon. Friend the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs wrote a fortnightly column for a leading travel newspaper, Travel Weekly from 15 September 1993 until 31 April 1997. The paper is read primarily by Britain's leading travel agents and tour operators.

Since 5 May, any contributions to Travel Weekly, or any other travel trade press have been on an occasional and entirely unpaid basis, in accordance with the guidance in paragraphs 94–95 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers".

Engineering Industry

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the figures for (a) export orders and (b) numbers of firms operating at a satisfactory rate in the engineering sector in each of the last 15 months. [10325]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 24 July 1997]: Figures for export orders on hand at the end of each of the last 15 months are as shown in the table:

	Not seasonally adjusted £ million
March 1996	10,373
April 1996	10,412
May 1996	10,101
June 1996	9,695
July 1996	9,539
August 1996	9,908
September 1996	9,909
October 1996	9,711
November 1996	9,809
December 1996	9,358
January 1997	9,346
February 1997	9,443
March 1997	9,172
April 1997	9,441
May 1997	9,308

Figures on the numbers of firms operating at a satisfactory rate in the engineering sector are not available from official statistics.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she plans to take to increase the levels of planned investment in the engineering industry. [10321]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 24 July 1997]: My agenda for pursuing competitiveness through partnership, starting with the competitiveness summit on 23 July, includes encouraging investment in industry, including the engineering industry. Engineering investment will also be encouraged by my policies for promoting technology transfer in the sector and encouraging good supply chain links. I welcome the actions of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor in laying the foundations for economic stability and introducing appropriate tax changes in the Budget, which will also improve the climate for investment.

Wind Energy

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the Government's policy towards the use of wind energy. [9596]

Mr. Battle: Wind Energy is a vital element of sustainable development and has the potential to make an important contribution to our new and strong drive to develop renewable sources of energy. I expect development of wind energy to lead to the creation of new jobs and access to a worldwide market for renewable energy equipment estimated by the World Energy Council to grow to £50 billion per annum by 2005.

Astronomy

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations the Minister for Science, Energy and Industry received before 14 July from the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan) concerning astronomy in the United Kingdom and the royal observatories. [10266]

Mr. Battle: It is for hon. Members to publicise their approaches to me, should they wish to do so.

Trade Missions

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what trade missions are planned for the next 12 months by (a) the Minister for Trade, (b) members of the royal family, (c) the chairman of the British Overseas Trade Board and (d) other departmental Ministers. [9454]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 July 1997]: The following trade missions are planned at present. Details of visit programmes and accompanying business delegations have yet to be finalised.

(a) Lord Clinton-Davis—Minister for Trade

September 1997: Chile/Argentina

September 1997: Korea/Japan

October 1997: Qatar and possibly Saudi Arabia/Yemen

December 1997: Poland/Czech Republic/Hungary

(b) Members of the Royal Family

The royal family's extensive programme of overseas visits plays an important part in the promotion of British commercial as well as other interests. The following visits specifically for trade promotions are planned during the next 12 months.

HRH The Duke of Kent—Vice Chairman of the British Overseas Trade Board

October 1997: Korea

April 1998: India

September 1998: Colombia/Peru/Bolivia

HRH The Duke of Gloucester

September 1997: Yemen (with British Consultants Bureau)

(c) Sir Martin Laing—Chairman of the British Overseas Trade Board

September 1997: Philippines

October 1997: Peru

November 1997: Egypt

(d) Other Departmental Ministers

Margaret Beckett—President of the Board of Trade

November: 1997: Australia/India

January 1998: China/Pakistan

John Battle—Minister for Science, Energy and Industry

November 1997: Angola/Botswana (provisional)

Barbara Roche—Under-Secretary of State for Small Firms, Trade and Industry

April 1998: Mauritius

Space School

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Science Minister will visit the 17th session of the Space school currently being held at Brunel university; and if he will make a statement. [10527]

Mrs. Roche: Regrettably, I am unable to visit this year's Space school. However, I welcome efforts to explain the importance of space science to young people, and compliment the Space school on developing innovative ways to further their interest in science.

Travel Industry

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his Department's policy towards vertical integration in the travel industry; and if he will make a statement. [10530]

Mrs. Beckett: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the right hon. Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood) on 14 July, Official Report, column 68.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 298

SESSION 1997–98

14th July—25th July 1997

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
